

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

. FROM THE

PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION.

MY earliest interest in the Private Orations may be said to date from the time when it was my privilege as an undergraduate to attend, in the year 1865, a course of lectures by my friend Mr Moss, then Fellow and Lecturer of St John's College, and now Head-Master of Shrewsbury School. His selections included two of the six speeches edited in the present volume, the Nicostratus and the Conon; but, as the notes taken down from his lectures were too scanty to form even the basis of any attempt at constructing a complete edition, my commentary on those speeches has been mainly the result of independent reading and research, though I gladly acknowledge the help that is due to his soundness of judgment on several points on which I have consulted him while revising my notes on the Conon. In the case of the Nicostratus, when my own commentary was nearly ready for the press, I had the further advantage of attending in the spring of 1874 some of Dr Kennedy's professorial lectures on the Private Orations. From the excellent translation of his brother Mr Charles Rann Kennedy I have here and there quoted a few extracts; and if I have now and then drawn attention to an apparently erroneous interpretation, I have done so with the consciousness that in each case it is only a trifling blemish in what is nearly perfect of its kind. Similarly, several questionable explanations, retained even in the sixth edition of Liddell and Scott's Lexicon, have been duly pointed out in the course of my commentary, as it is only thus that a labourer in a limited field can offer any acknowledgement of his large indebtedness to their labours¹. The lexicography of Demosthenes cannot indeed be said to be at present in a completely satisfactory condition, as general lexicons have still to rely in a great measure on Reiske's Index Graecitatis, which, with the portion of his opus magnum including his notes on the speeches in this volume, was posthumously published exactly a century ago².

The volume opens with a speech on behalf of Phormion, in bar of a claim on the part of Apollodorus for the recovery of capital alleged to have been transferred to Phormion by Pasion, the father of Apollodorus. This is followed by two on behalf of Phormion's opponent Apollodorus, charging with false witness one of the deponents called on Phormion's side in the previous trial. These three speeches, though not actually delivered in the same lawsuit, virtually represent the arguments of the two opposite sides, and a comparison of their conflicting statements has an interest similar in kind, though different in degree, to that derived from reading the longer and more important orations of Demosthenes, On the Embassy and On the Crown, in contrast with those of his great rival

² Since the above was written the Index Demosthenicus of S. Preuss has been published by Teubner, 1895.

Aeschines. The orations of Antiphon, the earliest of the Attic Orators, include indeed four sets of ingenious speeches written for the prosecution and the defence in cases of homicide, but his cases are merely imaginary, and the orations are intended as rhetorical exercises alone. The first three selections in this volume supply us with the only instance in all the remains of Attic oratory, where the legal issues raised on both sides in a suit of purely private interest, lie before us as they were actually presented to an Athenian tribunal. Whether Demosthenes actually wrote for both sides is a vexed question, briefly discussed in the course of the Introduction; it is a question that has provoked a large number of dissertations, the titles of which I have recorded on a page devoted to a conspectus of the literature of the subject up to the present date. But the volume now published, while it happens to be the first English commentary on any of the selections included in it, is also the first attempt either in England or elsewhere to put together an edition of all these three speeches in their connexion with one another¹. As compared with the work demanded by the second half of this volume, where I have been conscious of moving more freely over ground familiarised by more frequent reading of that portion with private pupils between 1867 and 1870, and for public lectures at a later date, the task of writing the first half has proved a somewhat tedious one, owing partly to the necessity of constantly keeping in view all the nine speeches in which Phormion's opponent, Apollodorus, is more or less directly concerned, and of forming an opinion on the numerous points of literary criticism and chronological detail involved in the controversy on the authorship of those orations.

Those who, after finishing the pro Phormione, do not care to study minutely the whole of the two speeches against Stephanus, ought, at the very least, to examine the vigorous attack on Phormion which extends from § 71 to § 82 of the first of those two speeches. They should also endeavour to obtain a connected view of the argument by reading consecutively the italicised abstracts inserted at suitable intervals in the course of the commentary. With the help of these abstracts the general reader, the barrister, for instance, who has not remembered all the Greek of his younger days, may perhaps, if tempted to dip into these pages, form some opinion of his own on the forensic oratory of Athens; but my more immediate object in this part of my work has been to obviate any occasion for unduly burdening the notes with those literal renderings which are always welcome to students of the less industrious sort, by supplying instead either a free paraphrase or a condensed summary, as the occasion requires.

The latter half of the volume includes the Nicostratus, which was delivered by the same speaker as the two orations against Stephanus, namely by Apollodorus, and also the Conon, which is certainly one of the most celebrated of the minor speeches of Demosthenes. To these selections, both of which throw much light on the social life of Athens, I have added the Callicles, which, though less well known than the others, will be found one of the pleasantest, while it happens to be the shortest, of all the Private Orations.

The first volume of the Select Private Orations includes the speeches contra Phormionem (Or. 34), Lacritum (35), Pantaenetum (37), Boeotum de nomine (39), Boeotum de dote (40), and Dionysodorum (56). In the preface to that volume it has been already explained that the two volumes are a joint edition on the part of Mr Paley and myself, and I may here repeat that while Mr Paley is mainly responsible for the first volume, I am similarly responsible for the whole of the Introduction and for nearly all the notes of the second, though I have had the advantage of receiving from him a careful revision of all the proof-sheets of my commentary, and a large number of supplementary annotations, many of which have been incorporated with my own, and duly acknowledged by being placed in square brackets and followed by his initial.

For the second edition of this volume, the work has been thoroughly revised, and the suggestions with which I have been favoured by scholars who have had occasion to use it, have been carefully considered and in many cases adopted. Some redundant passages have been removed, and room has been found for many additional notes and references. Account has also been taken of the recent literature of the subject, and particularly of the volume on Demosthenes in the important work of Professor F. Blass, entitled die Attische Beredsamkeit. Lastly, the manuscripts of Demosthenes in the Paris Library have been specially examined by me during the early part of the present year, and the readings ascribed to them in the former edition have been verified and corrected accordingly.

October, 1886.

For the third edition, the text as well as the notes has been carefully revised. The text has been accommodated to that of Dindorf as edited by Blass in 1889; and the points in which the revised text differs from that of Dindorf's own edition, together with the reasons for such difference, have been indicated in the critical notes. In the explanatory notes I have added references to Aristotle's Constitution of Athens, and to the recent literature of the speeches included in the present volume. The work to which I have been most indebted is G. Huettner's valuable monograph on the first speech against Stephanus, published in 1895. The comparison of the language of that speech with that of the undoubtedly genuine speeches is there carried still further than I had occasion to carry it in my former edition. The result of this comparison is to give strong support to the view that the speech in question was really the work of Demosthenes.

EXPLANATION OF THE SYMBOLS USED IN THIS EDITION IN RECORDING VARIOUS READINGS.

As a general rule, wherever the text (that of W. Dindorf's fourth Edition, as revised by Blass in 1889) agrees with that of the Zürich editors, I have not thought it necessary to notice any variations in the mss. Where Dindorf differs from the Zürich editors, the difference is in most cases due to the greater weight given by the latter to the readings of the Paris ms S.

Z stands for the Zürich text of Demosthenes as printed by J. G. Baiter and H. Sauppe in their excellent edition of the Oratores Attici, in one volume (1850).

'Bekker st.' is Bekker's stereotyped edition published at Leipzig in 1854. The readings adopted in his Berlin ed. 1824 have been occasionally recorded. When Dindorf differs from the Zürich editors, he generally agrees with Bekker. When a note begins with Bekk., it is meant that Dindorf's text is supported by Bekker's Berlin and Leipzig editions; then, after a slight space, follows the reading of the Zürich editors (Z) with the mss supporting it, introduced by the word cum.

The mss thus quoted by the Zürich editors are as follows:

S (or Σ) in the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris (No. 2934), on parchment; of century X. "Primæ quidem classis unus superest Parisinus S" Dindorf, praef. ed. Oxon. p. vi. This is admitted on all hands to be the best ms, and its readings are very often accepted by Bekker and still more frequently by the Zürich editors. A careful description of it was published by Voemel (Σ codicis Demosthenici conditio describitur) in 1853. A facsimile of the whole was published in 1893, Paris (Leroux). For a protest against excessive deference to its authority, see the Preface of Shilleto's fourth edition of the De falsa legatione, pp. vii, viii, xiv. By examining the ms I have ascertained that the readings assigned to it in the former edition, on the authority of the apparatus criticus of the Zürich editors, are wrong in the following instances, in Or. 45 § 87, the ms has καὶ παράδειγμα, not παράδειγμα; in 46 § 6 ἐν (not ἐν τῇ) γραμματεῖ; in 46 § 12 ἐξείναι ἐπ' ἀνδρῶν (not ἐπ' ἀνδρῶν ἐξείναι) θεῖναι; and in 55 § 5 it has ὅμιν, not ἡμῖν. In the last instance, the same mistake has found its way into the critical notes of Dindorf's Oxford ed.

F. Codex Marcianus (No. 416), in the Library of St Mark's at Venice, on parchment; of century XI. The best ms of the second group or family (Dindorf), but closely followed by the Codex Bavaricus (B).

Q (or Φ). In the same Library (No. 418), on parchment; of century XI.

k. In the Bibliothèque Nationale Paris (No. 2998), on cotton paper (bombycinus), forma quadrata; of century XIV. Includes Or. 54 (κατὰ Κόωνος).

r. In the same Library (No. 2936), on parchment forma maxima; of century XIII.

A (or A¹). Augustanus primus, formerly at Augsburg (Augusta Vindelicorum), now at Munich (No. 485), on parchment, paene quadratus; of century XI (according to Dindorf), or XII (according to the Zürich edition).

B. Bavaricus, now at Munich (No. 85), on cotton-paper (bombycinus) forma maxima; of century XIII.

γρ. A contraction for γράφεται, used in the mss themselves to introduce the marginal citation of a various reading.

8 χαλκοῖ = 1 ὀβολός	1·62d	1·8d
6 ὀβολοί = 1 δραχμή	9·72d*	8d†
100 δραχμαί = 1 μνᾶ	£4 1s	£3 6s 8d
60 μναὶ = 1 τάλαντον	£243	£200

Like the τάλαντον of 6000 δραχμαί, the μνᾶ was not an actual coin but only a term used in keeping accounts to denote a sum of 100 δραχμαί.

* This is the equivalent given in Hussey's Ancient Weights and Money, pp. 47, 48, followed in the second edition of Smith's Dictionary of Greek and Roman Antiquities, s. v. DRACHMA. It assumes that an Attic drachma contains only 65·4 grains Troy of pure silver. As a shilling contains 80·7 grains of pure silver; a drachma is reckoned as $\frac{65\cdot4}{80\cdot7}$ of a shilling, or 9·72 pence.

† This is the equivalent proposed in Professor W. W. Goodwin's article on the Value of the Attic Talent in Modern Money in the Transactions of the American Philological Association 1885, xvi, p. 117—9. It has been ascertained that the Athenians coined their silver pure, and the best specimens of Attic coinage prove the weight of the drachma to be 67·38+ grains troy of pure silver. The average price of pure silver for the last quarter of a century having been 57 pence per ounce of 480 grains, it follows that the amount of silver in a drachma is worth $\frac{67\cdot38}{480}$ of 57 pence = 8·001375 pence.

In the third edition of Smith's Dictionary, ii p. 1004, ed. 1890, the amount of silver in a drachma is similarly reckoned as worth 8½d., silver being taken at 5s. an ounce troy. But its value, 'if compared with English coined silver, would be much higher: e. g. the shilling weighs 87·27 gr., and contains only about 80 gr. of pure silver. The drachma, of 67·5 gr. pure, is obviously more than ¾rds of this. For practical purposes it is perhaps better to reckon the drachma as worth about a French franc (9½d.), the mina £4.'

N.B. Neither of the above estimates takes account of the different purchasing powers of silver in ancient and modern times.

ΥΠΕΡ ΦΟΡΜΙΩΝΟΣ.

IN the early part of the fourth century B.C. there was a noted man of business at Athens, named Pasion. He was originally a slave in the employment of a firm of bankers, but by his industry and integrity he won the confidence of his employers, Antisthenes and Archestratus, and was rewarded by receiving his liberty from the latter and by succeeding both of them in their business¹. In the Trapeziticus of Isocrates, he appears as defendant in a suit brought by the son of a trusted minister of Satyrus, prince of Pontus, and is charged, whether rightly or wrongly, with appropriating a sum of money deposited with him by the plaintiff, with destroying documents detrimental to his own interests, and with other sharp practice of a somewhat unscrupulous character. To examine the justice of these charges is no part of our present duty, nor indeed have we the data for arriving at any decisive result; suffice it to say that, in the language of his very opponent in that action, he is described as one of those bankers who enjoyed a wide connexion and had the management of large sums of money, and whose position as men of business had won them a general confidence¹. The speech composed by Isocrates probably belongs to the year B.C. 394, when Pasion, though no longer a slave, was only a resident alien (μέτοικος)²; at a subsequent date, on rising to the privileged position of enjoying as a denizen (ισοτελής) such civic rights as were not of an expressly political nature, he acquired some property in land, and distinguished himself by his public spirit, on one occasion in particular presenting the State with a thousand shields from his own manufactory, and five triremes equipped at his own expense³. In recognition of these services, Athens rewarded him with the rights of her citizenship⁴.

Among those who had business relations with him we find Athenians of high position like Timotheus, the celebrated general⁵, and Demosthenes, the father of the orator⁶; his bank in the Peiraeus enjoyed, in the Euxine and elsewhere, a credit co-extensive with the commerce of Attica: even eight years after his death, Apollodorus, of whom we shall hear more anon, had only to declare himself as Pasion's son to be at once enabled to raise a loan in a foreign land⁷; and in later ages, in the imaginary letters of Alciphron, the Atticist who in the latter part of the second century of our era attempted to revive the memories of the times of Menander, we find the vulgar money-lender contrasted with a banker of blameless reputation, who bears the appropriate name of Pasion¹.

Pasion, in his old age, finding his eyesight failing him, and being only able to walk with difficulty up to Athens from his bank in the Peiraeus², four or five miles distant, transferred his business, including not only his bank but also his shield-manufactory, on lease to his managing clerk Phormion³, who, like his employer, was himself originally a slave⁴, and obtained his freedom as the reward of honest service⁵. We read of him as a generous and energetic man of business, and his skilful management is said to have been the very saving of the property of his former master⁶. From the nature of the case, as well as from certain chronological considerations, it may be concluded that the lease to Phormion belongs to a date before, but not long before, Pasion's death in B.C. 370⁷. In B.C. 372, we find the latter still managing his business on his own account⁸, and we may therefore fix on B.C. 371 as the probable date of the lease. Pasion left behind him a widow, Archippe by name⁹, and two sons by her, the elder, Apollodorus, who was four-and-twenty years old at his father's death¹⁰, and the younger, Pasicles, who came of age eight years after (namely, in B.C. 362)¹¹. In his will he provided that his widow should be married to Phormion, with a dowry of two talents, a dwelling-house valued at one hundred minae, maid-servants, gold ornaments and all that formerly belonged to his wife¹. By this will, Phormion also became one of the guardians to Pasion's younger son, Pasicles. He was to continue lessee of the bank and shield-manufactory until Pasicles came of age, and it was the father's wish that until that time the property should remain undivided. Owing, however, to the extravagance of the elder son, the guardians, acting in the interest of their ward, determined on a partition of all the property, with the exception of the bank and shield-manufactory leased to Phormion, half the rent of which was for the present paid to Apollodorus, and half reserved for Pasicles, the minor².

Apollodorus was at Athens in B.C. 370 and appears to have been present at his father's death-bed³, and some time after this, he was abroad in the public service as trierarch, probably in the year B.C. 368⁴. It was during his absence that, in accordance with his father's will, his mother was married to Phormion; the son, on his return home, resented this arrangement, and as the courts were not open at that time for private lawsuits, he took steps to bring a public indictment against Phormion, for criminal outrage on his mother (γραφὴ ὕβρεως). However, a reconciliation was brought about and the charge was not pressed⁵.

In B.C. 362, when Pasicles came of age, his guardians gave an account of their trust, which was acknowledged as correct, and Phormion's lease of the bank and manufactory terminated with a discharge given him on the part of Apollodorus from all liabilities under the lease. The elder brother then, having the prior choice, took the manufactory, leaving the banking business to his younger brother¹. For a short time the brothers appear to have superintended their property in person; but not long after, possibly a year subsequent² to the partition, a new lease of the bank and the manufactory was granted to certain persons, at a rent which was the same as that which had been paid by Phormion³, namely, 2 talents and 40 minae⁴, out of which one talent⁵ was due to Apollodorus for the manufactory, and the remainder to Pasicles for the bank. This second lease was granted not by Pasicles alone, but by Apollodorus acting in conjunction with his younger brother.

Phormion, meanwhile, being quit of his trust as guardian, and of his lease of the bank and manufactory, established a banking business on his own account, and, like his former master, Pasion, obtained a recognition of the general esteem in which he was held, by being presented with the citizenship. The date of this event was B.C. 361⁶. In the year B.C. 360, after a protracted service as trierarch in the Northern Aegean and the neigh-

² The Rev. A. Wright, Fellow and Lecturer of Queens' College, has favoured me with some criticisms questioning the probability of any interval having elapsed between the two leases. 'Apollodorus,' he observes, 'was not a man of business habits: Pasicles was a mere lad, not likely to undertake the management of a bank, even with the most confidential clerk. I can find nothing to indicate that they did thus hold the property except ὅστερον in § 12 which is hardly decisive, and can scarcely be maintained in face of the direct evidence the other way in § 37. It is more probable (and this will solve the further difficulty started in the note on § 12 μισθῶν ἐτέροις), that Apollodorus, knowing Phormion's lease to be expiring, looked out for some other lessees, and entered into an engagement for a lease with Xenon &c. some months before the lease expired. Xenon would enter on the property as soon as Phormion quitted it, whereas some days might pass before the νομή was completed. And so Phormion may actually have acted as lessor.'

bouring waters, Apollodorus returned to Athens to find his mother at death's door. She died six days after; but not before she had seen and recognised her son, though according to his own account she was unable to make such provision for him as she had intended¹.

The mother's death was the signal for a fresh outbreak of the differences between Apollodorus and his step-father Phormion. The step-son put in a claim for 3000 drachmae, which was submitted to arbitrators, who established the claim and induced Phormion for quietness' sake to pay it to Apollodorus. The latter then gave Phormion a second release from all claims².

Phormion, however, had not yet seen the last of his litigious step-son; the latter, after numerous lawsuits with his father's debtors, in which he succeeded in recovering no less than 20 talents³, was at last prompted, by pecuniary exigencies due to his extravagance, and by feelings of envy at Phormion's prosperity, to put in a claim about twenty years after the father's death for another sum of 20 talents, alleged to have been transferred to Phormion by the father as part of the working capital (ἀφορμή) of the business⁴.

The defendant, as we learn from the speech pro Phormione, expected that Apollodorus' contention, that Phormion must have received such capital, would be supported by presumptive proofs alone. He would argue that, without such a fund, it was incredible that Phor-

⁴ Why twenty talents were claimed does not appear, but we may conjecture that that amount arose out of the eleven talents mentioned in Or. 36

§ 11, with the addition of interest. Phormion's lease lasted for 8 years; 11 talents, at say 10 per cent. simple interest (not an uncommon rate at Athens), would with the interest amount to exactly 20 talents in 8 years (and a fraction of a year over, $\frac{1}{11}$).

mion, who was merely a liberated slave, should have managed the business and risen to opulence, while he himself, a rich man's son, had been reduced to penury (§ 43). To give stronger proof than these a priori probabilities had been made impossible, he would assert, by Phormion's having induced his wife to destroy Pasion's papers (§ 18); he would also denounce the lease and the will as forgeries, and would make out that it was only while Phormion promised him a high rent, that he kept silence on his claim, but as he had not fulfilled these promises, he was compelled to bring the case before the court (§ 33).

The arguments here anticipated by the defendant appear again in the first speech against Stephanus (Or. 45), a speech arising out of the present lawsuit. The case came in the first instance before an arbitrator, Teisias¹ by name, but was left undecided by him, and was accordingly brought before a public tribunal. The writer of the Greek argument, generally supposed to be Libanius, calls the suit a δίκη ἀφορμῆς, though it has been doubted whether there is any ancient authority for the existence of such a suit under that designation². However, the phrase ἀφορμὴν ἐγκαλεῖν occurs in the speech itself (§ 12), in reference to the plaintiff's claim to the capital of the bank.

To meet this claim, Phormion, instead of waiting for the plaintiff to bring his case before the court and then confronting his opponent with a direct denial and joining issue on the merits, preferred putting in a special plea in bar of action, a plea technically known in Greek law as a παράγραφη, showing cause on the part of the defendant why the case should not be allowed to come on for trial at all. The two pleas urged on the defendant's behalf are (1) that the plaintiff had given him a discharge from the original lease of the bank and manufactory, and also a second discharge from a subsequent claim settled by arbitration (§§ 23—25); (2) that the plaintiff's suit contravened the statute of limitations, in which the term of five years was fixed as a sufficient time for injured parties to recover their dues, whereas the plaintiff was putting in a claim after the lapse of more than twenty years from the date of the lease (§ 26). To maintain these pleas is the object of the speech pro Phormione, though it is only a small portion of it that is directly concerned with them, such technical pleadings being naturally unpopular with juries, who regarded them as mere makeshifts, to gain time and evade the ends of justice¹. Hence a large part of the speech is devoted to arguing on the case itself, thus proving that the defendant's resort to special pleading was not due to any fear of meeting the plaintiff on the main issue. All this was of course irrelevant to the real question before the court, and counsel would hardly be permitted by any judge now-a-days to travel so widely out of the 'record.' In such a case, the defendant spoke first²; thus, while he

² See note on Or. 36 Arg. line 25 ad fin. The writer of the life of Demosthenes in the Orations on the Crown published by the Clarendon Press appears to have overlooked this in stating: 'it is clear that in the speech to which Demosthenes, in behalf of Phormion, composed a reply, Apollodorus had dwelt much on the fact of Phormion having been his father's slave' (p. xxxiii). Apollodorus did not address the court at all; he could not speak before the case, for the special plea had been opened on the side of the defendant, and the jury would not listen to him after.

was under the slight disadvantage of the onus probandi, he had on the other hand the benefit of the first hearing, and might at once produce a favourable impression of the strength of his case, which would put a stop to further litigation.

Phormion, being of foreign extraction and unpractised in public speaking, does not address the court in person (§ 1); his friends speak in his stead, and the case is opened on his behalf in an oration composed but almost certainly not spoken by Demosthenes¹, which forms the first of the selections included in the present volume².

The speech contains several notes of time which approximately determine the date of its delivery. In § 26 we are told that 'more than twenty years' have elapsed since the lease granted by Pasion; in § 19 we find that 'eighteen years' have passed since the partition of the property effected by the guardians in consequence of the extravagance of Apollodorus; and in § 38 the same period is described in general terms as 'about twenty years.' Pasion died in B.C. 370 and the above indications point to the year B.C. 350 as the probable date of the speech. As we have already observed, the lease would be granted to Phormion before B.C. 370, and

p. 14, who agrees with A. Schaefer, Dem. u. s. Zeit., p. 169.

² It is unnecessary in this place to give a detailed account of the speech itself, as its contents are analysed in the italicised abstracts printed at convenient intervals in the course of the commentary. The reader who desires a general view of the drift of the argument may do well to read all the abstracts consecutively before settling down to the perusal of the Greek.

probably after B.C. 372, i.e. in B.C. 371. Thus 21 years would have passed since the grant of the lease. At first sight the term of eighteen years above mentioned might seem to point to B.C. 352¹, but it appears certain that the partition of property was not effected immediately after the death of Pasion. Some allowance must be made for the time during which the extravagance of Apollodorus was running its course (§ 8), before the guardians came to the conclusion that a partition of the property was inevitable; and the term of eighteen years is reckoned, it will be observed, not from the death of Pasion but from the division of his estate.

Again, the speech of Apollodorus against Nicostratus, § 13, shews that after his return from his Sicilian trierarchy which on independent grounds may be placed in B.C. 368, he was not yet in possession of his share of the estate. We find that he was compelled to raise money on the security of his house and to pledge some of his plate; we may therefore conclude that the partition was not earlier than B.C. 368, and the 'eighteen years' bring us once more to B.C. 350 as the date of the speech.

Further, the lease of Phormion lasted eight, that of the subsequent lessees, ten years; but it would be far from correct to assume that this points to the lapse of only eighteen years from the death of Pasion to the delivery of the speech, and consequently to B.C. 352 for the date of the latter; for (1) the previous lease began before the death of Pasion, (2) the subsequent lease does not appear to have followed immediately on the expiration of the first lease², and (3) the second lease had terminated before the date of the speech¹. The date B.C. 352, besides being open to the objection that the phrase 'more than twenty years' has to be explained away as a round number, in other words as equivalent to less than twenty years, only just allows time for the two leases, with no margin over, either for the interval between the first and second, or for the further interval after the second; while B.C. 350 is consistent with both these data².

The only difficulty in our accepting this date arises from the reference to Callippus in § 53, as then alive in Sicily. Now Callippus left that island for Rhegium in the spring of B.C. 350 at the latest, and was killed in the same year. This would reduce us to the alternative of either supposing that the news of these events had not yet reached Athens, or resorting to the heroic remedy of striking out the words as spurious³. Otherwise, it may be worth while to suggest as the date the latter part of B.C. 351; this would involve our reckoning the term of 'more than twenty years' from the beginning of B.C. 371 to the end of B.C. 351 inclusive, and similarly the eighteen years from the partition would be counted inclusively from B.C. 368 to B.C. 351.

The speech is undoubtedly the genuine work of Demosthenes; this is proved not only by the testimony of Aeschines¹ but by the frequent quotations of ancient lexicographers and grammarians, and the internal evidence is equally conclusive. It holds a high place in his Private Orations; among the merits of its earlier portions may be noticed the closeness of its reasoning and the lucid arrangement of its argument, while its later portions are rendered interesting by the strong invective of the personal attack on the plaintiff and the dignified tone of the appeal to the court in favour of the defendant. All the points are supported by evidence, and except where the public services of the defendant are apparently unduly depreciated², there is every evidence of fairness on the part of the speaker. It is a forcible oration, in which we clearly recognise the characteristic feature that gives Demosthenes the superiority over Lysias, the great master of clear narration, and over his own instructor Isaeus, the best lawyer of all the Attic orators, namely, the ethical warmth of colouring, by which the dullest details are lit up with a fresh life and interest³. In the words of an able French critic, 'de tous les plaidoyers civils de Démosthène, le plus beau peut-être, celui où l'orateur a mis le plus d'art et de véhémence, c'est le discours qu'il a composé pour le banquier Phormion.' He calls it elsewhere, *un chef-d'œuvre dans son genre*⁴. Professor Jebb has with equal truth touched upon 'the moral dignity of the defence for Phormio'.⁵ The proemium in particular is eulogised as follows in Mr W. H. Kirk's *Demosthenic Style in the Private Orations*⁶:—

This compact little masterpiece fulfils indeed all conventional purposes by exciting goodwill for one party, prejudice against the other, and defining the points to be proved; but there is no conventionality in the exquisitely felicitous phrasing;...the simple gravity of the opening words foreshadows the fine impersonal dignity which the advocate maintains throughout; the warmth and rapidity of the sentence ὅσα γὰρ—συκοφαντεῖ, with its unusual and startling anacoluthon, breathes the spirit of all that ardent vituperation and laudation to which so much of the speech is devoted; and the final sentence, ἐξ ἀρχῆς—ἀκούσαντες, while constituting the formal transition to the narrative, sums up with noteworthy sharpness and emphatic brevity the whole purpose of the speech in the mention of the two main topics—the point of law (ὡς οὐκ εἰσαγωγίμος ἡ δίκη), and the rascality of Apollodorus (τὴν τούτου συκοφαντίαν).

The result was decisive; the court, according to the statement of Apollodorus himself, upheld the plea of the defendant, and refused to listen to any reply on the part of the plaintiff. More than four-fifths of the jury must have voted for the defendant, as we learn that the plaintiff was condemned to pay the ἐπωβελία, i.e. a sixth part of the twenty talents claimed, a fine amounting in this case to as much as three talents and twenty minae. We are not surprised to learn that the plaintiff left the court in high dudgeon (Or. 45 § 6).

INTRODUCTION TO

ΚΑΤΑ ΣΤΕΦΑΝΟΥ

ΨΕΥΔΟΜΑΡΤΥΡΙΩΝ Α.

THE effect of the verdict given in support of Phormion's special plea in bar of the action brought by Apollodorus, was to prevent the latter from raising the same issue again, except in an indirect manner. It was still open to him to bring an action for false evidence against the witnesses on whose testimony Phormion had relied; such an action was known as a δίκη ψευδομαρτυριῶν, and if the plaintiff made good his case against the accessories, he could next proceed against the principal who produced them, by an action for subornation of false witness (*δίκη κακοτεχνιῶν*¹); and in the event of his succeeding in the latter, he might then bring forward afresh his original suit (in the present instance a δίκη ἀφορμῆς).

Apollodorus accordingly brought an action for false testimony against one Stephanus, who was called on Phormion's side in the previous trial. This witness deposed to neither of the points on which the special plea was raised; he was neither produced to prove the date of the original lease, shewing the lapse of the term fixed by the Athenian statute of limitations, nor did he give evidence to the release and quittance effected between

Apollodorus and Phormion; he simply attested a point which was, strictly speaking, irrelevant to the special plea and really belonged to the main issue. He was called, with others, to prove a legal challenge¹ given by Phormion to Apollodorus, demanding that, if the latter declined to admit that a document put in evidence by Phormion was a copy of Pasion's will, Apollodorus should himself open the original; he deposed that Apollodorus declined to open it, and further that the said copy was a counterpart of the original².

The plaintiff denies that any such challenge had been made and declares that his father left no will. He contends that (1) had the challenge been given, there could have been no reason for his refusing to open the document (§§ 9—14); (2) it was unnecessary to demand his acknowledgment of the correctness of a copy, when according to his opponents the original might have been readily produced (§§ 15—19); (3) the terms of the deposition were false because it assumed that Pasion made the will alleged, whereas he made no will at all; its terms ought to have run, not 'the will of Pasion,' but 'the will Phormion asserts to have been left by Pasion' (§§ 24—26). His argument on these points is a singular combination of shallowness and subtlety³, as may be seen in further detail by referring to the italicised abstract of the somewhat difficult sections here referred to.

He next argues that the terms of the 'will' prove it was forged by Phormion in his own interests (§§ 27—28), that the 'will' was inconsistent with the 'lease,' that the latter was also a fabrication (§§ 29—36), and that the discharge pleaded by Phormion was false (§§ 40—42). In anticipation of the defendant's probable reply, that his responsibility is limited to two points only, (1) Phormion's giving the challenge, and (2) the plaintiff's refusal of it, the plaintiff insists on binding the defendant to the exact terms of his testimony (§§ 43—46). He further submits that, if in the reply any attempt is made to denounce his original action as fraudulent, all such reference to the past must be suppressed by the court as irrelevant to the issue before it (§§ 47—50). If the defendant urged that it was not his own evidence, bearing as it did on the main issue, but the evidence of those who gave witness to the special plea, that was fatal to the plaintiff in the former trial; the answer was, that the evidence on the main issue crippled his case on the special plea (§§ 51—52).

At this point the speaker passes off into petty personalities of a curious description, denouncing the defendant for giving false evidence against him, regardless of the family tie of Apollodorus' marriage with a first cousin of Stephanus, and thus transgressing what he calls by a rhetorical flourish the unwritten laws of natural affection (§§ 53—56); he declares and very inadequately proves, that a legal document on which he had relied in the former trial had been stolen by Stephanus (§§ 57—62); denounces him for truckling to prosperity, for selfishly disregarding the rights of the poor and the claims of the public on his ample resources (§§ 63—67), for his sour and sullen unsociability, and for his merciless extortion as a miserable money-lender (§§ 68—70).

Turning then from the nominal defendant Stephanus to his principal, Phormion, who is the real opponent in the present as in the previous lawsuit, he launches out into a vigorous invective against him, for his gross ingratitude towards the speaker's family who were the very founders of his fortunes (§§ 71—76), contrasts his own orderly life and public services with his opponent's immorality (§§ 77—80), charges him with appropriating money that belonged to Pasion, from whom all his wealth had originally come. Born a barbarian and sold as a slave, he had yet had the audacity to criticize the antecedents of the plaintiff's family (§§ 80—82).

After an ungenerous and gratuitous insinuation, to account for his younger brother Pasicles taking Phormion's part (§§ 83—84), he turns to the jury, reminds them of his father's benefactions to the state, implores them to protect him from one who was once a slave to his family, and from that slave's creature Stephanus; and, while reminding them incidentally of some of the points on which he relied, concludes by claiming a verdict against the man who, by his false evidence for Phormion, had robbed him of his revenge in the previous trial (§§ 85—88).

The defendant Stephanus replied at considerable length¹. The purport of his defence appears to have been very much what the plaintiff had anticipated in §§ 43—46. In particular, he contended that he was responsible for attesting to the challenge alone and not for any further details incidentally included in his evidence. The existence of the will had been attested by other witnesses than himself, and the court's acceptance of Phormion's special plea was due to their evidence on the main issue, and also to the evidence given by others on the plea itself, proving the original lease and the subsequent discharge.

ΨΕΥΔΟΜΑΡΤΥΡΙΩΝ Β.

THE reply of Stephanus is followed by a second speech on the part of the plaintiff, Apollodorus. In contrast to the presumptive proofs and the passionate declamation of his former effort, we here find, in a far less lengthy and less ambitious form, little more than a series of technical arguments supported by quotations from such parts of the Athenian code as appeared to bear, however remotely, on the case in question.

He charges the defendant with having given 'hear-say evidence' and cites the law against it (§§ 6—8); declares that Phormion, under the mask of the defendant's deposition, has given evidence in his own cause, which is illegal (9—10); he even deduces the falsehood of the deposition from the material on which it was inscribed; instead of being written hurriedly on an ordinary wax-tablet to attest on the spot a bona fide challenge, it was drawn up in a more permanent form implying a deliberately fraudulent design (11). He attempts to prove that his father made no will at all, and quotes a law forbidding a man's making a will if he had male issue lawfully begotten (14). He further urges that his father was disabled from disposing of his property by his 'adoption' as an Athenian citizen—a legal quibble arising from the ambiguity of the term relating to adoption, which really refers to the family and not to the state, as the plaintiff disingenuously implies. He also insinuates that his father was debarred from making a will by being under undue influence and of unsound mind (15—17). He further contends that his mother was technically an 'heiress,' and by law held in ward by her nearest relative, namely himself; that her marriage was therefore invalid, being made in his absence, without his consent and without any legal adjudication, and that Pasion's disposal of his wife by will was thus illegal (18—23); that the father's 'will,' if ever made, was vitiated by the fact that there were sons of full age now surviving (24); and that the defendant and Phormion had conspired to defeat the ends of justice (25—26). After a parting sally on Phormion for his disregard of the laws, and a final thrust at the defendant, defying him to shew how he could possibly have known that the document attached to his challenge was a copy of Pasion's will, which he had never seen, and after also asserting that no one ever had a copy made of his own will¹, but kept it by him till his death, he concludes by asking the court to grant him the redress demanded by the claims of justice and the laws of Athens (27—29).

Thus the plaintiff assigns four legal reasons in support of the plea that Pasion's will was a forgery: (1) Pasion was a citizen by 'adoption'; (2) his widow was an 'heiress' legally at the disposal of her son and not her deceased husband; (3) he had legitimate sons, both of whom were now grown up and their coming of age would invalidate any will on the part of the father; (4) he was of unsound mind. On these four points we have only to remark that the first rests on a verbal quibble². (2) There is no indication elsewhere in other speeches of Apollodorus that his mother was technically an 'heiress,' indeed there is reason to suspect that she was not even a native of Athens at all (§ 23); besides, as regards the alleged invalidity of his mother's second marriage, the plaintiff had already in his former speech expressed his acquiescence (Or. 45 § 4). (3) The intention of the law was that if a father, having legitimate male issue, made a will independent of their interests, the terms of the will as affecting other persons were to become valid in the event of the male children dying before they came of age. Thus a father could not disinherit his lawful heir, but he was not prevented from making a will in which the rights of the heir were duly regarded¹; and indeed, we find that Apollodorus and his younger brother had divided their father's estate between them, and that the former in particular had succeeded to a dwelling-house which was once his father's property. (4) The suggestion of lunacy is inconsistent with Apollodorus' own description of his father's last illness in another speech, by which it appears that he was then clear-headed enough to give his son a particular account of all the sums due to him from his numerous creditors².

On the whole it is obvious that the plaintiff must have been conscious of having a very bad case indeed, and that to maintain it he was compelled to resort to the most contemptible subterfuges³.

The date of the two speeches must be placed shortly after that of the speech in the suit between Apollodorus and Phormion, i.e. very soon after B.C. 351 or 350.

On the authorship of the Two Speeches against Stephanus.

We have seen that the authorship of the speech pro Phormione is undisputed; it is doubtless the genuine work of the great orator himself. Whether he is also the writer of both, or at any rate the first, of the two speeches against Stephanus, and of the others delivered by Apollodorus, which have come down to us among the works of Demosthenes¹, is a vexed question, an exhaustive treatment of which would demand an elaborate treatise beyond the compass of the present introduction. All that can here be offered is a brief discussion keeping in view, and where necessary correcting and supplementing, the arguments suggested by previous writers on the subject, and tested by the results of an independent investigation.

In the speech pro Phormione the case is supported by two important documents; (1) the lease granted to Phormion, (2) the will left by Pasion. In both the speeches against Stephanus (a witness, it will be remembered, in the former trial), the lease and the will are denounced as a fabrication and a fraud; more than this, while in the previous oration a warm eulogy is passed on the career of Phormion as a blameless man of business and as a generous citizen of irreproachable character, in the two latter the speaker avails himself of all the artifices of subtle insinuation, all the vehemence of unscrupulous invective, to paint his opponent's character in the darkest colours. The question arises whether the two latter speeches, or either of them, could have been written by the same person as the former.

Narrowing the enquiry for our present purpose to those speeches alone which Apollodorus delivered against Stephanus, we may in the first instance examine the external evidence (whether contemporary with Demosthenes or not) which may be adduced in support of the genuineness of the two speeches in question. In Schaefer) are Or. 52 πρὸς Κάλλιππον, B.C. 369—8; Or. 53 πρὸς Νικόστρατον, after B.C. 368; Or. 49 πρὸς Τιμόθεον ὑπὲρ χρέους, B.C. 362; Or. 50 πρὸς Πολυκλέα περὶ τοῦ ἐπιτριραρχήματος, about B.C. 357; Or. 45 and 46 κατὰ Στεφάνου ψευδομαρτυριῶν α' and β', about B.C. 351; Or. 59 κατὰ Νεαλπας, after B.C. 343;—Or. 47 κατ' Εὐέργου καὶ Μνησιβοῦλου was delivered after B.C. 356, but not by Apollodorus, though it was probably written by the same orator as most, if not all of the above-mentioned speeches, and possibly by Apollodorus himself.

the first place we must set a passage in Aeschines in which he denounces the orator as a traitor, charges him with writing for a pecuniary consideration a speech for Phormion the banker and with showing this speech to Apollodorus, who was then prosecuting Phormion on a charge imperilling his status as a free man¹. Here it will be remarked that the description of the trial is vague, and the penalty, to which Phormion would have been liable, much exaggerated; but it is more important to notice that Aeschines says nothing of Demosthenes writing a speech for Apollodorus either in the lawsuit with Phormion, or in his subsequent suit against Stephanus. If Aeschines is speaking the truth, then at the worst all that he says is, that, in his opinion, Demosthenes acted in bad faith by betraying his client's interests and allowing his opponent to become informed of the arguments which would be brought against him. But it may be noticed that this course is not necessarily inconsistent with good faith on the part of Phormion's friend, as the orator may have seen no reason for concealing his client's case from his opponent,—especially as the speech on that client's behalf would be the opening speech, and the case would be in no danger of being damaged by any previous attack on the part of the plaintiff. Demosthenes may have been anxious to reconcile the parties and (if possible) put an end to a quarrel which was threatening the disruption of Pasion's family; and so strong was his client's position, that to inform Apollodorus of the case against him and even to show him the very manuscript itself with the friendly advice to drop the lawsuit, would have been no detriment to Phormion's interests².

Considering all the calumnies raked up by Aeschines against his great rival in the two orations de falsa legatione and contra Ctesiphontem, we venture to think that, if he had had any ground whatever for asserting that Demosthenes actually wrote a speech for Apollodorus, a speech virtually directed against Phormion, though nominally against one of his witnesses only, he would certainly have seized his opportunity and made the very most of so damaging a fact. But he says no such thing; and even Deinarchus, another strong opponent of Demosthenes, makes no such charge against him, though he has an opening for so doing in a passage in which he refers to the orator's 'delivering' a speech for Phormion¹.

Later writers, however, though less likely to be familiar with the facts, are bolder in their denunciations; in Plutarch's life of Demosthenes, we read that the orator 'is said to have written for Apollodorus his speeches against Phormion and Stephanus, for which he justly fell into disrepute, as he also wrote a speech for Phormion in his lawsuit against Apollodorus.' He adds, with a reminiscence perhaps of the trade of the orator's father, 'it was as bad as selling swords to both sides from the same manufactory'².

The insertion of the speeches against Stephanus among the works of Demosthenes may perhaps be accounted for by the

his pupils of the speeches they had read in the course of their studies.

conjecture that Callimachus, who, as head of the Alexandrine library, undertook the prodigious task of settling the canon of the Attic Orators¹, may have been misled either by the passage of Aeschines above quoted, or by the partial resemblance of the first speech to the style of the orator, into supposing that Demosthenes himself was the writer; or again may have included them among his orations as incidentally illustrative of his genuine works. That there was once a time when Apollodorus himself was regarded as the writer of the orations spoken by him which have been handed down to us among the works of Demosthenes, may perhaps be fairly concluded from a scholium on the passage of Aeschines above referred to, noting 'from this it is clear that the speeches referring to the estate of Apollodorus are not written by him, but by Demosthenes'². Thus, Plutarch's story of the duplicity of Demosthenes, which with slight variations is repeated by still later writers³, may have originated in a misunderstanding of the language of his enemy's accusation⁴. The phraseology used by one of them in particular (Zosimus by name, a grammarian who, if we credit the conjecture attributing to him part of the scholia on Aeschines, may have actually written the scholium in question) shows how easily, even

But the form of the title implies that it was a group already recognised (Intro. to Cicero's Orator, p. xii).

The rhetorician Tiberius, περὶ σχημάτων c. 14 (referred to by A. Schaefer), quotes from Or. 45 § 83, and introduces his citation with the name not of Demosthenes but of Apollodorus, καὶ πάντων Ἀπολλοδώρος ἐγὼ γὰρ—οὐκ οἶδα, though he professes in c. 1 to confine himself to ἅσα παρὰ Δημοσθένει κατενόησαμεν. In c. 31 he begins an extract from Or. 36 § 52 with the words, ἐν τῷ ὑπὲρ Φορμίωνος πρὸς τὸν Ἀπολλοδώρον. Weil, les Harangues de Dém. p. xi, demurs to any weight being assigned to the quotation from Tiberius.

⁴ The taunt about 'selling swords to both sides' is not borrowed from the passage in Aeschines. L. Schmidt, Paed. Archiv xxv (1) 58, in a review of this volume, points out, however, that it may have been due in the first instance to some other personal opponent of Demosthenes (Weil, u. s.).

before his time, Callimachus and Plutarch may have been misled by a careless expansion of the language of the orator's rival—language which we have little hesitation in regarding as the original source of the subsequent tradition¹.

The argument from internal evidence is more intricate, and the style of all the orations delivered by Apollodorus has been discussed with much minuteness by several modern critics. Without entering, however, into undue detail on those speeches which are not included in the present volume, we may briefly state certain peculiarities of diction to which Arnold Schaefer, who, in his admirable work on the Life and Times of Demosthenes, was the first to treat the subject systematically, has specially drawn attention, as running through all the speeches delivered by Apollodorus, and distinguishing them from the genuine writings of Demosthenes².

We find, then, a feebleness of expression showing itself in repetitions of the same word within short intervals from one another³; this clumsiness is most noticeable in the case of the pronouns οὗτος and *αὐτός*⁴. Again, clause after clause begins with the same relative pronoun, or the same hypothetical particle⁵. Such carelessness of expression is naturally attended by looseness of rhythm; thus, tested by the frequency of hiatus, the speeches delivered by Apollodorus are inferior in composition to the certainly genuine speeches of Demosthenes, though an exception must be made in favour of the first speech against Stephanus¹. Even this speech supplies instances of unrhythmical construction², and examples of anacoluthon or bad writing; and in particular an awkward combination of participles may be noticed in the first as well as in the second oration³.

On passing to the question of the degree of mastery over the subject-matter and the general argument which is displayed in the various speeches, a distinction may be drawn between the earlier speeches on the one hand (e.g. those against Polycles and Timotheus) where the narrative is monotonous and tedious, and the conclusion somewhat lame and feeble; and the two speeches against Stephanus. The latter shew signs of an improvement which Schaefer ascribes to the prolonged experience in litigation which the speaker had enjoyed since his earlier efforts. The general style of all these orations, differing as it does from that of Demosthenes, and bearing marks of a kind of consistency of its own, points (so Schaefer suggests) to one person as the writer of them all, and that person in all probability Apollodorus himself. He often appeared before the law-courts not only in private suits on his own account, but also in public causes; and, when he was a member of the Council, he made important proposals, and brought them before the general assembly of the people. Even assuming that he resorted to others for assistance in his private lawsuits, yet, as soon as he appeared in a more public character, he would find it necessary to speak for himself, and without some oratorical ability he could hardly have undertaken so many public causes. In the second speech against Stephanus we find him pluming himself on his cleverness⁴; and in that against Neaera he is called upon to address the court on behalf of a younger and less experienced speaker⁵. Apollodorus obviously laid himself out for attempting to play a prominent part at Athens; in the pro Phormione the jury are specially warned against his loud and impudent self-assertion¹, and elsewhere we even find him apologising for his loudness of voice (as well as his hurried gait and ill-favoured countenance), as his misfortune and not his fault².

Such then is the general drift of the arguments, to which a brief sketch can only do imperfect justice, which led Schaefer to the conclusion that the speeches against Callippus, Nicostratus, Timotheus, Polycles, Euergus and Mnesibulus; both of those in prosecution of Stephanus; and lastly, that in accusation of Neaera,—speeches delivered in the above chronological order between the years B.C. 369 and 343,—were all composed by one person, who had a distinctive style of his own, and that person probably Apollodorus himself, with whose transactions no less than seven of these speeches are concerned.

The above conclusion is however open to criticism on the ground that it gives no adequate account of the incomparable superiority of the first speech against Stephanus, not only to the others delivered by Apollodorus, but in particular to the second speech in the very same trial. It is marked by a closeness of argument, and a forcibleness of invective, worthy of a far abler writer than the composer of the other speeches. It seems futile to explain this superiority by ascribing it to a gradual improvement in the speaker's rhetorical ability brought about by time and experience³, when the second speech is so meagre and lifeless, and when the last of the series, namely that in Neaeram, instead

² Or. 45 § 77. A. Schaefer understands the passage differently; after referring to the loudness of voice attributed to Apoll. in Or. 36, he continues: 'Wenn dagegen Apollodor erklärt: Ich rechne mich selber, was Gesichtsbildung, raschen Gang und laute Rede betrifft, nicht unter die von der Natur glücklich begabten..., so will er damit nur ein selbstgefälliges Prunken und Stolzieren von sich ablehnen, ohne andeuten zu wollen, er sei missgestalt träges Schrittes und schwachstimmig.' This misses the sense; the words when taken correctly as in the text, confirm the quotation from Or. 36, and do not appear even remotely to contradict it. Cf. Lysias, Or. 16 §§ 18, 19.

of showing any advance as compared with the first speech against Stephanus is certainly inferior to it, and is characterized by a diffuseness and laxity of style, and by other faults besides. And again, the explanation that the second speech is only a δευτερολογία, and therefore inferior to the first, is hardly adequate. Hence, while we would ascribe the second to Apollodorus himself, and find in its constant quotations from the Athenian code of law a characteristic touch, reminding us of his legal learning as attested, in the oration in *Neaeram*¹, we are driven to the conclusion that in the first he had recourse to the assistance of an abler rhetorician than himself. There is scarcely sufficient proof that that rhetorician was Demosthenes. It must however be candidly admitted that of all the speeches delivered by Apollodorus, the one that on personal grounds is least likely to have been written by the composer of the oration for Apollodorus' opponent Phormion, is less far removed from the style of Demosthenes than any of the remainder, though again and again we have words never used by the orator himself in his undisputed writings². In one passage indeed (§ 77) we have a close parallel with the Pantaenetus (§ 55)³, which seems to point to a common authorship, and if the latter speech is rightly assigned to the year 346 or thereabout, in other words, is placed after the speeches now under consideration, we can hardly explain the parallel except by the hypothesis of a common source, or else by the less probable assumption that Demosthenes, who was almost certainly the writer of the Pantaenetus, having heard or read the first speech against Stephanus, a speech directed virtually against his own client Phormion, borrowed from the phraseology of the latter oration, with which he was thus familiar. The Attic orator, Hyperides, is known to have written one speech at least against Pasicles⁴, who, though a brother of Apollodorus, took the side of his opponent Phormion, and a conjecture has been half hazarded that it was for Apollodorus that those speeches were composed¹; but there is no adequate reason for assigning the first speech against Stephanus to that orator, and a comparison with his four extant orations has led me to notice only one important coincidence of expression².

On the whole, then, we may conclude (1) that the second speech was not only delivered by Apollodorus, but probably composed by him; (2) that the first was written for him, possibly not by Demosthenes, but by some rhetorician unknown to us, whose assistance he was led to secure either by the pressure of his other engagements, or by a consciousness of the difficulty of the task that was before him, and a mistrust of his own unaided ability to compose more than the legal rejoinder to the defendant's reply.

Those who attribute the speeches against Stephanus, or at least the first of them, to the authorship of Demosthenes, are bound to supply some reasonable motive for his changing sides after taking the part of Phormion against Apollodorus. If such a desertion to the enemy's camp was due to his discovery that the documents relied on in the first trial were forgeries, and that the deponents called to prove them were guilty of false witness, we cannot but think that Demosthenes, if he had been the writer of a speech immediately arising out of the former trial, would have been prompted to stronger expressions of indignation against the fraud practised on the jury on the previous occasion.

While we dismiss as irrelevant any attempt to try the alleged duplicity of Demosthenes by the standard of the professional etiquette of the English bar, and refrain from entangling our discussion with parallels suggested by questions of modern forensic casuistry, we may at any rate remark that, though we have no sufficient warrant for assuming that the orator was above pecuniary considerations, a certain sense of honour would probably have kept him from accepting a fee to write down the very side which he had but lately written up; and we may fairly conclude that such conduct was held dishonourable from the fact that even for divulging Phormion's case to his opponent, Demosthenes is, whether truly or falsely, charged by Aeschines with playing a traitor's part.

perides III 28, 4 ἀνέκδοτον ἔνδον καταγηράσκειν and III 27, 22 δγαμον ἔνδον καταγηράσκειν.

Again, it is urged that the first speech against Stephanus was written for a different trial to that on behalf of Phormion. This can hardly be regarded as an extenuating fact in favour of Demosthenes as the writer of the leading speech in both trials, since the second cause arose immediately out of the first, and there can be no question about the irreconcilable difference between the facts of the case as stated in the two orations, and the terms used in the one and the other in describing the character of Phormion. Even apart from motives of honour, the lower ground of expediency would presumably have sufficed to prevent Demosthenes from writing to defame the character of one who, by his opponent himself, was admitted to be a wealthy and prosperous man of business, and from supporting by preference the failing fortunes of an impoverished pettifogger.

Such, then, at the very strongest, are the principal arguments that may be adduced against the genuineness of the two speeches against Stephanus. In conclusion, it is only fair to submit the only hypothesis on which it is not impossible that Demosthenes may after all be the real author of, at any rate, the first oration.

We have already seen that it is highly probable that the speech against Phormion belongs to the latter part of the year B.C. 351 (p. xxix) and that the speeches against Stephanus may fairly be placed in the year B.C. 350¹. It was a year in which the efforts of Athens to recover Euboea and to protect Olynthus placed her in a position of grave financial embarrassment. To meet this, Apollodorus, as a member of the senate, moved a decree that it should be submitted to the vote of the public assembly whether the surplus of the revenue should be paid to the Theoric fund for religious festivals, or applied to the expenses of the war. The proposal was approved by the senate and accepted by the public assembly; and the latter passed a decree appropriating the surplus to military purposes. Hereupon one Stephanus, who is not to be identified with the defendant in the speeches before us, impeached Apollodorus on the ground of his having brought forward an illegal decree; and he obtained a verdict, which led to the fine of one talent being inflicted on Apollodorus². In this impeachment,

Stephanus was probably the tool of Eubulus and the peace-party, and although there is no proof that Apollodorus acted at the suggestion of Demosthenes and the opposite party, the proposal of Apollodorus would doubtless meet with the orator's approval, as is clear from the financial policy cautiously propounded by the latter in the Olynthiac orations¹, and, when it was too late, carried to a successful issue twelve years afterwards in the autumn of 339, only one year before the catastrophe of Chaeroneia.

It may therefore be questioned whether political motives may not have induced Demosthenes to throw Phormion overboard and to support Apollodorus by writing the first speech against Stephanus. On this hypothesis it may be presumed that Apollodorus, having lost his lawsuit against Phormion owing to the powerful advocacy of Demosthenes, and being almost crushed by the consequences of his defeat, resorted to Demosthenes in the hope of recovering part at least of his resources, and proposed to run the risk of bringing forward his motion on the Theoric fund, on condition that the orator wrote him a speech against the obnoxious witness Stephanus.

My friend Dr F. Blass (the author of several important works on Greek Oratory) has favoured me with a suggestive letter², supporting this hypothesis and also showing that the style of the first speech against Stephanus, apart from its general resemblance to that of Demosthenes³, coincides with it in a hitherto unnoticed peculiarity, that under certain limitations the orator generally avoids the juxtaposition of more than two short syllables, the exceptions being for the most part cases where the three syllables fall within the compass of a single word⁴. To examine the minute criterion here proposed is beyond my present purpose. It is sufficient to state (as my learned correspondent would obviously acknowledge), that while its absence may suggest the spuriousness

u. s., III 2, p. 180 and (for the chronology here followed) ib. p. 330. Some (e.g. Weil, Harangues de Dém. p. 163) would place the Euboean expedition in B.C. 348, and Blass would therefore place in that year the motion of Apollodorus and the delivery of Or. 45.

of any given oration, its presence does not prove its genuineness. It may also be admitted that the testimony of Harpocration is in favour of the Demosthenic authorship of the first speech¹ (though the value of that testimony is impaired by his attributing the second speech² to the same author); and that the parallelism of § 77 to a passage in the Pantaenetus already noticed is on the whole more easily explained by ascribing the first speech to Demosthenes than by any other hypothesis³.

³ Since the above discussion was first published, it has been justly observed that the genuineness of the first speech against Stephanus 'could hardly have been doubted but for the desire to vindicate the orator's morality....The morality of Demosthenes' conduct may in this case perhaps be dubious, but it is not so palpably bad as has been supposed....But...he attacks his late client's character with a coarse violence and a wantonness which goes beyond the conventional invective of the law-courts. He writes for Apollodorus as Apollodorus would have written himself, not sparing even the speaker's own mother. And it is precisely here rather than in the change of sides that we feel the real discredit lies' (S. H. Butcher, Demosthenes, 1881, p. 136). See also G. Huettner, Demosthenis oratio in Stephanum priorum vera sit inquiritur, 1895, pp. 59—65, where a careful examination of the language of the first speech results in its being accepted as the work of Demosthenes.

Mr Kirk, Demosthenic Style, p. 41—2, has the following remarks on the two speeches:—'The first is rich in all the figures and devices which can enliven argument and convey feeling, while the second is merely an array of arguments; and this inversion shows a weakness alike in logic and in art wholly incompatible with any theory of Demosthenic authorship for Or. 46.'

ΠΡΟΣ ΝΙΚΟΣΤΡΑΤΟΝ ΠΕΡΙ ΑΝΔΡΑΠΟΔΩΝ ΑΠΟΓΡΑΦΗΣ ΑΡΕΘΟΥΣΙΟΥ.

IN this speech Apollodorus, the litigious son of Pasion, appears in support of a lawsuit arising out of an information laid against one Arethusius, for refusing to pay a fine due to the public chest. According to Athenian law, if a state-debtor concealed his effects, any citizen who discovered the fact was at liberty to draw up, and lay before the proper magistrate, a written statement containing an inventory or specification of the goods in question. The schedule thus drawn up was called an ἀπογραφή, and this name was also given to the legal process in support of it¹. The informant, in the event of his making good his case, was entitled to the reward of three-fourths of the valuation (§ 2); if he failed, he was fined a thousand drachmae, and suffered a partial disfranchisement which prevented his appearing again as a prosecutor in a public cause (§ 1).

In the present instance, Apollodorus has handed in a specification in which two slaves are stated to be the property of Arethusius, and therefore liable to confiscation as a partial payment of his debt to the public treasury.

Hereupon, a brother of Arethusius, named Nicostratus, puts in a claim to the slaves, and in the speech before us Apollodorus has to show that the claim is false and that the slaves are really the property of Arethusius. To prove this he calls evidence in §§ 19—21, and this is the only portion of the speech which is really relevant to the issue before the court, while the greater part of it, up to this point, is devoted to a narrative of the relations between Apollodorus and the two brothers. The object of this is to show that the former had been most ungratefully treated by the latter, especially by Nicostratus, and that he was therefore, according to the Athenian notion, fully justified in revenging himself for his private wrongs by supporting a public information against his opponent. To prove the purity of his motives and to ingratiate himself with the court, he waives at the very outset his claim to the reward to which the informant in such cases is legally entitled.

Among the speeches of Lysias we have three concerned with causes relating to claims of money withheld from the state (ἀπογραφαί): the speech 'for the soldier' (Or. 9), that 'on the property of Aristophanes' (19), and that 'against Philocrates' (29). The first two are for the defence; the third, for the prosecution. But in all three, the promoter of the ἀπογραφή is represented as the prosecutor; in the present case, although the promoter of the ἀπογραφή is Apollodorus, we should probably consider him as the defendant and Nicostratus as the plaintiff. Apollodorus was apparently in possession of the effects disputed; his opponent Nicostratus puts in a claim against him, and the speech before us is therefore a speech for the defence¹. Owing to the general character of its contents, it is usually classed among the

Private Orations, and it may be conveniently studied in conjunction with them. But it cannot be too clearly stated, that, in so far as it arises directly out of a refusal to pay a fine to the public chest, it is essentially a speech delivered in a public cause.

Apollodorus states that Nicostratus was his neighbour in the country and formerly his trusted friend, that they had done kindly services for one another, and that in particular he had lent to Nicostratus, free of interest, a sum which he was himself compelled to raise on the security of part of his property. So far from being grateful, the borrower at once laid a plot to escape payment of his debt, made common cause with the opponents of Apollodorus, and induced a third party (one Lycidas) to bring against him a suit demanding that certain property should be produced in court. Among those who were entered as witnesses to the delivery of the summons requiring him to produce the property, was Arethusius, a brother of Nicostratus, as above mentioned. The summons, it is alleged, was never served, consequently Apollodorus did not appear, and judgment went against him by default. Subsequently, Apollodorus prosecuted Arethusius for fraudulent citation (ψευδοκλητείας γραφή), which was regarded by Athenian law as a criminal offence, while on the contrary a witness in the cause itself as distinguished from one who attested a summons, was, if he gave false evidence, only liable to a civil action¹. Before the case came on, Arethusius committed several acts of outrage against Apollodorus, laid waste his orchard and violently assaulted him, and when the case for fraudulent citation, and apparently for the other criminal acts, was brought before the jury, Apollodorus, under these aggravating circumstances, obtained a verdict against Arethusius with the greatest ease. Indeed, it was only owing to the entreaties of his brothers, with the acquiescence of the prosecutor, who was unwilling to face the odium which would ensue, that Arethusius escaped the penalty of death¹, and had inflicted on him a fine of one talent, for the payment of which his brothers became jointly responsible. Arethusius pleaded poverty and refused to pay; thereupon Apollodorus took the legal steps required (as above described) for the confiscation of his property, and in his specification claimed for the state, among other effects, two slaves as a partial security for the payment of the fine. Nicostratus resists this claim as regards the slaves in question and claims them as his own property, though even in that case, as the speaker points out, they should be confiscated, since Nicostratus had guaranteed the payment of the fine and had failed to make good his guarantee. In §§ 22—25 Apollodorus describes the unsuccessful attempt of his opponents to entrap him into accepting a legal challenge, which would have committed him to a virtual admission that the slaves were private property; and in §§ 19.—21 calls evidence to prove, that the person recognised as the responsible owner of the slaves was Arethusius, and not the present claimant Nicostratus.

Passing from the general contents of the speech as above sketched, we may turn to a brief consideration of its literary style and special peculiarities. We are at once struck by the disproportionate space of twenty sections that the punishment of death might be inflicted in a case of ψευδοκλητεία, but this seems scarcely probable.

devoted to purely preliminary details, as contrasted with the short compass within which lies the real gist of the case. The long account of the reasons prompting the speaker to seek for revenge, is unlike the manner of Demosthenes, and a certain feebleness and diffuseness may be noted in the narrative immediately following the exordium. Among minor details may be observed a tendency to add unnecessary and superfluous clauses, defining more clearly what has just gone before¹. Again, we find needless repetitions within the limits of a single sentence²; further, we have a certain clumsiness in the repetition of pronouns such as οὗτος and αὐτός³; we observe a disproportionate number of harsh constructions⁴, and it is curious to notice that a phrase occurring in this speech, which is unexampled in the undisputed writings of Demosthenes, finds its nearest parallels in speeches delivered like the present by Apollodorus⁵. We may also trace a general resemblance to the style of that against Neaera, the greater part of which was delivered by the same person, a speech which it is impossible to attribute to the authorship of Demosthenes⁶; and, lastly, there is a

The words in § 7 ἐδείτό μου βοηθήσαι αὐτῷ ὥσπερ καὶ ἐν τῷ ἐμπροσθεν χρόνῳ ἦν περὶ αὐτὸν ἀληθινὸς φίλος, are partially repeated in § 8 and § 12. Again in § 24 τὰς βασάνους is unnecessarily followed by the closer definition, ὅτι εἰποιεν οἱ ἄνθρωποι. (Cf. A. ⁶ Or. 59 (κατὰ Νεαίρας) is condemned by ancient critics certain want of warmth in the peroration, unlike the vigorous style of the great orator himself.

On the whole, without entering into minuter detail, we may consider that the internal evidence is such as to throw grave doubts on this speech being the genuine work of Demosthenes, and we are not surprised to find its genuineness called in question by the lexicographer of the Attic Orators, Harpocration¹, though Plutarch refers it without suspicion to the authorship of Demosthenes, and fancifully contrasts the literary fame of the orator with the military reputation of the general of that name in the Peloponnesian War².

We have now to consider the data for arriving at the time when the speech was delivered. In § 9, Apollodorus describes himself as short of money, owing to differences between himself and Phormion, who was keeping him out of the property left him by his father Pasion, who, it will be remembered, died in B.C. 370. Again, in § 14 we are told, that at the time of the events there related, Apollodorus had not yet brought to a preliminary hearing the suits he had instituted against his relatives (Phormion and others). The suit against Phormion respecting the banking capital (Or. 36) was delayed until about B.C. 350. But a much more direct indication is given by a reference dantz, vit. Iphicr. p. 194). Add Or. 59 § 14. Also the tedious references to the plea of revenge, Or. 59 § 1 ὥστ' οὐχ ὑπάρχων ἀλλὰ τιμωρούμενος κ.τ.λ. and cf. § 18 ἐκ μικρῶν παιδίων with Or. 53 § 19 ἐκ μικροῦ παιδαρίου, while παιδάριον μικρόν, though common enough in itself, also happens to occur in Or. 59 § 50.

in § 5, to a trierarchy involving the speaker's absence from Athens; and it was shortly after his return that the events described in the context occurred. He had to sail round the south of the Peloponnesus, and after touching there to take certain ambassadors to Sicily. It seems probable that we should identify this trierarchy with that mentioned in Or. 45 § 3, which belongs either to B.C. 369 or B.C. 368¹. The latter date is more probable, not only for the reason given in the note on that

Droysen (Zeitschrift für d. Alterthumswissenschaft, 1839 p. 929) places the speech in Ol. 107, 1=B.C. 352—1, and Böhnecke (Forschungen, p. 675) in Ol. 107, 2=B.C. 351—350. They connect the Sicilian trierarchy of Apollodorus (1) with the despatch sent to Athens in Ol. 106, 3=B.C. 354—3 by a leading man in Syracuse, Callippus by name; and (2) with a request for assistance on the part of the Messenians, recorded by Pausanias (iv 28 § 2). Arnold Schaefer, however, points out that we have no authority for stating that the Athenians sent any reply to the overtures of Callippus by sending a special embassy to Sicily, and Apollodorus would have been the last man in the world to have anything to do with Callippus, who was his personal enemy (see note on Or. 36 § 53). Besides, Apollodorus would then be in the 40th year of his age, and would have had considerable experience of business, whereas when he undertook this trierarchy, and when he shortly after assisted Nicostratus, he was quite a young man and inexperienced in the ways of the world (§§ 12—13). As was seen by Rehdantz, who places the speech in B.C. 368 (Jahn's neue Jahrbücher, LXX 505), we must not refer the allusions in §§ 9 and 14 to the lawsuit of Apollodorus against Phormion which was met by the latter's special plea (Or. 36), but to the threatened litigation of the first few years after his father's death. Now, after the summer of 369 the Athenians, in consequence of help sent by Dionysius I to his allies the Spartans, were engaged in negotiations with that tyrant which led to the conclusion of a peace and alliance. With these negotiations we may connect the Sicilian trierarchy of Apollodorus. The ambassadors whom he had on board could not confer with the Spartans without landing at Gytheion, as the Peloponnesus was for the most part in arms on the side of the Thebans. (Abridged from A. Schaefer, u.s., p. 145—6.)

passage, but also because at this period no one was required to be trierarch oftener than once in three years, and we know that Apollodorus was so employed in B.C. 362; hence he may have been trierarch in B.C. 365 and B.C. 368, but probably not in B.C. 369¹. Thus if we allow a fair interval of time for the events mentioned in the speech subsequent to the trierarchy, we may fix on B.C. 366 as the probable date of its delivery. Now, if Demosthenes was born in B.C. 381, he was still a minor in B.C. 366 and too young to have been the writer of the speech; if, as is most probable, his birth was in B.C. 384, he was only just of age when the speech was delivered, and had enough to do in looking after his own affairs, and preparing, under the guidance of Isaeus, to join issue with his guardians, without writing speeches for other people. Consequently, the probable date of the speech, coinciding as it does with the internal evidence and with the doubts of Harpocration, makes it almost impossible to ascribe it to the authorship of Demosthenes.

But whether written by Demosthenes, or, as is much more probable, by another, most likely by Apollodorus himself, there can be no reasonable doubt that the speech was actually delivered before an Athenian tribunal. As a study of character, the narrative of the relations between the speaker and his opponents is not without an interest of its own; and the moralist may there find a fresh exemplification of the wise saw of Polonius, on my own account on some other business,' while it is not necessarily inconsistent with a single voyage as trierarch, which is all we can assume if we place the period in B.C. 366, is better suited to a date which would allow of more than one absence on public service.

¹ Cf. Sigg, Apoll. p. 404, who (with Lortzing) also draws attention to the indication of time in § 4 ἐπειδὴ ἐτελεύτησεν ὁ πατήρ... χρόνου δὲ προβαίνοντος. But it is fair to remark that the subsequent expression 'when-ever I was abroad, either on public service as trierarch, or

Never a borrower or a lender be,
For loan oft loses both itself and friend.

The speech includes several passages of peculiar intricacy, in which the language of Athenian lawcourts and the vocabulary of Attic horticulture will demand special illustration in the course of the commentary¹. The knotty points of legal terminology, which may embarrass the beginner, may prove attractive to experts, qui iuris nodos et legum aenigmata solvunt;

though others perhaps will be better pleased to dwell on the details of the speaker's country-home, and will not be sorry to leave for a while the lawcourts of Athens, for the vineyards and orchards, the olives and roses of Attica.

OR. LIV.

KATA KONΩΝΟΣ ΑΙΚΕΙΑΣ.

THIS is a speech for the plaintiff in an action for assault and battery, which arose as follows. One evening the plaintiff, a young Athenian named Ariston, accompanied by a friend, was taking his usual stroll in the market-place of Athens, when he was attacked by the defendant Conon, and his son Ctesias and four others. One of these last fell upon Ariston's friend and held him fast, while Conon and the rest made an onslaught on Ariston, stripped him of his cloak which they carried off with them, threw him violently into the mud, and assaulted him with such brutality that he was for some time confined to his bed and his life despaired of (§§ 7—12).

Ariston on his recovery had more than one legal course open to him (§§ 1 and 24). Conon had, in the first instance, rendered himself liable to summary arrest for stripping off his cloak, and he was still amenable either to a public indictment for criminal outrage (ὑβρεως γραφή) or to a private suit for assault and battery (αικείας δίκη). To take the former of these last two courses would have proved a task too arduous for so youthful a prosecutor as Ariston, and he accordingly followed the advice of his friends and adopted the safer and less ambitious plan of bringing an action for assault. The case was submitted in this form to a public arbitrator, and as his award, whatever it may have been, was not final, the plaintiff brought his suit before one of the legal tribunals, possibly that known as the Forty, state-officers chosen by lot who went on circuit through the demes of Attica, and under whose cognisance, besides some minor matters, all private lawsuits for assault were placed¹. Two points were essential to the proof of the case, (1) that the defendant struck the plaintiff who was a free-man, with intent to insult him; and (2) that the defendant struck the first blow and was not acting in self-defence under the provocation of a previous assault.

The plaintiff, after a brief statement of the reasons which led him to prefer bringing a private suit instead of a public indictment against his assailant, and after the usual request for a favourable hearing, gives a graphic account of the origin of the feud between Conon's sons and himself (§§ 3—6); he then passes on to a vivid description of the scene in the market-place and the brutal assault there committed by Conon and one of his sons (§§ 7—9), and calls medical and other evidence to prove the serious nature of that assault and its nearly fatal result (§§ 10—12).

He next anticipates the defence which is likely to be set up by Conon, who, he understands, will make light of his son's misconduct and try to pass it off as a mere freak of youthful pleasantry; he contrasts the flippancy of the proposed defence with the more serious spirit of the laws of Athens, which provide penalties for even minor offences to preclude the perpetration of graver crimes (§§ 13—20); and he submits that the plea of youth can only be urged in mitigation of punishment and is at any rate inapplicable to Conon himself, a man of more than fifty years of age, who, so far from restraining his sons and the other assailants, was actually the ringleader of them all (§§ 21—23). The defendant was amenable to the laws against highway robbery and brutal outrage and, had death ensued, would have been chargeable with murder (§§ 24, 25).

He further describes the evasive conduct of the defendant during the preliminary arbitration (§§ 25—29); denounces the falsehood of the evidence put in by persons who were boon-companions of the defendant, deposing that they found the plaintiff fighting with the defendant's son, and that the defendant did not strike the plaintiff; contrasts it with the evidence of impartial persons on his own side attesting to his having been assaulted by the defendant (§§ 30—33); and comments severely on the bad character of the witnesses for the defence (§§ 34—37).

He then warns the court not to allow themselves to be imposed upon by the hard swearing and the sensational imprecations which, he is informed, will be resorted to by the defendant, whose antecedents prove his reckless disregard of things sacred; while he himself, averse though he was to taking even a lawful oath, had for the truth's sake offered to take such a pledge; and, as that offer had been declined by the defendant, he would now for the satisfaction of the court swear solemnly that in very truth he had been brutally assaulted by his opponents (§§ 38—41).

After pointing out that even in this private suit public interests were at stake, he very briefly refers to the way in which his family and himself had done their duty towards their country, while his opponents had done nothing of the kind. 'Even supposing,' he says in conclusion, 'we are of less service to the state than our opponents, that is no reason why we should be assaulted and brutally outraged.'

The only clue to the date of the speech is to be found in a passage in § 3, whence we conclude that it was delivered two years after orders were given at Athens for a military force to go out on garrison duty to Panactum, a fort on the Boeotian frontier. We read of such an expedition in B.C. 343¹; and this would bring us to B.C. 341 as the year of the trial. It has been suggested, however, though no reason is assigned, that this is too late a year, and that there is warrant for believing there was regular military service, as opposed to a special expedition, on the Boeotian frontier in B.C. 357, to protect Attica from a diversion on the part of the Boeotians shortly before the Phocian war, during which there was no occasion for such precautions, as the Phocians kept the Boeotians occupied in another direction². Thus, the military movements referred to in § 3 belong to the time either shortly before or shortly after the Phocian war, in other words, either to B.C. 357 or 343, the speech being thus placed in B.C. 355 or 341 respectively. In the course of an Excursus on p. 242, I have pointed out that the reference to the Triballi in the days of Conon's youth supplies us with a hitherto unnoticed coincidence in favour of the later date.

The speech has deservedly won the admiration of ancient and modern critics alike. It is one of the few private orations whose genuineness has never been doubted¹. The orator Deinarchus is reported to have plagiarized from it², the old grammarians often refer to it, and the Greek writers on Rhetoric quote it more frequently than any of the other private orations³. In particular Dionysius of Halicarnassus, in his treatise on the eloquence of Demosthenes, after quoting a vivid description from the orator Lysias, one of the highest merits of whose style was the power of clear and graphic narration, selects for comparison the equally vivid passage in the present speech where the plaintiff describes the disorderly doings of his opponents in the camp of Panactum and in the market-place of Athens (§§ 3—9). His criticism is to the effect that the extract from Demosthenes is fully equal to that from Lysias in clearness, correctness, and perspicuity of style, in conciseness and terseness, in unadorned simplicity and in truthfulness of detail. He also commends the skill with which the language of the speaker is kept true to character, and appropriate to the subject, and finds in the narrative much of the winning persuasiveness, the charming grace, and the other merits of style that mark his quotation from Lysias⁴. Demosthenes has well remarked that no selection from the Private Orations can be considered complete which does not include the *Conon*¹; and many years after that remark was made, it was excellently edited for school-reading with a brief German commentary by Westermann. It has also been the subject of an appreciative criticism by Perrot, who writes as follows :

‘ Dans le discours contre Conon...Démosthène réunit aux qualités qui firent le succès de Lysias celles qui distinguent Isée. De Lysias, il tient l’art d’entrer dans le caractère et dans le rôle du personnage qu’il fait parler, de se transformer en lui, si l’on peut ainsi parler, de produire l’illusion la plus complète. Par la vraisemblance et la vivacité du récit, par l’art d’y semer des détails sensibles et pittoresques, de faire voir la chose telle que l’on a intérêt à la présenter, il est bien près d’égaliser son modèle...Où Démosthène est tout à fait supérieur à Lysias, c’est dans ce qu’il a appris d’Isée : il tire des témoignages un bien autre parti, il les place, les encadre, les développe et les discute avec une bien autre habileté ; il connaît bien mieux les lois, il remonte à leurs principes, il en expose les sens et la portée avec une autorité dont rien chez Lysias ne peut donner l’idée. Enfin, pour n’insister que sur les différences les plus notables, les figures de pensée dont Lysias ignore encore l’usage animent et colorent son style : c’est le dilemme, c’est l’apostrophe, ce sont des interrogations brusques et passionnées, ce sont des mouvements oratoires dont l’élan et la variété nous avertissent que l’éloquence attique n’a plus de progrès à faire, qu’elle touche à sa perfection².’

One of our own scholars, in the course of a short chapter devoted mainly to the Private Speeches contained in the present volume, has well observed :—

The whole story is told and commented on with exquisite grace. The tone is that of a middle-aged¹ man of precise habits, who knows little law, and would have known less had it not been for the defendant; anxious to seem calm, but not quite able to smother his indignation; a little wanting in a sense of the ludicrous, and so keenly alive to his own respectability—which is a recurring topic—that he must apologise for being aware that such rowdiness even exists².

To the modern reader the main interest of the speech is to be found perhaps in the lifelike pictures of Athenian manners incidentally sketched in its pages; and several scenes have accordingly been borrowed from it and interwoven with the narrative of Becker's Charicles in illustration of the private life of the ancient Greeks³. In particular, we here read of the disorderly clubs formed by young men about town, who, after holding a carouse, would sally forth into the streets to assault quiet people and play practical jokes at the expense of inoffensive citizens. To these indecorous societies the defendant's sons belonged, and the defendant himself in his youth was a member of a club called after a lawless tribe of Thrace, an association that finds its modern parallel in the fraternity, which in the days of Addison took its name from the wild Mohocks of North America, and was for some time the terror of the streets of London. The practical jokes of young Athens in the days of Demosthenes re-appear, some seven centuries later, in a less objectionable, not to say harmless form, in the pleasures practised by students at the University of Athens at the expense of the 'freshmen' (οἱ νεόλυδοι), who, at the first moment of their arrival, were struggled for by the young allies of the rival lecturers, good-humouredly chaffed by them, and escorted with mock gravity through the market-place to the public bath, where, after a feint of frightening them, their tormentors considered the act of initiation completed, and were very good friends to the freshmen ever after¹.

The pages of the Greek orators abound in references to house-breaking and highway robbery, to street-brawls and other disorderly acts imperilling the public security²; and in the present speech we find that the plaintiff could not take a quiet walk along the market-place of Athens, beneath the rock of the Acropolis, past the temple erected as a memorial of the patriotic self-sacrifice of the daughters of an ancient king of Attica, and by the very scene where the tyrant Hipparchus was slain, without finding himself the victim of a brutal and outrageous assault. In times such as these at Athens, one who was tempted to take an evening stroll with a friend, if invited in language like that of Sebastian in Twelfth Night,

I pray you, let us satisfy our eyes
With the memorials and the things of fame
That do renown this city, might have replied, with Antonio,

Would you'd pardon me,
I do not without danger walk these streets.

ΠΡΟΣ ΚΑΛΛΙΚΛΕΑ

ΠΕΡΙ ΧΩΡΙΟΥ ΒΛΑΒΗΣ¹.

THIS is a speech on the side of the defence in an action for damages alleged to have been incurred by the plaintiff, Callicles, by reason of a wall having been built on the defendant's property to the obstruction of a water-course carrying off the drainage of the surrounding hills. The farms of the plaintiff and defendant lay in a hilly district of Attica, separated from one another by a public road; and the defendant's father, Teisias, on coming into possession of his farm and finding that the water which flowed from the high ground had made an inroad into his property and was cutting itself a regular channel, built a stone-wall round it to prevent the water from making any further encroachment. No protest was raised on the part of the plaintiff's family either at the time or for many years subsequently; Teisias lived fifteen years after building the enclosure, and, after his death, a mountain-torrent caused by a heavy shower of rain overthrew an old wall on the plaintiff's land, flooded his property and damaged some of his stores. Thereupon the plaintiff brought an action for damages, alleging that the flood was due to the stream being diverted to his own side of the road by the proper water-course having been blocked up by the building of the wall on the defendant's property.

The speech for the defence opens by casting on the plaintiff the imputation of bringing the action with a view to getting possession of the defendant's property (§ 1). The speaker, a son of Teisias, whose name is not given, pleads that the wall was built by his father fifteen years before his death, without any objection on the part of the plaintiff's family, and challenges the other side to prove the existence of the water-course alleged to be obstructed by the wall (§§ 3—7); he had offered to refer the dispute to the arbitration of impartial persons familiar with the neighbourhood, but the plaintiff had refused the offer (§§ 8, 9); he then describes carefully the position of the two properties on the opposite sides of the public way, and accounts for the building of the wall (§§ 10, 11). He next calls evidence to prove that the alleged water-course was part of his private ground, as it contained an old burial-place, and an orchard besides (§§ 12—15); he further shews that, as the water would naturally flow down the public way, there was no occasion for such a water-course (§§ 16—18), and that there was no such channel immediately above or below his own property (§ 19). The plaintiff's loss was due to his own carelessness and he was most inconsistent in bringing this action (§ 20); the other neighbours who had suffered severely made no complaint, whereas the plaintiff had lost nothing worth mentioning (§§ 21, 23—25). Again, his opponents had themselves advanced their wall (and thus encroached on public property); they had also raised the level of the road and thus led to the water being liable to be diverted from the road itself to the lands adjacent). After once more referring to the plain-tiff's interested motive in bringing the action, he states in conclusion that, though the plaintiff had refused his offer, he had been ready to take the legally recognised oath and to swear that he had not caused the damage alleged, feeling that that would be the strongest argument with a jury who were themselves on their solemn oath.

The general style of the Callicles, as indeed that of the Conon, is not unlike that of Lysias, and speeches on similar subjects, one on a water-conduit and another on a disputed boundary, are known to have been composed by the orator Hyperides¹, but the genuineness of the speech before us can hardly be seriously contested², though it has been suggested that it was written by Demosthenes in his younger days³. It is quoted without hesitation by Harpocration and the rhetoricians alike, as the work of Demosthenes himself. The narrow limits of the speech and the somewhat trivial nature of the subject will account for the exordium not being succeeded, as elsewhere, by any formal narrative or statement of the case; instead of this, the narrative of the facts is only incidentally included in the course of the speech, and is blended and interwoven with the thread of the argument. Here and there the argument is brightened by a touch of quiet humour, as in the passage where the speaker, arguing on the supposition of his allowing the rain-water to make an inroad into his property, after exhausting several alternatives of dealing with the stream when once it was there, exclaims in conclusion, 'What am I to do with it? for

I presume the plaintiff won't compel me to drink it up!

In the course of the speech we have also several indications of the provisions of Athenian law respecting those rights of water, with the Roman law of which we are far better acquainted. We gather that the inferior tenant held his land subject to the limiting obligation, or servitus as Roman lawyers would have called it, of giving free passage into his own land for the water, in particular the rain-water, flowing from the superior tenement; and in a passage of Plato's Laws we find provisions suggested for regulating the relations between neighbours in rights of this description and requiring the superior proprietor to do everything in his power to relieve the inferior proprietor from unnecessary inconvenience¹. Again, the law did not allow the diversion of the natural and regular channel of the water by the building of a wall or by any similar construction. Callicles appears to have had no case, as his property did not immediately adjoin that of the defendant but was separated from it by a public way which provided sufficiently for carrying off the water. In some instances, but (as the defendant contends) not in the present, a regularly recognised water-course, or ditch, traversed several successive properties, and it is clear that no individual proprietor could intercept this. It also appears that the proprietor of any land bordering on a public way generally turned his drainage on to the road (§ 26)².

The legal issue in the Callicles appears to turn in a great measure on the nature of the water-course, the existence of which is maintained by the plaintiff and

² Cf. M. Caillemet's article on denied by the defendant. The encroachment made by the floods, before the defendant's father became the proprietor, led to a stream of intermittent rain-water gradually forming a channel for itself (μᾶλλον ὡδοποιεῖ § 11) through a burial-ground¹ planted with fruit-trees. The plaintiff appears to have contended that the channel thus formed was a water-course within the terms of the law; the defendant relies on the existence of the trees and the tombs to prove that it was not a recognised channel, but part of his private ground, accidentally inundated, and repeatedly traversed by water, more than fifteen years before. It was this damage, he contends, that led to his father building the wall for the protection of his property.

Lastly, we have several points that are curiously suggestive on the state of the country-roads in the hilly districts of Attica; the road itself is assumed to be the natural channel for the drainage of the neighbouring hills, and a proper water-course beside the road is declared to be a thing unheard of. In fact, like some of the present roads of Attica, as described in a modern writer's amusing sketches of Greek brigandage, the road and the stream were one and the same thing, and, except in dry weather, the former hardly existed².

¹ For purposes of irrigation, Plato would allow the tenant to divert water from streams that were common property by cutting himself a channel anywhere except through a private house or through temples or tombs. Legg. p. 844 Α τῶν ὑδάτων πέρι γεωργοῖσι παλαιοὶ of an action argued on the merits of the case, as opposed to παραγραφὴ, and to διαμαρτυρία in Isaëus 7 § 3. Cf. Or. 34 ὑπόθ. § 4, τὴν εὐθείαν, and in the speech itself, § 4, εὐθυδικίαν εἰσιόντα. §§ 1—3. The defendant Phormion's obvious inexperience and incapacity for public speaking make it necessary for his friends to state his case on his behalf. They confront the plaintiff Apollodorus with a special plea in bar of action, not to waste time and evade the main issue, but to secure a final settlement of the case. Their friend, the defendant, has conferred many kindnesses on the plaintiff; and has further been released from all the legal claims of the latter, only to find himself at last the victim of a vexatious lawsuit.

However, a brief recital of the transactions of the litigants will prove that the plaintiff's case is utterly untenable.

1. τὴν ἀπειρίαν τοῦ λέγειν] Like all slaves at Athens, Phormion (once the slave of the banker Pasion) was of barbarian birth; and though subsequently rewarded with the rights of freedom and citizenship, remained unable to speak good Greek. In a later speech arising out of the present action, Apollodorus, himself the son of one who was once a slave, taunts him with his foreign extraction and his indifferent pronunciation. Or. 45 § 81 βάρβαρος ἐωνήθη, and § 30 ὥς αὐτὸν ὑπειλήφατε, δτι σολοικίζει τῇ φωνῇ, βάρβαρον καὶ εὐκαταφρόνητον εἶναι, ἔστι δὲ βάρβαρος οὗτος τῷ μισεῖν οὖς αὐτῷ προσήκε τιμᾶν, τῷ δὲ κακοῦργῆσαι καὶ διορύξαι πράγματα οὐδενὸς λείπεται. In § 77, Apollodorus himself apologizes for his broad brogue or loud voice (λαλεῖν μέγα); the speaker of πρὸς Πανναίνετον makes similar excuses for his διδλεκτος (Or. 37 §§ 52, 55); and a like tribute to the sensitiveness of an Attic audience is paid by the Mytilenæan in Antiphon's de Cæde Herodis (Or. v § 5) δέομαι ὑμῶν ... ἔάν τι τῇ γλώσσῃ ἀμάρτω, συγγνώμην ἔχων μοι καὶ ἡγείσθαι ἀπειρία αὐτὸ μᾶλλον ἢ ἀδικία ἡμαρτῆσθαι. Cf. Cicero Or. §§ 24—27. ἀδυνάτως ἔχει] 'Is quite incapable,' referring mainly to his inexperience and want of facility in speaking. Thus in Antiphon u. s. v § 2 ἢ τοῦ λέγειν ἀδυναμία is contrasted with ἡ ἐμπειρία τῶν πραγμάτων. It is suggested by Blass, Att. Ber. III 405¹ (463²), that ἀδυνάτως refers to feebleness of health, but this appears improbable.

ὁρᾷτε] In a general sense, 'you all of yourselves observe.' Or. 3 Olynth. § 1 τοὺς λόγους... ὁρῶ γιγνομένους.

λέγειν καὶ διδάσκειν] Dem. is particularly fond of coupling together words that are nearly synonymous with one another, e.g. in the next line, εἰδότες καὶ μεμαθηκότες, and in the next, δίκαια καὶ εὖορκα, § 4 ἀκούσαι καὶ μαθεῖν, § 12 λέγειν καὶ ἐπιδεικνύναι, § 18 πεπραγμένα καὶ γεγενημένα, § 29 ὄντι καὶ ζῶντι, § 32 δόντος καὶ ἐπισκῆψαντος, § 47 κοσμεῖν καὶ περιστᾶλιν, § 61 φυλάττετε καὶ μέμνησθε. Also § 16 αἰτίας καὶ ἐγκλήματα (cf.

§ 61), § 2 ἰσχυρὰ καὶ βέβαια. Similarly in Or. 20 § 163 λέγειν καὶ διεξιέναι, 21 § 17 εἰπεῖν καὶ διηγῆσθαι (Huettner). This characteristic of his style is noticed by Dionysius Hal. περὶ τῆς Δημ. δυνάμει 58, and is illustrated by Blass, Att. Ber. III 94¹ (97²).

ἃν ἢ δίκαια—εὖορκα] The relative clause to ταῦτα ψηφίσῃσθε is placed before it partly for increased emphasis, partly to bring δίκαια closer to τὰ δίκαια in the previous context.

2. ἔν' ἐκκρούοντες χρόνους ἐμποιώμεν] 'With the evasive object of wasting time,' or (with Kennedy) 'for the sake of evasion and delay.' The phrase χρόνους ἐμποιεῖν occurs in Or. 9 § 71, 23 § 93. Cf. Or. 47 § 63 διατριβάς ἐμποίων..... τεχνάζων τοῦ χρόνον ἐγγενέσθαι. For ἐκκρούοντες, cf. Or. 54 § 30; 40 § 45 τὴν δίκην ὅτι πλεῖστον χρόνον ἐκκρούειν, ib. 43; and for the general sense, Thuc. III 38 χρόνον διατριβὴν ἐμποιεῖν and Or. 45 § 4, p. 1102, χρόνον γιγνομένου καὶ τῆς γραφῆς ἐκκρουομένης. Liddell and Scott (ed. 6) give a phrase ἐκκρούειν χρόνον, 'to waste time,' and, to prove it, inadvertently refer to the last passage and to the words of the text, where χρόνους clearly comes πεποιηκῶς...εὖ πεποιηκῶς..... διαλύσας ... παραδοὺς ... ἀφεθεὶς] Although all these participles refer to Phormion, who is the subject of the first part of the sentence, the principal verb συκοφαντεῖ refers to Apollodorus. To obviate the harshness of this anacoluthon it has been proposed (by G. H. Schaefer) to follow one of the mss, the Augustanus primus, in reading πεποίηκε for πεποιηκῶς, and also to strike out καὶ before πολλὰ, and place a full stop at ἐγκλημάτων. [But we should still expect ὅμως δ', or ἀλλ' ὅμως. Perhaps it is better to regard this as an instance of the 'nominativus pendens.' P.] The Zürich editors refer to Funkhaenel, quaest. Dem. p. 75 sq.

ἐπειδὴ φέρειν τοῦτον οὐχ οἷός τ' ἐστί] i.e. since (or, at a time when) Phormion cannot submit any longer to the unconscionable claims of Apollodorus (and therefore declines to make any further concessions), the latter has vexatiously instituted the present action. The subject of the subordinate clause appears to be Phormion. For the sense, compare the language ascribed to Apollodorus in § 33 μίσθωσιν ἤθελεν αὐτῷ φέρειν Φορμίων πολλήν...ἐπεὶ δ' οὐ ποιεῖ ταῦτα, τῆρκαῦτα, φησί, δικάζομαι, and especially Or. 45 § 5 ἐπειδὴ ποιεῖν τ' οὐδὲν ᾤετο δεῖν ὧν τῶθ' οὐκ εἰσαγωγίμος] Or. 45 § 5 (of this very trial), παραγράφω

§§ 4—11. Statement of the transactions of Phormion with Pasion and Apollodorus. After Phormion had become his own master, but before he had received the rights of Athenian citizenship, Pasion gave him a lease of the Bank and the Shield-Manufacture. Subsequently Pasion became ill and died, leaving a will whereby Phormion married his former master's widow (Archippe), and became guardian to his younger son (Pasicles). The elder son (Apollodorus) proceeded to appropriate large sums out of the common estate, and the guardians accordingly deemed it prudent on behalf of their ward to determine on a partition of all the effects except the Bank and Shield-Manufacture, leased to the defendant, who was one of the guardians. The defendant paid a moiety of the rent of that property to the elder son, Apollodorus, who when Pasicles came of age discharged the defendant from his liability under the lease and from all further claims. The said property was thereupon divided between the two brothers, the elder exercising his option in favour of the Shield-Manufacture, as the safer though less remunerative busiἀσπιδοπηγεῖον] Or. 45 § 85 ὁ ἐμὸς ὑμῖν πατὴρ (Pasion) χιλίας ἔδωκεν ἀσπίδας.

τὴν πρόκλησιν] Probably a challenge to Apollodorus for the production of the articles of agreement between Pasion and Phormion. On the term in general, see Or. 54 § 27, προκαλοῦνται, n. and infr. § 7 n.

ἤδη καθ' ἑαυτὸν ὄντι] 'Doing business on his own account, as his own master,' no longer subject, as a slave, to the control of another, though still a μέτοικος.

This rendering is supported by C. R. Kennedy and M. Dareste. Similarly in Reiske's index: 'when he had left his master's service, and gone into business for himself, in his own name, at his own risk.' καθ' ἑαυτὸν is often used of being 'by oneself,' separate from others; 21 § 140 καθ' ἑαυτὸν ζῶντι, 10 § 52 γεγῶνασι καθ' αὐτοὺς ἕκαστοι.

προσώφειλε κ.τ.λ.] The defendant has to explain how it comes to pass that Pasion is entered in the articles of agreement as owing eleven talents to the bank. He shows that this sum had been lent by Pasion on the security of certain lands and houses on which Pasion as the creditor, being an Athenian citizen, would have a claim, in the event of the loan not being refunded or the interest regularly paid. As Phormion, the lessee of the banking business, had not yet acquired the rights of citizenship, it was therefore arranged that Pasion should not transfer these securities to Phormion but keep them in his own hands, and credit Phormion with their value: in other words, enter himself in the articles of agreement as debtor to the bank to the amount of eleven talents.

For προσώφειλε, the compound verb followed by the simple ώφειλε where the repetition of the preposition is not necessary, cf. Cic. Catil. iv 1 perferrem...feram. Cf. Or. 53 § 4.

5. ἀπορίαν...φιλεργίαν] 'Not want but thrift,' or (with Kennedy) 'Not on account of poverty, but on account of his industry in business.' In Or. 45 § 33 Apollodorus insinuates that the debt arose from Phormion's mismanagement.

ἔγγειος οὐσία] 'Property in land,' 'real property,' also called φανερὰ οὐσία. Harpocr. ἀφανὴς οὐσία καὶ φανερὰ· ἀφανὴς μὲν ἡ ἐν χρήμασι καὶ σώμασι καὶ σκεύεσι, φανερὰ δὲ ἡ ἔγγειος. Lyisias, fragm. 91, τοῦ νόμου κελεύοντος τοὺς ἐπιτρόπους τοῖς ὀρφανοῖς ἔγγειον τὴν οὐσίαν καθιστάναι (Suidas s. v. ἔγγειον).

ἀργύριον πρὸς ταύτῃ] 'In addition to this he had money of his own (personal property) lent out on interest to the amount of more than fifty talents.' The larger amount so employed shows that he was a usurer by practice or profession. P.]

ἐν οὖν τοῖς πεντήκοντα...ἔνδεκα] We have just been told that Pasion had more than 50 talents of his own money (ἀργύριον ἴδιον) lent out at interest, and we now find that ἐν τοῖς πεντήκοντα ταλάντοις there were 11 talents from the bank-deposits, profitably invested. The latter could hardly be called ἴδιον ἀργύριον, unless the words are used loosely in the general sense of 'personal property' as opposed to ἔγγειος οὐσία or 'real property.' But we should perhaps strike out ἴδιον and attribute its insertion to an accidental repetition of πλέον, as ΙΔΙΟΝ and ΠΛΕΟΝ are not very unlike one another. Blass accepts this, pointing out that ἴδιον is also open to objection on rhythmical grounds. Or again, keeping ἴδιον we might alter ἐν οὖν into ἐπ' οὖν 'in addition to,' 'over and above' the 50 talents. Heraldus proposed σὺν οὖν, and G. H. Schaefer unsuccessfully attempts to show that ἐν may mean 'besides,' by quoting the quasi-adverbial use of ἐν δὲ in Soph. Ai. 675, O. C. 55, and O. T. 27.

ἐνεργά] 'Out on interest,' 'profitably invested,' as opposed to ἀργά 'lying idle.' Or. 27 § 7 τὰ τ' ἐνεργὰ αὐτῶν καὶ ὅσα ἦν ἀργά, § 10 ταῦτα μὲν ἐνεργὰ κατέλιπεν... τὸ δ' ἔργον αὐτῶν πενήτηκοντα μυαί, 56 § 29 τὸ δάνειον... ἐνεργὸν ποιεῖν.

παρακαταθήκη] Plato defin. p. 415 δόμα μετὰ πιστεως. Claims for the repayment of such banking deposits form the subject of two of the forensic orations of Isocrates, the Trapeziticus and the ἀμαρτυρος πρὸς Εὐθύβουν.

6. μήπω τῆς πολιτείας κ.τ.λ.] No one would lend money on the security of land unless in default of payment (Or. 35 § 12) the lender had the right to take possession of such land, and this right of possession was confined to citizens to the exclusion of μέτοικοι (or resident aliens) like Phormion. In a similar case a special exception was once made by the Byzantines: Aristot. Oeconom. II 4 μετοίκων τινῶν ἐπιδεδανεικότων ἐπὶ κτήμασιν οὐκ οὐσης αὐτοῖς ἐγκτήσεως, ἐψηφίσαντο τὸ τρίτον μέρος εἰσφέροντα τοῦ δανείου τὸν βουλόμενον κυρίως ἔχειν τὸ κτήμα (Büchschütz, Besitz und Erwerb im Griechischen Alterthume, pp. 492—3, K. F. Hermann, Rechtsalt. § 13, p. 103⁴ Thahheim).

[On the insecurity of lending money on houses or lands, except for citizens, see Boeckh, P. E. pp. 140 and 654 Lewis², who observes on this passage that 'no resident alien could safely lend money upon houses or other landed property, a privilege which was confined to the citizens.' Of course μήπω οὐσης, 'si nondum esset,' is very different from οὐπω οὐσης, 'cum nondum esset.' P.]

7. τοῦ ἐπικαθημένου] 'The manager, the clerk, of the bank.' Elsewhere Phormion himself is described by Apoll. as τὸν ἐπικαθημένον ἐπὶ τῆς τραπέζης (Or. 49 § 17, cf. 49 § 33) and καθήμενον καὶ διοικοῦντα ἐπὶ τῇ τραπέζῃ (Or. 45 § 33). Isocr. ἀπεκρίναντο), 'the depositions of the persons to whose keeping the will has been entrusted' (cf. Isaëus 6 §§ 7, 27; 7 § 1; 9 §§ 5, 6, 18). In times when there were no probate-courts, it is obvious that the greatest precautions had to be taken to prevent forgeries by interested parties. In Or. 45 § 19 one Cephisophon deposes that his father had left behind him at his death, a document endorsed 'Pasion's Will,' which Apollodorus (ib. §§ 5, 22) denounces as a forgery (οὐδεπώποτε γενομένη...κατεσκευασμένη). The alleged terms are given ib. § 28, quoted in part in ὑπόθεσις l. 6 n. The plural παρ' οἷς is inaccurate, as the will appears to have been in the custody of a single person only.

Probably the only instances we have of a will being in official custody are (1) Isaëus 1 §§ 14, 15, 25, where it is in the hands of one of the ἀστυνόμοι, and (2) an inscription from Amorgos (C. I. G. 2264 u), κατὰ τὰς διαθήκας τὰς κειμένας ἐν ἱερῷ τῆς Ἀφροδίτης καὶ παρ' Εὐνομίδῃ τῷ ἄρχοντι καὶ παρὰ τῷ θεσμοθέτῃ Κτησιφῶντι (Meier and Schömann, p. 52, note 31 ed. Lipsius).

8. πρόκλησις] To establish Pasion's will, Stephanus and two others deposed that they were present when Phormion challenged Apollodorus to open the will, and that the latter refused. In Or. 45 Apollodorus sues Stephanus for having given false evidence in the present case and discusses this challenge in §§ 8—19, denying that any such challenge ever took place or that his father left such a will.

Πασίων ἐτετελευτήκει] Or. 46 § 13 ἐτελεύτησεν ἐπὶ Δυσικλήτου ἀρχοντος (B.C. 370).

τὴν γυναῖκα λαμβάνει κ.τ.λ.] Similarly the father of Dem. left Aphobus guardian of his children, and gave him his widow with a marriage-portion and the use of his house and furniture (Or. 27 § 5). The object of such legacies was to secure a faithful performance of the guardian's trust by connecting him more closely with the family of his ward (cf. 58 § 31). Diogenes Laertius, i 56, quotes a law, perhaps wrongly ascribed to Solon, τὸν ἐπίτροπον τῇ ὀρφανῶν μητρὶ μὴ συνοικεῖν. (Hermann, Privatalt. § 57, 16=p. 154 of Rechtsalt. Thalheim.)

τὸν παῖδα] i.e. Pasioles, who was a minor for 8 years (B.C. 370—362), as appears by comparing § 10 with § 37. He was probably 8 or 10 years old when his father died; his elder brother was 24 (inf. § 22).

τούτου] The claimant Apollodorus, whom the orator purposefully represents as thriftless and unscrupulous at the very first.

λογιζόμενοι] 'The guardians, calculating among themselves, that if, by the terms of the will, it proved necessary to subtract an equivalent to all that the plaintiff should have spent out of the common fund, and then divide the remainder, there would be no surplus whatever, decided in behalf of their ward on an immediate division of the property.'

κατὰ τὰς διαθήκας] goes with ἐξελόντας alone, and not with τὰ λοιπὰ νέμειν. The partition of the property was sufficiently provided for by the law, ἅπαντας τοὺς γνησίους ἰσομοίρους εἶναι τῶν πατρῶων (Isaeus 6 § 25), and did not require to be directed by the will. It may be presumed that the will provided for making payments out of the estate previous to the legal partition of the property.

ἀντιμοιρεῖ] 'Share for share,' cf. § 32 τὰ μητρῶα πρὸς μέρος ἡξίους νέμεσθαι. The adverb does not appear to occur elsewhere, and its form is suspiciously like the late Greek words ἀνωγνυμει, αὐτολεξεῖ, αὐτοψη, παμπληθεῖ, πανενηεῖ. In earlier Greek almost the only instances found are αὐτοβοεῖ (Thuc.) and πανδημει (Thuc. Andoc. Lys. Isocr.). For some others see Kühner-Blass, Gr. Gr., i 2, p. 303.

[A more probable reading would be τούτοις ἐξελόντας ἀντιμοιρίας, 'taking out (and laying aside for the minor) equal sums to those taken on each occasion out of the general property by Apollodorus.' The syntax ἀντιμοιρεῖ νέμειν seems unnatural, to say nothing of the form of the adverb; and ἐξελόντας seems to require a definite accusative. P.] Blass prefers τούτοις (neut. referring to δσα) and takes ἀντιμοιρεῖ with ἐξελόντας.

νέμειν... νέμονται.] Donaldson, Gk. Gr. p. 450, observes that νέμειν is here used 'of a distribution of property by executors; though we have immediately afterwards, νέμονται τὴν ἄλλην οὐσίαν, because the obligation to divide, under the will, stands in a certain opposition to the act of division, which the executors performed with the same amount of care and interest as if they had divided the property among themselves... Afterwards we have (§ 10) ἐνείμαθ' οὗτος πρὸς τὸν ἀδελφόν, of one of the parties immediately interested.' For νέμεσθαι used in the middle voice νείμασθαι] The subject is not the 'brothers,' but the 'guardians,' as is clear from the subsequent verbs νέμονται and ἀπεδίδοσαν.

The active διένειμεν is applied to the father dividing his property among his sons in Or. 43, Marc. § 49 (followed by νειμάμενοι, of the sons) and in Lysias 19 § 46.

9. ἀπεδίδοσαν] The guardians paid Apollodorus the share due to him, viz. half the rent of the bank and shield-manufactory. ἀποδίδοναι is 'to pay a man his due,' as in Isaeus 5 § 21 οἷς ἔδει αὐτὸν ἀποδόντα τὴν τιμὴν, ἡμῶν τὰ μέρη ἀποδοῦναι, and frag. 29 ἀποδεδωκότι τὰς μισθώσεις. Cf. Or. 41 § 9 τὴν τιμὴν; 34 § 13 δάνειον; 15 § 17 χάριν; 16 § 2 ἐθνοίαν. See note on 53 § 10.

ἄχρι μὲν οὖν κ.τ.λ.] 'Down to this date, then, there is not the slightest claim against Phormion in respect of the lease.' For the rather rare construction of ἐγκαλεῖν c. gen. cf. Or. 54 § 2 and Plut. Arist. 10, 9 τῆς βραδυτήτος αὐτοῖς ἐνεκάλει. In § 12 we have ἐγκαλοῦντ' ἀφορμήν.

μισθώσεως, 'lease'; μισθώσεις, 'rents.' Cf. § 33 n.

10. δοκιμασθέντος] The δοκιμασία (see Dict. Antig.) took place on 'coming of age,' usually at 18. Aristotle's Constitution of Athens, 42 § 1 ἐγγράφονται δ' εἰς τοὺς δημότας ὀκτωκαίδεκα ἔτη γεγονότες. § 2 μετὰ δὲ ταῦτα δοκιμάζει τοὺς ἐγγραφέντας ἡ βουλὴ.

ἀφήκατ'...ἀφήκαν] The forms ἀφήκατε and ἀφήκαν and παρέδωκαν §§ 14, 44 are rather unusual. But Isaeus 5 § 1 has ἀφήκαμεν; Dem. 38 § 18, 27 § 3, Dinarch. 1 § 57, Aeschin. 3 § 85, ἀφήκατε; Thuc. 7, 19, 4 ἀφήκαν. Attic writers, however, prefer in the plural the inflexion of the ἀφήκαν τῆς μισθώσεως κ.τ.λ.] Or. 45 § 5 μάρτυρας ὡς ἀφήκα αὐτὸν τῶν ἐγκλημάτων παρέσχετο ψευδεῖς, καὶ μισθώσεώς τινος ἐσκευωρημένης καὶ διαθήκης οὐδεπώποτε γενομένης.

11. αἴρεσιν] The choice lay with him by virtue of being the elder brother (§ 34).

καίτοι κ.τ.λ.] Phormion argues that if the plaintiff had had any private capital of his own in the bank, he would have chosen the banking-business in preference to the manufactory. He did not, and therefore he contends there was no such fund.—

ἰδία ἀφορμὴ is private banking-stock, as opposed to deposits, παρακαταθήκαι (cf. § 11).—τάλαντον = 60 minae.

τὸ μὲν γὰρ—ἀλλοτρίων] 'For the manufactory is a property free from risk, whereas the bank is a business yielding a hazardous (speculative, precarious) revenue from other people's money.' The bank was not a κτῆμα, but only an ἐργασία, not a secure property, but a precarious trading with other people's money.

ἥδιον] The labour and trouble and other disagreeable incidents of manufacturing shields made such a property less desirable in itself than a banking business. But the bank business was speculative, and involved the risk of losing the deposits, and therefore the manufactory, with all its drawbacks, was preferred by Apollodorus, as being at least safe. P.]

§§ 12—17. The plaintiff's claim to a sum of banking-stock alleged to have been held by the defendant may be proved groundless by many arguments: (1) Plaintiff's father is entered in the lease, not as creditor on account of banking-stock assigned to defendant, but actually as debtor to the bank. (2) On the partition of the property, plaintiff put in no claim to such stock. (3) After the termination of defendant's lease of the bank, plaintiff let it to others for the same sum and no less; and did not specially transfer to them any banking-stock besides. (4) The plaintiff during the life of his mother, who was perfectly familiar with all these details, made no demand on the defendant; it was only when she died that he set up a fraudulent claim, not for any banking-stock as now, but for a sum of 3000 dr. The claim was submitted to the arbitration of some relatives of the plaintiff, and upon their

12. πολλὰ—ἐπιδεικνύναι] Or. 20 § 163 πολλὰ δ' ἂν τις ἔχοι λέγειν ἐτι καὶ διεξίεναι.

σημεῖα...τεκμήριον] Or. 54 § 9. συκοφαντεῖν κ.τ.λ.] Kennedy: 'This claim of the plaintiff's to a sum of banking-stock is false and fraudulent.'—ἐγκαλοῦντ' ἀφορμὴν, the first distinct reference in the speech to the nature of the plaintiff's case. He alleges that the defendant had a grant of capital from Pasion and had appropriated it.

τουτονι...τουτῷ...τοῦτον] The first two refer to the defendant, the third to the plaintiff, Apollodorus. The ambiguity arising from a similar pronoun being applied to two different persons, would be readily dispelled by the orator's delivery. Cf. § 42 n.

μισθῶν ἑτέροις κ.τ.λ.] i. e. to Xenon and the others in § 13. The argument is: assume the defendant defrauded the plaintiff of bank-stock amounting to 20 talents. Then the stock in question could not have formed part of the business when the plaintiff let it to the later lessees. The plaintiff then should either have let it to them at lower terms than to the defendant, or have handed over to the bank an equivalent to the stock alleged to be missing. He did neither; he made no fresh transfer and he charged them the same rent. Therefore the property must have been in the same condition as when the defendant originally leased it from the plaintiff's father.—The context compels us to make Apollodorus the subject of the sentence μισθῶν—φανήσεται, but the bank, it will be remembered, became the property not of Apollodorus, but of Pasicles, when the latter came of age and Phormion's lease expired;

we must therefore conclude that the elder brother acted as agent on behalf of his less experienced younger brother.

τοῦ ἴσου ἀργυρίου] viz. 2^t 40^m for the whole business, 1^t for the shield-manufactory, and 1^t 40^m (= 100^m) for the bank (cf. § 11). It has been suggested that τοῦ ἴσου ἀργυρίου is a false statement, but a careful consideration of §§ 11 and 37 shows that this is not the case.

13. τοῦδε...αὐτὸν] Defendant and plaintiff respectively.—νῦν 'in that case,' referring to the hypothesis εἰ—ἀπεστερεῖτο.—αὐτὸν, standing first in the clause, must mean ipsum.

The sense is: 'Surely, if Apollodorus had been defrauded by Phormion of capital supplied by Pasion, he would himself (on that supposition) have had to provide capital from other sources, and deliver it to those new lessees.' Otherwise, he could not have got the same amount of rent.

ἐμισθώσαν] Granted the lease (on behalf of Pasicles). Below we have ἐμισθώσαντο, referring, as usual, to the lessees.

αὐτὴν] 'Alone'; explained by οὐ παρέδωκαν ἰδίαν ἀφορμὴν.

14. ἐμισθώσαν ... παρέδωκαν] The plurals refer to the two brothers. For παρέδωκαν cf. § 10 on ἀφῆκαν.

ἐλευθέρους τ' ἀφείσαν] Or. 29 §§ 25, 31 τὸν Μιλύαν ἐλεύθερον εἶναι ἀφελόντα, 47 § 55 ἀφειμένη ἐλευθέρᾳ...ἀφείθη ἐλευθέρᾳ, § 72 ἀφείτο...ἐλευθέρᾳ. Xenon, Euphraeus and the other lessees appear (like Phormion) to have been slaves originally. The family show their gratitude for their services by giving them freedom (ὥς μεγάλ' εὐ πεπονθότες). It is so translated by M. Dareste. G. H. Schaefer and C. R. Kennedy (perhaps less satisfactorily) understand the words: 'set free from all further claims'; 'gave them a complete discharge': a sense which is at first sight partly supported by καὶ οὐκ ἐδικάζοντο below.

ὥς ἐτελεύτησεν] The speaker insinuates that Apoll. purposely waited till his mother's death, as her familiarity with all the details of her late husband's property would have thwarted his plots against Phormion. Her death is described by Apollodorus in Or. 50 § 60, 'While I was abroad my mother lay ill and was at death's door, and therefore little able to help in retrieving my affairs. It was just six days after my return that, when she had seen me and spoken to me, she breathed her last, when she no longer had such control over her property as to be able to give me all that she desired.' The death took place in Feb. b.c. 360.

πρὸς αἷς] She had left Phormion's children 2000 drachmas, but Apollodorus claims more than that sum also as his own. His avaricious and mean character is shown by his claim to a χιτωνίσκος, a chemise or 'slave's frock,' perhaps. A man who would make such demands was little likely to omit his present claims, if he had then believed in the justice of them. P.] χιτωνίσκον] Or. 21 § 216 θολόματιον προέσθαι καὶ μικροῦ γυμνὸν ἐν τῷ χιτωνίσκῳ γενέσθαι.

15. ἐπιτρέψας κ.τ.λ.] The plaintiff submitted the claims to the private arbitration of Deinias and Nicias (§ 17), his own father-in-law and brother-in-law respectively. Pollux: ἔλεγον δὲ ἐπιτρέψαι δαίταν, καὶ ἡ δαίτα ἐκαλεῖτο ἐπιτροπή.

δοῦναι δωρεάν] By 'making a present' of the 3000 drachmae, Phormion satisfies Apollodorus without admitting his legal claim to the sum. Or. 19 § 170; 42 § 19; Isaëus 2 § 31 διήτησαν ἡμᾶς ἀποστήναι ὧν οὗτος ἀμφισβήτησε καὶ δοῦναι δωρεῖαν· οὐ γὰρ ἔφασαν εἶναι ἄλλην ἀπαλλαγὴν οὐδεμίαν, εἰ μὴ μεταλήψονται οὗτοι τῶν ἐκείνου.

δωρεῖα is the form found in inscriptions before and during the time of Dem. δωρεὰ is first found as early as 403 B.C. (see note on Dem. Lept. § 2).

τὸ προσόν] Not the 2000 drachmae of § 14; for they were already given by the mother (ἔδωκεν ἐκείνῃ), but the 'additional articles' χιτωνίσκος καὶ θεράπαινα. [τὸ προσόν may however refer to πρὸς αἷς κ.τ.λ. supra. He got the 3000 and the 2000 also that had been left to Phormion's boys. He got from him 5000 in all, and gave him a full release from all further claims; and yet now again he says Phormion has kept back some of Pasion's money! But (he argues) the discharge then given justifies the παραγραφή now put in. P.]

§§ 18—21. Anticipation of the arguments likely to be brought forward by the plaintiff. He will repeat what he stated before the arbitrator, that his mother destroyed his father's papers at the defendant's instigation. If so (1) how came the plaintiff to make a partition of his patrimony, without any papers to determine its amount? Unless those claims were false and fraudulent, which the plaintiff will scarcely admit, he must have gained possession of his father's papers, and his mother could not have made away with them. (2) Why was no question raised when the plaintiff's younger brother came of age and was receiving from his guardians an account of their trust? (3) On what papers did the plaintiff base all his many law-suits for the recovery of large sums due to his father?

division of the patrimony decided on by the guardians in consequence of the elder brother spending largely out of the common fund, § 8 fin. This event took place eighteen years before the date of the speech; which, if we could assume that the partition was in the same year as the father's death, viz. 370, would belong to B.C. 352. This however we cannot assume, indeed the language of § 8, πολλὰ ἀναλίσκειν, κ.τ.λ., implies that the elder brother's course of extravagance lasted some time before the partition was decided on. We may therefore perhaps place the partition in B.C. 368, and the speech in B.C. 350. See Introd. p. xxvii f.

famous general Timotheus, under pressure of political exigencies, in the years 374 to 372 B.C., borrowed more than forty-four minae from the banker Pasion, on whose death his son Apollodorus sues Timotheus for payment in a speech still extant, belonging probably to the year B.C. 362. § 22. Argument from the silence of plaintiff's younger brother. Pasicles, as a minor, had been much more liable to be wronged by the defendant, who as testamentary guardian had control over his ward's property. Pasicles makes no complaint. Therefore (it is tacitly assumed) he had no complaint to make. A fortiori defendant is not likely to have wronged the plaintiff, who at his father's death was a man of four and twenty, and fully able to defend himself.

Φορμίωνα τουτονί] τουτονί need not refer to Apollodorus, but may be taken with Φορμίωνα, cf. inf. Ἀπολλοδώρου τουτουί, and §§ 15, 18, 26, 28, 47, 57.

κύριος...ἐπίτροπος] Cf. Or. 38 § 6 τῶν ἐπιτρόπων οἱ μετὰ τὸν ἐκείνου θάνατον τῶν ἡμετέρων ἐγένοντο κύριοι. κύριος here refers to the property, ἐπίτροπος to the person of the ward (Schömann on Isæus i § 10).

σὲ δέ] so. ἂν ἡδίκηι. Notice the double force of the negative, οὐ δῆπου οὐκ ἂν ἡδίκηι, 'Surely he would not have abstained from wronging one who had been left a minor by his father, and over whose property he had a legal power and authority, as having been left guardian of it, and yet have wronged you,' &c. So inf. § 46 οὐδὲ τὸν Φορμίωνα ἐκεῖνος οὐχ ὀρᾷ. Expectabam, οὐ δῆπου σὲ μὲν ἂν ἡδίκηι, τὸν δὲ παῖδα οὐ. Shilleto, De Fals.

οὐδὲν ἐγκαλεῖ] 'Brings no claim against Phormion,' i.e. for property of his father's withheld. Cf. Or. 45 §§ 83, 84, where Apollodorus meets the objection arising from the silence of Pasicles by broaching a suspicion that he is his half-brother only and by insinuating he is really a son of Archippe and Phormion. 'Say no more, pray, of Pasicles; no! let him becalled yourson, Phormion, not your master; and my opponent (he is bent upon it)—not my brother.'

§§ 23—25. The speaker now passes from the arguments in support of the main issue (or the case upon its merits) to those on which the defendant raises a special plea in bar of action.

The plaintiff's case cannot come before the court because he has given the defendant a discharge from the original lease of the Bank and Manufactory, and a second discharge ὧν μὴ εἶναι δίκας] Infin. in relative clause influenced by λέγοντος. 'Among other cases in which an action cannot be maintained, those especially in which a discharge and release have been given or received.'

εἰ γὰρ κ.τ.λ.] The sense is, 'If it is just that, when once a case has been tried, it should not be tried again, even although the defeated litigant might fairly plead that the court had been imposed upon, a fortiori there is no ground for re-opening the question when a man has judged his own case and has palpably decided against himself by giving and receiving a discharge.'

αὐτοῦ...καταγνοὺς] The two subsequent participles are subordinate in construction to καταγνοὺς. 'He who has clearly condemned (given a verdict against) himself by both granting and getting a release and discharge.' Madvig, Gr. Synt. § 176, d.

ἀφείς καὶ ἀπαλλάξας] It is clear the words do not mean the same thing, for below we have γέγονεν ἀμφοτέρω καὶ γὰρ ἀφῆκε καὶ ἀπῆλλαξε. Similarly 37 § 1 and 38 § 1 after ἀφείς καὶ ἀπαλλάξας we have γεγενημένων ἀμφοτέρων, and in 37 § 19 after ὧν ἂν ἀφῆ καὶ ἀπαλλάξῃ τις we have ἀμφοτέρ' ἐστὶ πεπαγμένα.

ἀφιέναι is very frequently used of the lender, or the landlord, who, on settlement of his claims, releases the borrower or the tenant from all further liability (§§ 10, 15, 16, 17, 24; 45 §§ 5, 40). Similarly of a ward releasing his guardian from all further claims, in 38 §§ 3, 4, 6, 18, 27; and of a creditor forgiving a debt, 53 §§ 8, 13. Cf. 56 §§ 26, 28, 29.

ἀπαλλάττειν often refers to the debtor or tenant getting quit of his creditor or landlord by discharging or compromising the debt (34 § 22 τοὺς δανείσαντας ἀπῆλλαξεν, 49 § 17; 53 § 11; 33 § 9 and Isaeus Or. 5 Dicaeog.

αὐτῶν πάλιν εἰκότως δικάζοιτο; οὐδέμῃαν δῆπου.
διόπερ τοῦτο πρῶτον ἔγραψεν ὁ τὸν νόμον θεὸς ὦν μὴ

§ 28 ἀπαλλάσσειν τοὺς χρήστας). Settling a cross account between lessor and lessee (e.g. Apoll. and Phormion) would involve a double release and quittance on either side. Cf. 33 § 12 τῶν συναλλαγμάτων ἀφεῖμεν καὶ ἀπηλλάξαμεν ἀλλήλους ὥστε μήτε τούτῳ πρὸς ἐμέ μήτ' ἐμοὶ πρὸς τοῦτον πράγμ' εἶναι μηδέν, and § 3 ὅσα μὲν ἐμοὶ καὶ τούτῳ ἐγένετο συμβόλαια, πάντων ἀπαλλαγῆς καὶ ἀφέσεως γενομένης.

The present passage is the subject of the following article in Harpocration. ἀφεῖς καὶ ἀπαλλάξας: τὸ μὲν ἀφεῖς ὅταν ἀπολύσῃ τις τινα τῶν ἐγκλημάτων ὧν ἐνεκάλει αὐτῷ, τὸ δὲ ἀπαλλάξας, ὅταν πείσῃ τὸν ἐγκαλοῦντα ἀποστήναι καὶ μηκέτι ἐγκαλεῖν (recte)· Δημοσθένης ἐν τῇ ὑπὲρ Φορμίωνος παραγραφῇ. ἔστι δὲ καὶ οὕτως εἰπεῖν, ὅτι ἀφίησι μὲν τις αὐτῶν μόνον ὧν ἂν ἐγκαλῇ, ἀπαλλάττει δὲ, ὅταν μὴδὲ ἄλλον τινὰ λόγον ὑπολιπῇται ἑαυτῷ πρὸς τὸν ἐγκαλοῦμενον. Δημοσθένης ἐν τῇ ὑπὲρ Φορμίωνος παραγραφῇ “ὅν ἀπαλλαγὴ τις αὐτῷ γένηται παρ' ὑμῶν κυρία” (§ 2). Cf. Or. 37 §§ 1, 16, 19; Or. 38 §§ 1, 5; Or. 33 § 3. In Bekker's Anecdota pp. 202, 469 we find the same explanation as that which is given in the first part of Harpocration's article.

In Shilleto's copy of Kennedy's translation I find a manuscript note in which, after quoting the explanation given in Bekker's Anecdota, he adds: “This is a clear statement and exactly in accordance with the meaning of the words: ἀφίημι, ‘I let go, one whom I have a hold of’; ἀπαλλάττω, ‘I get rid of one who has a hold of me.’

So I ἀφίημι a man on whom I have a claim by my condoning the debt, by receiving payment, postponing it, &c.; I ἀπαλλάττω a man who has a claim on me, by his condoning the debt, by my paying it, by my putting off the payment-day. So he who ἀφίησιν, ἀπαλλάττεται [passive]; he who ἀπαλλάττει, ἀφίεται [passive]. I cannot conceive anything plainer.” But owing to the twofold use of ἀπαλλάττειν, both of setting free and getting rid of another, the question is not really quite as simple as this would make it appear. Thus in Isocr. Trapez. § 26, after ἀφειμένος and ἀφείσθαι τῶν ἐγκλημάτων have been used in §§ 23, 25 of one who is ‘released from all claims,’ the same person is described as ἀπηλλαγμένος τῶν ἐγκλημάτων, which is possibly a middle use, ‘having got himself quit of all claims.’—The distinction drawn in Platner's Process i 146, is that ἀφεῖναι regards the release from an existing obligation mainly from the point of view of the person granting the release, whereas ἀπαλλάττειν implies a twofold transaction and an agreement on the part of both the persons concerned.—Kennedy, on p. 230 of his translation of Dem. Pant., approves of Pabst's supposition that ‘the two Greek verbs have no distinct meanings’; and similarly Mr Paley held that ‘although a shade of difference might be traced, and perhaps originally existed between them, they had practically become synonyms.’ Reasons have been given above for dissenting from this view.

τοῖς ἀδικουμένοις...τῶν ψευδομένων] i.e. the legal term of five years would be quite sufficient for injured parties to recover their rights if their claim were an honest one, whereas those who set up false claims, (a pointed thrust at the present plaintiff,) would be convicted by the fact that they had allowed the statutable period to elapse without taking action. (ἔλεγχον ἔσεσθαι sc. si per tot annos tacuissent. G. H. Schaefer.) τῶν ψευδομένων is sometimes wrongly supposed to imply that as in Roman law there was no statute of limitations against right of recovery of things stolen, (quod subreptum erit, eius rei aeterna auctoritas esto), so in Attic law there was none in case of falsehood, i.e. that even after five years a claim based on a false assertion might be disputed. (Telfy, Corpus iuris Attici §1587, and Hermann, Privatalt. § 71, 6 = Rechtsalt. p. 122* Thalheim.) Here τῶν ψευδομένων merely means τῶν συκοφαντούντων.

τὸν νόμον ἀντὶ τούτων κ.τ.λ.] That is, 'The contracting parties themselves, and the witnesses to that contract, could not live for ever; and therefore the legislator laid down the law, with its limit of time, designing that, in lieu of living witnesses, the destitute should find therein a deathless witness on the side of right.'

§§ 28—32. Plaintiff's probable reply anticipated. Surely he will not ask his audience to resent the defendant's marriage with the plaintiff's mother. Among bankers, there are many precedents for such an arrangement, and on grounds of expediency, as the only means of keeping up the business, Pasion acted prudently in directing that Phormion should marry his widow and thereby binding him more closely to his own household.

As to the point of honour, 'you may turn up your nose at Phormion's marrying into your family, but remember that in high character, he is more like your father than you are.'

That the marriage was directed by Pasion is not only expressly proved by the will, but is inferentially concluded from the plaintiff's own admission; for on his mother's death he permitted her two children by Phormion to share her property equally with himself and Pasicles, her two children by Pasion, and thus allowed the legality of this second marriage.

28. θαυμάζω κ.τ.λ.] Or. 37 § 44 ἔγωγ', ὅ τι ποτ' ἐρεῖ πρὸς ὑμᾶς, θαυμάζω.

τί ποτ' ἐστὶν ἂ] Cf. 54 § 13 n. μηδὲν ὀρώντες] i. e. ἦν καὶ μηδὲν ὀράτε. Goodwin, Moods and Tenses, § 52, 1; § 109, 6; §§ 472, 841, ed. 1889.

παρὰ τῶν κυρίων ἀπαλλαγείς ὥσπερ ὁ τούτου πατήρ] A very close parallel. The banker referred to, like the plaintiff's father, had himself been a slave once, had been set free by his masters, and had given his wife in marriage to one who was formerly his slave. Cf. § 43 fin. and § 48 ἐγένετο Πασίων Ἀρχεστράτου. On ἐκεῖνος see Or. 40 § 28.

29. ὄντι καὶ ζῶντι] Who is still 'alive and in being.' The redundancy is intended to strengthen the emphasis. Cf. De Corona § 72 τὴν Μινῶν λείαν καλουμένην τὴν Ἑλλάδα οὖσαν ὀφθῆναι ζώντων καὶ ὄντων Ἀθηναίων.

τελευτησάσης...ἔδωκε τὴν θυγατέρα] After the will had been made, the wife apparently died before the husband and the latter then gave his daughter in marriage to his former servant. The first ἔδωκε therefore must mean, 'directed in his will that, after his own death, his widow should marry Hermaeus.' M. Dareste, however, supposes that there is no reference to any will. He holds that the woman had either been divorced from her husband, or was not his lawful wife.

30. ὑμῖν...τοῖς γένει πολίταις κ.τ.λ.] A compliment to the audience, designed to smooth the way for what might otherwise prove an invidious reference to the money-making of bankers in general and to the wealth of Pasion in particular. 'For you, gentlemen of Athens, you who are citizens by birth, it is discreditable to prize any amount of money, however large, more highly than that honourable birth (lit. 'no amount of wealth is honourable for you to accept in place of your free birth'); but those who (like Pasion) have received the rights of citizenship as a free gift either from yourselves or from others, and who, thanks in the first instance to their good fortune, were deemed worthy of the selfsame privileges, by reason of having prospered in money-making and acquired more wealth than their neighbours, must do their best to preserve their pecuniary advantages.'

The sense is, 'though it would be wrong for those who are citizens by birth to prefer wealth to citizenship, it would also be unreasonable for those who are citizens by adoption to be careless of the wealth which has gained them that very honour and privilege.'

αὐτὸν ὑβρίζων κ.τ.λ.] Disgracing, outraging, casting contumely on, himself and his family. Though you threatened Phormion with a γραφὴ ὕβρεως for marrying your mother (Or. 45 § 3—4), your father was guilty of no ὑβρις to his family in arranging for that marriage.

ἀνάγκη] Necessitate, 'by a family tie.' Isocr. ad Dem. 10, Lys. 32 § 5.

ὑμῖν...ὑμετέραν] 'You and yours.' 'Your family.' Cf. Or. 55 § 5, n.

τὸ τέταρτον μέρος] The property is divided into four parts, one of which is taken by Apollodorus, another by his brother Pasicles. The other two go to the children of the second marriage, who must have been two in number.

§§ 33—35. Anticipation of plaintiff's arguments, continued. (He will impudently assert (1) that his father made no will and that the document produced was a forgery; and (2) that the reason why he forbore to press the charge at the proper time was that defendant promised to pay him a high rent.

In answer to (1), if there was no will, how came the plaintiff to succeed to the lodging-house which he holds in accordance with the terms of the will? In answer to (2), it is in evidence that after the termination of the defendant's lease, the plaintiff let the business to others; had the plaintiff any lawful claim on the defendant, he ought certainly to have brought it forward at the time of the subsequent lease.

ἀναιδεστάτους] The 'vocabulary of denunciation' in the private speeches of Dem. includes adjectives such as ἀναιδής (37 §§ 3, 27; 54 § 38), ἀναίσχυρος, πονηρός, κακός, δίκος, μαρός, βδελυρός, ἀνόσιος, ἀκάθαρτος, σχέτλιος; the adverbs ἀναιδῶς, αἰσχρῶς, δόικως, πλεονεκτικῶς; the substantives ἀναίδεια, ἀναισχυντία, πονηρία, αἰσχροκέρδεια, πανουργία, μαρτία, κακουργία; and the verbs ἀναισχυρτεῖν and πανουργεῖν (W. In Or. 45 § 42 Apollodorus himself, in criticising the διαθήκη, concludes with the words πάντα πεπλασμένα καὶ κατεσκευασμένα ἐλέγχεται. Cf. ib. 29 πλάσμα ὅλον ἐστὶν ἡ διαθήκη, and 41 § 24 σκευώρημα.

μίσθωσιν...φέρειν] We have frequently had μίσθωσιν in the sense of 'lease' (§§ 6, 7, 10 bis, 11, 12, 23, 24; also in § 60); we here find it used like μίσθωμα for 'rent' (§§ 36, 37 bis, 38, 41, 51 bis); cf. Or. 28 § 12 ἀποδέδωκε τὴν μίσθωσιν followed by λαβὼν τὴν πρόσδοον. Both senses occur in § 9 supra. It sometimes means a 'tenancy,' the 'terms of a tenancy,' or 'the conditions of a lease' (27 § 59; 37 §§ 5, 6); and, once in Dem. (56 § 25), 'hiring.'

34. πρεσβεῖα] By right of primogeniture (39 § 29). Pollux: πρεσβεῖά ἐστι γέρα τὰ τοῖς πρεσβυτέροις δεδομένα. The recognition of any such right seems quite exceptional in Attic law. See Hermann's Rechtsalt. § 9, p. 62⁴ note 2, Thalheim.

τὴν συνοικίαν] "It should be observed that the Attic language distinguishes between dwelling-houses (oikiai) and lodging-houses (συνοικίαι); accidentally indeed a dwelling-house might be let out for lodgings, and a lodging-house have been inhabited by the proprietor himself" (Boeckh, Publ. Econ. i 90). Apoll. may have already had a household of his own and his father may therefore have assigned him a συνοικία (A. Schaefer, Dem. u. s. Zeit. iii 2, 183). Cf. § 6 ἐπὶ συνοικίας, n.

35. ὑποσχέσεων] He will tell you, perhaps, that Phormion promised to pay a good rent (ὑπισχνεῖτο § 33), and so for a long time he withheld further action.

χρόνον πολὺν] 'For a long time' (ten years as appears by § 37), acc. of duration of time, to be taken with μισθωταὶ ἐγίγοντο. Kennedy seems to be mistaken in taking it with τοῦδ' ἀπηλλαγμένου and translating 'who, long after the defendant's retirement, took a lease.' On the contrary, the new lease must have been granted not long after the defendant's connexion with the business ended, as eighteen years elapsed from the division of the property to the date of the speech, and the first eight belong to Phormion's lease and the last ten to the later lease of Xenon, &c. (cf. §§ 37, 19, 12). The general sense is this:

We have proved that, after Phormion had given up the bank, others became and long remained lessees (§ 13) of it. Apollodorus ought, the moment they took it, to have looked after his dues, and seen that all his money was in the business. But he made no claim at all, nay even thanked Phormion for his good services in the manage-ment.

§§ 36—42. The plaintiff will complain that he is utterly destitute and ruined. You must know then that, from the debts due to his father and the rents due to himself, he has received more than forty talents.

Oh, but he has lavishly spent his money in the public service on trierarchal and choragic charges! On the contrary, all that he gave on his own account after the property was divided, barely amounted to twenty minae. Even assuming his boasted liberality to be true, that is no reason for giving the defendant's property to the plaintiff, and thus reducing the former to poverty, while we see the latter squandering his money in his customary manner.

36. μισθώσεων] 'Rents.' Cf. § 33.

37. τὴν τράπεζαν] The bank alone is mentioned, but it must not be forgotten that Phormion had a lease of the shield-manufactory as well.

ὀγδοήκοντα μνᾶς] The share of Apollodorus, eighty minae, is half the annual rent of the whole business, the shield-manufactory and the bank. Consistently with this, the whole rent, as stated in § 51, Or. 45 § 32, is 2 talents and 40^m (i.e. 160^m) per annum. Of this (as appears from § 11) one talent was paid for the shield-manufactory, and one talent and 40^m for the bank.

Εὐφραίῳ] In Or. 49 πρὸς Τιμόθεον § 44, Phormion and Euphraeus are mentioned by Apollodorus, as having paid from Pasion's bank certain sums of money to persons named by Timotheus. Like Phormion, Euphraeus had risen from a subordinate position, to be one of the lessees of the bank. Cf. § 14 ἐλευθέρους ἀφείσαν, π.

τάλαντον] This is the rent of the shield-manufactory alone, as appears from § 11 τὸ (ἀσπιδο-πηγείον) τάλαντον ἐφερεν. It is this rent alone that is here referred to. Xenon and his partners paid a total sum of 2^ε 40^m for the whole business, consisting of the manufactory and the bank. The rent of the manufactory (1^ε) belonged to Apollodorus, that of the bank to Pasicles (1^ε 40^m). The rent thus paid for the whole business was the same as that which had been paid by Phormion (τοῦ ἴσου ἀργυρίου, § 12). It is from not understanding this, that Voemel was led to conjecture τάλαντον καὶ δισχιλίας, i.e. 1^ε 20^m = 80^m = the sum paid by Phormion to Apollodorus. But it was only the total rent that was the same in both cases; the way in which it was divided between the brothers was different.

38. ἐτῶν ἴσως εἴκοσι] In § 19 the interval is more strictly stated at eighteen years. It has been suggested by Mr A. Wright that it is here put at 'nearly 20' to help the audience to follow the arithmetic. If so, the item ἐνείματο will become 10^ε, though it is really less; and the half of the item εἰσπράξατο may be put at 10^ε, though it is really more. But the total would remain the same.

ὅσ' ἐνείματο, ὅσ' εἰσπράξατο, ὅσ' ἐλήφε] 'Anaphora' with 'asyndeton'; cf. § 53; 27 § 38; 30 § 30; 37 §§ 36, 37, 44; 38 § 28; 54 § 28 (Kirk's Demosthenic Style, p. 10).

 § 85, Apollodorus appeals to his father's trierarchies, and in witnesses, Stephanus, with having never done the smallest service to the state by τριηραρχία or χορηγία or any other λητουρ-γία whatever.

The plaintiff had really some good reason for being proud of his trierarchal services. Among the orations of Dem. a speech has come down to us (Or. 50, πρὸς Πολυκλέα) in which Apol-lodorus states that being ap-χορηγίας] One of these services of Apollodorus is mentioned in an inscription of 352—1 B.C., [Οἰνητ]ς παίδων [ἐνί-κα]. 'Απολλόδωρος Πασί[ωνος] Ἀχαρνέως ἐχορήγει. Δυσιάδης ['Αθηναῖος ἐδίδασκε]. Ἀριστόδημος ἡ[ρχε]. C. I. A. II 3, 1238.

τόνδε μὲν...τούτον δ'] Defendant and plaintiff respectively. εἰς ἅπερ εἴωθεν ἀναλ.] A deliberately vague innuendo, which is partly justified by the details of a subsequent section (§ 45). In Or. 45 § 77, Apollodorus says with some self-complacency: τῷ μέτριος κατὰ πάσας τὰς εἰς ἐμᾶντὸν δαπάνας εἶναι πολλὸ τοῦτου καὶ τοιούτων ἐτέρων εὐτακτότερον ζῶν ἂν φανεῖται.

§§ 43—48. As to the defendant's wealth, and his having got it from your father's estate, you should be the last man in all the world to use such language. The defendant, like your own father, made his money by faithful and honest service, by personal integrity of character, and by that good credit and fair fame which in the commercial world is the best kind of capital.

Again, if you claim the defendant's property on the ground that he was once your father's slave, then Antimachus, a surviving son of your father's former master, might go still further, and claim your own estate and the defendant's too; yet, though now in a humble position, far below his merits and his proper rank, he does not go to law with them, because they have money to spend while he is in destitution.

Instead of making the most of the good fortune by which your father and the defendant alike received the rights of freedom and citizenship, you are heartless enough to cast contumely on yourself and your parents, and on Athens too, for granting her privileges to people like yourself; you are senseless enough to forget that, by insisting that the defendant's former servitude should not be brought up against him, we are really speaking on your side and defending your own position. The rule, that you lay down to the detriment of the defendant, can as easily be advanced against yourself by the house to which your father was once a slave.

πόθεν—κέκτηται Φ.] In Or. 45 § 80, Apollodorus unfairly says of Phormion, εἰ ἦν δίκαιος, πένης ἂν ἦν τὰ τοῦ δεσπότου διοικήσας. ...Had I dragged you off to prison as a thief caught in the act, with your present property clapped upon your back, ...and had I, supposing you denied the theft, demanded the name of the person from whom you received it, to whose name would you have appealed? οὐτε γάρ σοι πατὴρ παρέδωκεν, οὐθ' εἶδες.

ἐκτήσαθ' εὐρῶν] 'Got it by good luck' as a 'godsend,' a 'windfall,' a εὐρημα or Ερμαῖον. Passages like the present and the parallel from Or. 45 § 81 (given above) should be quoted in Liddell and Scott (s. v. εὐρῶ, 4).

Ἀρχεστράτῳ] Isocr. Trapez. § 43 Πασίων δὲ Ἀρχέστρατόν μοι ἀπὸ τῆς τραπέζης ἐπὶ τὰ ταλάντων ἐγγυητὴν παρέσχεν. (A. Schaefer, Dem. u. s. Zeit. III 2, 131.)

ἐπιστεύθη] 'Won his master's confidence,' 'was trusted.' So in Or. 50 § 56, Apollodorus describes the wide extent of his father's connexion and good credit (ἐπεξενῶσθαι πολλοῖς καὶ πιστευθῆναι ἐν τῇ Ἑλλάδι).

commercial world and the money-market it is thought a wonderful thing, when the same person shows himself to be both honest and diligent.' The order is: θαυμαστὸν ἡλίκον ἐστὶν ἀνθρώποις ἐργαζομένοις ἐν ἐμπορίῳ καὶ (ἐργαζομένοις) χρήμασι, τὸν αὐτὸν δόξαι φιλεργὸν καὶ εἶναι χρηστὸν, i.e. a reputation for business-like habits and a really honest character, when combined in the same person, have a striking influence in the money-market and the commercial world.

ἐν should be taken with ἐμπορίῳ only, the construction being (as G. H. Schaefer notices) ἐργάζεσθαι ἐν ἐμπορίῳ with the preposition, and ἐργάζεσθαι χρήμασιν without. Cf. Or. 57 § 31, ἐν τῇ ἀγορᾷ ἐργάζεσθαι with Or. 33 § 4, where τῆς ἐργασίας τῆς κατὰ θάλατταν is followed by τούτοις (sc. τοῖς χρήμασι) πειρώμαι ναυτικοῖς ἐργάζεσθαι.

δόξαι is slightly contrasted with εἶναι, the outward reputation for business habits with the inward and inherent honesty (cf. ἔφν χρηστός below). G. H. Schaefer says, 'dativus regitur a verbo δόξαι. Deinde τὸ ἐξῆς est: τὸν αὐτὸν δόξαι εἶναι φιλεργὸν καὶ χρηστὸν.' But the position of δόξαι and εἶναι makes against this construction. Cf. Aesch. Theb. 592 οὐ γὰρ δοκεῖν ἀριστος ἀλλ' εἶναι θέλει.

It is the combination of δόξαι φιλεργὸν and εἶναι χρηστὸν that is insisted on, because a forger, for instance, might have all the air of a painstaking man of business without being really χρηστός: and vice versa, a man of unblemished morale might never get a name for financial skill, or even ordinary business-like habits.

οὔτε — οὔτε] 'As then his masters did not bequeath to Pasion this virtue, but his honesty was natural, so neither did Pasion bequeath it to Phormion; for he would have made you honest rather than him, had it been in his power.'

πίστις ἀφορμὴ] 'If you don't know that for money-making the best capital of all is good credit; then, what do you know?' ἀφορμὴ] Cf. § 12 n.

χωρὶς...πατρὶ] An accidental iambic line. See Isocr. Paneg. § 170 n.

§§ 49—52. The defendant's management of the family property was the very saving of the business, and in this and many other respects he has been a great benefactor to the plaintiff's father and to the plaintiff himself; and yet the latter is now demanding a verdict, which, if granted, will turn the defendant out of house and home, a ruined bankrupt, like those whom we remember. The plaintiff's father, esteeming the defendant more highly than his own son, wisely and prudently left him manager of his leases when he died, besides showing his esteem for him during his lifetime. And that esteem was well deserved, for while the other bankers, to whose losses allusion has just been made, did business on their own account, and therefore had to pay no rent to another, and were nevertheless ruined; the defendant not only paid a rent for the bank but kept up the business for the family of the plaintiff, who, so far from being grateful, takes no account of all this, but even persecutes and calumniates him. Our friend, if for a moment we may call him so, little thinks that honesty is the best policy (as is proved by the defendant's prosperity). The plaintiff at any rate is a case in point; he has (if we are to believe him) lost all his money; had he been a man of sound sense he would not have thrown it away.

49. ἐκβαλεῖν] In Or. 45 κατὰ Στεφάνου A § 70, Apollodorus taunts Stephanus (one of Phormion's witnesses in the present trial) with turning his own uncle out of his patrimony for arrears of debt: τοκίσων... ἐξέβαλες ἐκ τῆς πατρῶας οὐσίας.

'Examine the nature of his property closely and you will soon see whose it really is, and into whose hands it will fall, if (which heaven forbid) the court is misled into condemning him.' The property consists largely of deposits at the bank, invested in different speculations, and incapable of being realized at a moment's notice. If Phormion has to pay damages, there will at once be a run upon his bank; his customers, to secure their property before it is paid away in damages, will claim their ἐλαύνεις διώκεις συκοφαντεῖς] 'Harass, prosecute, calumniate.' In the Paris ms διώκεις comes rather feebly after the stronger word συκοφαντεῖς. The order adopted in the text is to some extent confirmed by the Rhetorician Tiberius (περὶ σχημάτων, c. 31), who refers to this passage as an instance of a figure of speech described by another Rhetorician (Alexander, περὶ σχημάτων, c. 10) as ἐπὶ πλείον ἐπὶ τοῦ αὐτοῦ νοήματος ἐπιμονὴ μετὰ αὐξήσεως. His words are: ἐπιμονὴ δὲ ἐστὶν ὅταν τις πλείω ῥήματα ὁρθὰ ἀλλήλοις ἐπιβάλλῃ, ὡς ἐν τῷ ὑπὲρ Φορμίωνος πρὸς τὸν Ἀπολλόδωρον, ἀγεις, ἐλαύνεις, διώκεις, συκοφαντεῖς. δεινῶσιν τὸ σχῆμα εἶναι. The insertion of ἀγεις in this quotation is probably due to a reminiscence of a similar passage in § 47 ἀγεις εἰς μέσον, δεικνύεις, ἐλέγχεις.

οὐ παύσει κ.τ.λ.] 'Do stop, and make up your mind to this truth, that being honourable pays a man better than being very wealthy.'

sense γοῦν often takes the secondary meaning 'for instance.'

§§ 53—57. But though (for the sake of argument) the speaker has pointed out the results which would ensue, if the defendant were condemned, he protests that he can see no ground for such condemnation. Plaintiff brings forward his charge ever so many years after the alleged offence, and meanwhile has found time for incessant litigation, especially in public causes where his personal interests were but partially affected. While prosecuting so many others, how came he to let Phormion alone? The presumption is that the plaintiff was never really wronged by him, and that the claim now put in, so long after the event, is utterly false and groundless.

To meet these charges, it will be much to the purpose to produce evidence of the bad character of the plaintiff, and also of the integrity and kindly feeling, the generosity and the public services of the defendant.

53. ἀλλ'...ἀλλ'...ἀλλὰ] For this use of ἀλλὰ cf. Dem. 18 § 24 τί γάρ καὶ βουλόμενοι μετεπέμπεσθ' ἂν αὐτοὺς ἐν τοσούτῳ τῷ καιρῷ; ἐπὶ τὴν εἰρήνην; ἀλλ' ὑπῆρχεν ἅπασιν. ἀλλ' ἐπὶ τὸν πόλεμον; ἀλλ' αὐτοὶ περὶ εἰρήνης ἐβουλεύεσθε (Huettner).

ἔτεσιν καὶ χρόνοις ὕστερον] i.e. 'years and ages later,' 'ever so many years after,' 'years and years later.' The phrase is curious and is perhaps rightly suspected by Seager, who suggests the emendation ἔτεσι καὶ χρόνοις τοσούτοις ὕστερον (Classical Journal 1829, Vol. 30, No. 59, p. 109). Cf. Or. 59 § 98 ὕστερον δὲ ὡς πενήτηντα ἔτεσιν. It is defended by G. H. Schaefer, who refers to Pausanias x 17 § 3 ἔτεσι δὲ ὕστερον μετὰ τοὺς Λιβύας ἀφίκοντο. We may compare Lysias 3 § 39 οἱ μὲν ἄλλοι...ὀργιζόμενοι παραχρήμα τιμωρεῖσθαι ζητοῦσιν, οὗτος δὲ χρόνοις ὕστερον. But the two phrases ἔτεσιν ὕστερον and χρόνοις ὕστερον, however defensible in themselves separately, do not apparently occur in combination elsewhere; and it may therefore be worth while to suggest either ἀλλὰ τοσούτοις χρόνοις ὕστερον, or simply ἀλλὰ χρόνοις ὕστερον just as in the passage of Lysias above quoted. In the latter case ἔτεσι καὶ may be a corruption of ἔτεσι κ' i.e. 'twenty years,' a marginal note explaining χρόνοις by referring to § 26, παρεληλυθότων ἐτῶν πλέον ἢ εἰκοσι, and § 38, ἐτῶν ἀπράγμων] Often used of quiet and easy-going people who shrink from litigation. Or. 40 § 32 ἀπράγμων καὶ οὐ φιλόδικος, 42 § 12. Cf. ἀπραγμοσύνη and its opposites, πολυπράγμων, πολυπραγμονεῖν, πολυπραγμοσύνη. So also, in the next line, πράγματα πράττων, as is clear from the rest of the sentence, refers to the plaintiff's incessant litigation. Or. 27 § 1 οὐδὲν ἂν εἶδει δικῶν οὐδὲ πραγμάτων. 54 § 24.

κρίνων τινάς] The force of the sentence is much improved by Dobree's almost certain emendation κρίνων τινας οὐ; οὐχὶ Τιμομάχου κατηγόρεις; where the loss of οὐ would be accounted for by οὐχὶ (or οὐ) following immediately after. Or. 37 § 14 πολλὰ δεηθέντος καὶ τί οὐ ποιήσαντος; 47 § 43 δεομένων ἀπάντων καὶ ἱκετευόντων καὶ τίνα οὐ προσπεπόντων; Felicitissime restituit, says Shilleto of Dobree (F. L. § 231).

Τιμομάχου κ.τ.λ.] All these prosecutions are almost certainly connected with the naval operations extending over the plaintiff's protracted trierarchy of seventeen months in the Thracian waters (in B.C. 362—361). In his speech against Polycles (Or. 50) Autocles, Meno, and Timomachus are mentioned as successive commanders of the fleet (§§ 12—14 and Or. 23 § 104—5); and while he there speaks in general terms of the maladministration of all the commanders (§ 15 τὰ τῶν στρατηγῶν ἀπιστα), he uses the strongest language against Timomachus, mainly for his treasonable collusion with an exiled relative, Callistratus. (See next note.) Timomachus was condemned, and put to death (Schol. on Aeschin. i § 56).

Καλλίππου τοῦ νῦν... ἐν Σικελίᾳ] The context shows that this Callippus (who must not be confounded with the plaintiff in the speech of Apollodorus πρὸς Κάλλιππον Or. 52) can be none other than 'the son of Philon, of the deme Aexone,' who, at the request of Timomachus, conveyed Callistratus on board an Athenian trireme to Thasos from his place of exile in Macedonia, after Apollodorus had stoutly refused to allow his own vessel to be used for so unlawful a purpose (Or. 50 §§ 46—52). He may, with great probability, be identified with Plato's pupil of that name, with whom another of Plato's disciples, the well-known Dion of Syracuse, lived on friendly terms at Athens on his banishment from Sicily in B.C. 366. In August 357, Dion, with a small force, started from the island of Zacynthus, and during the absence of Dionysius the younger, made a triumphal entry into Syracuse, attended by his friend Callippus, who was one of his captains, and is described by Plutarch as λαμπρὸς ἐν τοῖς ἀγῶσι καὶ διάσημος. Ultimately, in the spring or summer of 358, Dion was assassinated by Callippus, who after usurping the government for thirteen months, was defeated in battle by a brother of the younger Dionysius, and after wandering about in Sicily and establishing himself in Southern Italy, at Rhegium, was shortly after (probably in B.C. 350) himself killed by his friends, with the very sword (as the story runs) with which he murdered Dion. (Plutarch, Dion, 17, 28—58; Plato, Ep. vii; Diodorus, xvi passim.)

In the present passage Apollodorus is stated to have prosecuted Callippus τοῦ νῦν ὄντος ἐν Σικελίᾳ. The Athenian fleet (with Callippus) reached Athens from the Thracian coasts in Feb. 360, and Callippus started for Syracuse from Zacynthus in Aug. 357, so that the plaintiff's prosecution of him cannot well be placed later than the spring of 357, though it may have been two years earlier in 359, and in any case about the same time as his prosecutions of Timomachus, Meno and Autocles. (A.

If the present speech is as late as 350 B.C., Callippus was still alive; at any rate, the news of his death cannot have reached Athens. Introd. p. xxix.

οὐ Τιμοθέου;] The charge against Timotheus, the celebrated Athenian general, may have been connected with his defeat at Amphipolis, B.C. 360. At first sight the allusion might be explained of the plaintiff's private suit (Or. 49) against the general for sums borrowed from Pasion (cf. above § 36 n.); but the context appears to point expressly to public indictments (δημοσίᾳ in the previous sentence and τῶν κοινῶν in the next); though this reason is not conclusive, as the first part of the previous sentence refers to δικαί ἴδια.

54. Ἀπολλόδωρον ὄντα κ.τ.λ.] aculeatum et amarum dictum. Reiske. It is not like Apollodorus, it is inconsistent with his true character, to be going out of his way to undertake public prosecutions where his own interests were but partially affected, to the neglect of private suits in which, as he says, he has a direct and an important concern. If Apollodorus had been really wronged by Phormion, he would have prosecuted him before. For the emphatic reference to the name, cf. Or. 30 § 20; 37 § 38; also Cicero, ad Atticum v 2, '...cum Hortensius veniret et infirmus et tam longe et Hortensius.'

§ 57 to end. The defendant not only implores your protection, but claims it as his right. Generous in his benefactions and apart from his actual resources enjoying credit for at least as much besides, he is enabled by means of that good credit to be of advantage, not to himself alone, but to yourselves as well. Do not suffer so worthy, so energetic, so generous a man of business to be ruined by this abominable blackguard. Most of the plaintiff's statements you will simply disregard as baseless calumny, but you must order him to prove either that there was no will (cf. § 33), or that there is some other lease besides that produced on our side (cf. § 9), or that he did not give the defendant a release from all claims (§§ 15, 16), or that the laws allow a claim to be set up when once such a release has been given (§§ 23—5). Challenge him to prove any one of these points, or anything like them. If, for want of such proof, he resorts to ribaldry, don't attend to him, don't allow his loud and shameless assertions to mislead you; but carefully remember what you have heard on our side. If so, you will give a verdict which will be true to your consciences, true to the cause of justice. (The clerk shall read you the law and the remaining depositions.)

That is our case, gentlemen: I need not detain you any longer.

'It has been read out to you, that he has acquired such a heap of money as neither he nor any one else possesses.' This can hardly be right, particularly as such a blunt assertion of Phormion's affluence would be a very invidious statement for his friends to make, and would not ingratiate him in the eyes of the court.

εὐπορεῖν χρήματα (or χρημάτων) has two senses, (1) 'to be well off'; (2) 'to supply money.' 'εὐπορεῖν,' says Lobeck (Parerga p. 595), 'non solum significat abunde habere...sed etiam suppeditare: ἐπικουρῶν ταῖς χρεαῖς ἐξευπορεῖν Plato Legg. xi 153; χρήμαθ' ὑμῖν προσευπορηκώς Dem. Phorm. 962. Cf. Apat. 894, 14 (=Or. 33 § 7 εὐπορήσειν αὐτῷ δέκα μνᾶς): de reb. Chers. p. 94 (συνευποροῦντας ἐκέλευε χρημάτων); Boeot. p. 1019 (=Or. 40 § 36 χρήματα εὐπορήσας); Neaer. 1369, 10; Aeschin. Timarch. p. 121; Lycurg. Leocr. p. 233; quibus inter se collatis intelligitur, quanta sit utriusque notionis contagio, a Romanis quoque unius verbi suppetendi angustia conclusa.' (See note on Or. 40 § 36, and cf. 33 § 6 τριάκοντα μνᾶς συνευπορήσαι.)

Having regard to the context, we must here take the second sense of εὐπορεῖν, and explain the passage as follows: 'The depositions read aloud to you show that the defendant has (lit. he has been recited to you as having) provided you on emergencies with larger sums of money than his own (οὐτός i.e. our friend, the defendant's) or any one else's private fortune amounts to; but then he has credit, &c.' The sentence πίστις μέντοι κ.τ.λ. shows how it came to pass that Phormion was enabled, as a capitalist in the enjoyment of extensive credit in the commercial world, to advance sums of money larger than the private resources of any single individual.

58. ἃ μὴ προήσθε] 'Do not throw this away,' i.e. 'do not sacrifice these advantages to the interests of the plaintiff.'

μὴδ' ἐπιτρέψητ' ἀνατρέψαι] Possibly an unintentional collocation of two compounds of τρέπειν. One word, however, might suggest the other. 'Do not suffer this wretch to overturn it,' i.e. overthrow the defendant from his high position and good credit.

[The metaphor is perhaps from overthrowing a fabric of wealth, as in Aesch. Pers. 165, μὴ μέγας πλοῦτος κοιλίας οὐδας ἀντρέψῃ ποδὶ δλβον ἐν Δαρείῳ ἦρεν οὐκ ἀνευ θεῶν τινός, i.e. 'injurioso pede proruere.' P.] In Theb. 1076 the context shows that the metaphor is not from an earthquake, but from the capsizing of a ship, πόλιν μὴ ἀνατραπήναι μηδ' ἀλλοδαπῶν κύματι φωτῶν κατακλυσθῆναι, and the way in which the word is used by the orators proves that they also regarded it as a nautical metaphor: Dem. 9 § 69 ὅπως μηδεὶς ἀνατρέψει (τὸ σκάφος), 19 § 250 οὐχ ὅπως ὀρθῇ πλεύσεται (ἡ πόλις) προεἶδeto, ἀλλ' ἀνέτρεψε καὶ κατέδυσε. Aeschin. 3 § 158 πλοίων ἀνατρέψει and τὴν πόλιν ἀρδην ἀνατετροφότα. It is metaphorically applied in Dem. 18 § 296 to the ὅροι τῶν ἀγαθῶν καὶ κακόνες, in 25 Aristog. 1 § 28 to τὰ κοινὰ δίκαια and in § 32 to τὴν πόλιν; in Aeschin. 1 § 187 to τὴν κοινὴν παιδείαν, in § 190 to πόλεις; in Deinarchus 1 § 30 to πράγματα ἢ ἴδια ἢ κοινὰ, in § 88 to τὴν πόλιν (with ἐπιτρέψετε in the previous clause), and in 3 § 4 to πάντα τὰ ἐν τῇ πόλει.

In Liddell and Scott (ed. 6) the phrase ἀνατρέπειν τράπεζαν is explained 'to upset a banker's table, i.e. to make him bankrupt.' The only passage quoted is Dem. 403, 7, where however there is no reference whatever to a bankruptcy, but only to the overturning of a table towards the close of a disorderly banquet. (The reference to Dem. 743, 1 [= Timocr. § 136] in ed. 7 should be to the Scholium on that passage, quoted below.)

In Andocides de Mysteriis,

§ 130, we have a curious passage stating that in Athens there was a story current among the old wives and the little children, that the house of Hipponicus was haunted by an unquiet spirit that overturned his table (Ἰππώνικος ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ ἀλιτήριον τρέφει, ὃς αὐτοῦ τὴν τράπεζαν ἀνατρέπει). πῶς οὖν (the orator continues) ἡ φήμη ἢ τότε οὐσα δοκεῖ ὑμῖν ἀποβῆναι; οἴομενος γὰρ Ἰππώνικος υἱὸν τρέφειν, ἀλιτήριον αὐτῷ ἔτρεφεν, ὃς ἀνατέτροφεν ἐκείνου τὸν πλοῦτον, τὴν σωφροσύνην, τὸν ἄλλον βίον ἅπαντα. But the only place, so far as I can find, in which the phrase has a distinct reference to bankruptcy is the Scholium on Dem. Timocr. § 136, where δανείσαι τοῖς τραπέζιταις is followed by ἐτυχεν ὕστερον ἀνατραπήναι τὰς τραπέζας (Baiter and Sauppe, Orat. Att. II 119, 6, 35). See § 50 ἐξέστησαν, n.

62. τὸν νόμον καὶ τὰς μαρτυρίας] The context does not show what law or what depositions are referred to: possibly another νόμος of the same general purport as that recited before § 25 (ὡν μὴ εἶναι δίκας) and further evidence to facts or to the defendant's character (ἄξιον ὄντα, § 61).

οὐκ οἶδ' εἰρημένων] The same sentence verbatim is found at the close of Or. 20 (Lept.), 38 (Nausimach.), and 54 (Conon); and also at the end of the 7th and 8th speeches of Isaeus.

ὅ τι δεῖ] Not 'what I should say further,' (which would require πλείον), but 'why I should say any more,' 'what need there is for my saying any more.' Similarly in 41 § 25, ἡγοῦμαι μὲν οὐδὲν εἶναι δεῖν πλείω λέγειν, we must be careful to take οὐδὲν before δεῖν and not after λέγειν.

ἐξέρα τὸ ὕδωρ] 'Pour out the water.' See Midias, § 129. (Cf. ἐξερᾶν τοὺς λίθους in Ar. Ach. 341, and τὰς ψήφους in Vesp. 993.) The only other passage where the phrase is found is at the end of Or. 38, where the whole of this short epilogue recurs.

The speaker having concluded his speech within the legal limits of time measured by the κλεψύδρα, pointedly calls on the attendant to empty the 'water-clock' (54 § 36). The court is thus reminded that the speaker has spared them a longer speech, and the defendant gets the credit of having so good a cause that the orator does not find it necessary to avail himself of the full time at his disposal.

The result of Phormion's plea is thus stated by Apollodorus Or. 45 § 6 οὕτω διέθηκε τοὺς δικαστὰς ὥστε φωνὴν μὴδ' ἡτινοῦν ἐθέλειν ἀκούειν ἡμῶν· προσοφλῶν δὲ τὴν ἐπωβελίαν καὶ οὐδὲ λόγον τυχεῖν ἀξιωθείς, ἀλλ' ὕβρισθεις ὡς οὐκ οἶδ' εἰ τις πώποτε ἄλλος ἀνθρώπων, ἀπρὲν βαρέως, ὧ ἄνδρες Ἀθηναῖσι, καὶ χαλεπῶς φέρων.

jury to give me a friendly and favourable hearing; and, if I make good my case, to grant me the redress which is my due.*

In the former trial, the defenand I propose to prove this from cital of the relations between the jury to form an opinion on the villainy of Phormion and the falsehood of his witnesses.

The Exordium is not unlike that of Or. 54, κατὰ Κόνωνος, where, as here, the προαῦλιον (Ar. Rhet. III 14) or, as we should say, the key-note of the whole speech is struck in the opening words: ὑβρισθεὶς ὁ ἄνδρες to Or. 29 (ὑπὲρ Φάνου πρὸς Ἀφthe middle participle explained by him is to be found. The mistake possibly arose out of a confusion between the titles of

Schaefer in Neue Jahrb. 1870, vol. 101 p. 523).

ὁ ἄνδρες 'Αθηναῖοι occurs 24 times in Or. 36, and 21 times in this speech, but never in the rest of the speeches of Apollo-found 9 times in Or. 59, in speaker in a public cause (Huet-

Cf. infra § 85, Or. 27 (Aphobus A) § 68, and 57 (Eubul.) § 1; Lysias Or. 18 § 27, and 21 § 21. Such combinations of two or three nearly synonymous verbs are very common in the undisputed speeches of Demosthenes (e.g. Or. 36 § 47 ἀγεις εἰς μέσον, δεικνύεις, ἐλέγχεις; ib. 52 ἐλαύνεις, συκοφαντεῖς, διώκεις; ib. 57 δέεται καὶ ἱκετεύει καὶ ἀξιοῖ; Or. 54 § 33 δικάζομαι καὶ μισῶ καὶ ἐπεξέρχομαι). The speech ὑπὲρ Φορμίωνος alone contains nearly forty such passages; of the speeches delivered by Apollodorus, the first oration against Stephanus has more than 30, while in the rest there is hardly anything of the kind, though in the second speech against Stephanus, § 28, we have δέομαι καὶ ἱκετεύω. (J. Sigg in Neue Jahrb., Suppl. vi p. 419.)

μέγα γὰρ—τυχεῖν] Or. 57 § 1 τοῖς γὰρ ἐν κινδύνῳ καθεστηκόσιν εἰκὸς εὐνοικωτέρους ὑπάρχειν.

εὐμενῶς] Almost equivalent to εὐνοϊκῶς in the last sentence; εὐμενής, however, is not so trivial a word as εὖρους. The former is frequent in Attic verse, the latter is generally found in prose; the former is most often used of the gracious condescension of a deity; the latter of the kindly feelings of ordinary human beings. Or. 4 § 45, τῶν θεῶν εὐμενέας, illustrates the rule, while the exceptions in the present passage and Ep. 3 § 45, and in Isocr. 4 § 43 and in Plato, Rep. 607 D, may be paralleled from Herod. vii 237 ξείνος δὲ ξείνῳ... εὐμενέστατον πάντων.

μεμαρτυρηκότα τὰ ψευδῇ] 'guilty of having given false evidence.' Elsewhere in the speech τὰ ψευδῇ occurs 16 times; ψευδῇ only in § 41, where it has a predicative sense. In Or. 46 τὰ ψ. alone is used; in Or. 47, τὰ ψ. is found 8 times, ψ. in §§ 4, 11, 79 (see Blass, in Rheinisches Museum 1889, p. 20).

τοσαύτη περιφάνεια κ. τ. λ.] 'So transparent is the case.' 'So plain and clear from every point of view.' Or. 29 § 1 (also of false witness) ῥαδίως ἐξελέγξας διὰ τὴν περιφάνειαν τῶν πραγμάτων. §§ 3—8. Narrative (διήγησις). My father Pasion left behind him at his death a large property which got into the hands of Phormion, who also married Pasion's widow, my mother Archippe, during my absence from Athens on public service. On my return, I threatened Phormion with legal proceedings in consequence of this marriage, but my case did not come on; and afterwards a reconciliation was brought about. Subsequently, however, on Phormion's refusing to fulfil his engagements and attempting to rob me of the banking-stock leased him by my father, I was compelled to prosecute him at the earliest opportunity.

Phormion thereupon put in a special plea in bar of action, and brought forward false witnesses to show that I gave him a discharge from all further claims, and to attest to a lease which in fact was a fabrication and to a will that never existed.

The result of his plea, which gave him the advantage of the first hearing, was that the jury would not listen to me at all; I was fined for failing to make good my case and left the court in high dudgeon at my ill-treatment. On reflexion, however, I feel that the jury, in their ignorance of the real facts, could not, on the evidence, have found any other verdict; but I have a right to be indignant with the false witnesses who brought about that result,—and with Stephanus in particular whose evidence shall be read to the court. (The evidence is read.)

This trierarchy of Apollodorus may almost certainly be connected with the negotiations between Athens and the elder Dionysius towards the close of his career. It appears from a decree discovered near the Propylaea in 1837, and restored by A. Kirchhoff in the Philologus for 1857 (xii p. 571—8), that Athenian ambassadors were sent to Syracuse in the summer of b.c. 369 and in b.c. 368. Cf. C. I. A. II i 51, 52; Dittenberger's Sylloge, 72, 73. The trierarchy may be identified with that of Or. 53 § 5, and probably belongs to the later of these two embassies in b.c. 368, as we read in Or. 46 § 21 ἐγὼ μὲν ἀπεδήμουν τριηραρχῶν, τετελευτήκει δ' ὁ πατὴρ πάλαι, οὗτος ἔφημε. πάλαι, though a vague word, shows at any rate that a considerable time elapsed between the death of Pasion in b.c. 370 (Or. 46 § 13), and his widow's marriage with Phormion. (Im. Hermann, de tempore, etc. p. 9; A. Schaefer, Dem. und seine Zeit, III 2, 146; and Lortzing, Apollodorus, p. 8.)

δν τρόπον δὲ (sc. ἔφημε)—ἀκριβῶς εἰπεῖν] Cf. § 27 διεφθάρκει ἦν ἐμοὶ μὲν οὐ καλὸν λέγειν. (Similarly in 40 § 8 τῇ τούτων μητρὶ ἐπλησίασεν οὕτως δὴ ποτ' οὖν τρόπον· οὐ γὰρ ἐμὸν τοῦτο λέγειν ἐστὶ.) This affectionate of dutiful delicacy of feeling towards his mother in the early portions of the speech is rather inconsistent with the apparently gratuitous insinuation towards its close, where he broaches the suspicion that his own brother Pasicles (who was eight years old at his father Pasion's death) was really her son by Phormion (§ 84).

οὐκ ἴσως] 21 §§ 15, 126; 14 § 23.—ἀκριβῶς εἰπεῖν, 8 § 38; 41 § 17.—ἡσθόμην καὶ...εἶδον, 18 § 133 τὸ πρᾶγμα' αἰσθημένη καὶ ἰδοῦσα.—ἀγανακτήσας καὶ χαλεπῶς ἐνεγκών, 21 §§ 108, 123; 23 § 167. ἐνεγκών, 21 § 48; 24 § 141; 23 § 170; 54 § 9; ἐνεγκαντες and ἐπενέγκας in non-Demosthenic speeches, 49 § 51; 59 § 5 (Huettnr).

δίκην ἰδίαν...γραφὴν ὕβρεως] Cf. Or. 54 § 1, ad fin.

4. πόλεμον] This suspension of lawsuits, which the plaintiff found in force on returning from his trierarchy in b.c. 368, was due to the hostilities between Athens and Thebes in the period between the battle of Leuctra in b.c. 371, and the death of Epaminondas at the battle of Mantinea in b.c. 362. The courts were not sitting for ordinary business, perhaps because there was no pay for the dicasts (cf. Or. 39 § 17); and the only process that was available under the circumstances was a public action. So (just below) δίκων οὐκ οὐσῶν means, as the courts continued closed for χρόνον γιγνομένου—γραφῆς ἐκκρουομένης] See note on Or. 36 § 2, ἵνα ἐκκρούοντες χρόνους ἐμποιώμεν. For χρόνον δὲ γιγνομένου, Reiske ingeniously, but perhaps unnecessarily, proposes χρόνον δ' ἐγγιγνομένου, which at any rate modifies the slight inelegance of the triple repetition γιγνομένου... γίγνονται... ἐγίγνοντο. χρόνος ἐγγίγνεται is found in Or. 19 § 324; 37 § 2; 47 §§ 29, 30, 32, 63. χρ. γενομένου occurs in Hdt. i 78, and Diod. xx 109; cf. 5. ἵνα... συντέμω] Or. 39 § 4; 37 § 21. The reason for the speaker's hurrying over this part of his statement is partly because the overtures of reconciliation on Phormion's side, which he takes credit to himself for candidly admitting, are really more to Phormion's credit than to his own.

reply (they are at any rate the only reply given in this speech) to that portion of Phormion's plea which traversed his opponent's suit on the ground that it infringed the 'statute of limitations' (Or. 36 § 26). But it may be noticed on Phormion's side that at least 18 years had elapsed since the death of Apollodorus' father, and eight since that of his mother, before the suit was instituted; and during the interval the plaintiff found time for ever so many lawsuits in cases where his private interests were but partially concerned (Or. 36 § 53).

In the present case, Apoll. had to pay, in addition to costs, a sixth part of 20 talents, 3¹ 20^m = £666, if (with Goodwin) we reckon the talent at £200. (Boeckh, *Publ. 8. ἐξ αὐτῆς] ex ipsa, perhaps, rather than ex ea.—On ἐπίλαβε τὸ ὕδωρ cf. note on Or. 54 § 36.

Στέφανος Μενεκλέους κ.τ.λ.] Like many, if not most of the documents inserted in the speeches of the Attic Orators, this deposition has been regarded as spurious. Its purport is to be found in §§ 9—26 and in Or. 46 § 5. The names of Teisias, Cephisophon and Amphias are given in §§ 10, 17, and Or. 46 § 5. Stephanus and Teisias, as well as Pasion and Apollodorus, are assigned to the deme Acharnae in the documents only (§§ 28, 46), not in the speech itself. Στέφανος Ἀχαρνεύς appears in an inscription as trierarch in B.C. 322, but this (it has been suggested) is not likely to be the defendant in the present action, for at that date the latter, if (as is not improbable) he was about the same age as Apollodorus, would be about seventy; and we can hardly suppose that one who was so poor a patriot as not to have undertaken any public services up to the age of 47 or thereabouts (§ 66), would have embarked on a trierarchy at so advanced an age. But the name was far from uncommon, and the deme may (it is thought) have been assigned at random by the writer of the document.

The name Ἐνδίου Ἐπιγένοῦς Λαμπτρέως is given in one MS only (Q). An inscription, however, of B.C. 325 gives the name Κριτόδημος Ἐνδίου Λαμπτρέως whose father may be the Ἐνδίου of the text, though the name is not a rare one.

Lastly, Σκύθης is naturally an uncommon name for an Athenian, though found as such in an inscription. The name of his father, Ἀρματεύς, does not occur elsewhere, except in Stephanus of Byzantium, who makes it mean 'an inhabitant of Harma' which he wrongly supposes to be a deme of Attica, whereas it was really the name of a part of the range of Parnes. (Abridged from A. Westermann's Untersuchungen über die in die Attischen Redner eingelegten Urkunden, pp. 105—8.)

Blass, however, sees no ground for rejecting the documents in this speech; the names of the witnesses, as Westermann himself admits, are supported by the evidence of inscriptions (Blass Att. Ber. III 409). Their genuineness has been maintained in a dissertation by Kirchner, 1883; and attacked by Schucht, De documentis oratoribus Atticis insertis, 1892.

προῦκαλεῖτο...ἀνοίγειν] 'Challenged him (in the event of his denying that the document Phormion put into the box was a copy of Pasion's will), to open the will of Pasion which &c.' On ἐχίνον see note on Or. 54 § 27.

εἶναι τὰδ' ἀντίγραφα κ.τ.λ.] τὰ ἀντίγραφα τῶν διαθηκῶν cannot be construed as the subject, and unless we accept either τὰδ' or ταῦτ' for τὰ we must rather awkwardly get the predicate out of τὰ ἀντίγραφα. The speaker himself expresses the sense better in §§ 10, 23 (Westermann, u. s. p. 108).

§§ 9—14. It is deposed that Phormion challenged me to open the will, produced (it is alleged) before the arbitrator; that I refused the challenge and would not open the 'will'; that the document to which they depose is a counterpart of the original will; and then follows the copy.

Let us examine this evidence. In the first place, why should one have refused to open the document?

'Oh! to prevent the jury from hearing the terms of the will.'

But, I reply, the witnesses deposed to the will as well as to the challenge, and thus the jury would hear the terms of the 'will' publicly recited from the 'copy' whether I opened it or not. What was I to gain by refusing? Why! even if they had given no challenge, and had made a mere assertion, and if some one had produced a document purporting to be Pasion's will, it would have been my interest to challenge them and to open the will. In this case, (1) had the contents differed from the terms of the deposition, I should have appealed to the bystanders to bear witness to the discrepancy, which would have been a strong proof that the rest of their case was got up for a purpose. (2) Had the contents agreed, I should have required the producer himself to give evidence. Had he consented, I should have had in him a responsible witness; had he declined, here again I should have had sufficient proof that the affair was a fabrication. On this hypothesis, I should have had to deal with one witness only, instead of with many (as my opponents have made it out); and of course I should have preferred the former, and so would every one else. For where (as here) there is room for cool calculation, no one would be so foolish as to abandon his own interests and do what would damage his case. And yet, by deposing that I refused to open the 'will,' these witnesses represented me as doing what is improbable, unreasonable, and contrary to all experience.

In brief, the first point which the plaintiff attempts to make in proving the evidence to be false, is that, assuming he was challenged to open the 'will,' he sees no reason why he should have refused a challenge which it would have been to his interest to accept. On the other side, it may be noticed that the plaintiff had a strong reason for refusing to open the 'will,' and thus give express recognition to an important document, the contents of which, as he himself says elsewhere (§ 21), were detrimental to his own interests. (A. Schaefer, Dem. III 2, p. 171.) So far, the case clearly tends against Apollodorus.

9. οὐ μὴν ἀλλ'...] 'Nevertheless,' 'however,' 'not but that.' The ellipsis which this combination of particles always involves may be here supplied by some such words as οὐ μὴν (ὑμᾶς τοῦτο χρὴ θαυμάζειν) or (παρὰ λείπειν τοῦτο χρὴ) ἀλλ' ἔγωγ' κ.τ.λ. Kühner's Gk. Gr. § 535, 7.

συνέβαινεν κ.τ.λ.] Kennedy translates: 'And the result was, that in that way, I had one person to deal with.' The conditional is only implied and not directly expressed, in other words συνέβαινεν (like ἤξιουν... ἐλάβανον... ἦν above) is put without ἂν.—'Μαλὶν καὶ δὴ κἂν συνέβαινεν et ποx ἔστιν οὖν ὅστις ἂν ὑμῶν,' says Dobree, comparing § 33 bis, and also proposing in § 34 τῖς γὰρ ἂν ἀνθρώπων. The last two emendations are accepted in Dindorf's text.

[All the imperfects in this remarkable sentence, which does not read altogether like the style of Demosthenes, depend on the preceding ἡα, 'in which case it would have happened that, &c.' The addition of ἂν would be quite out of place here, though it is necessary in the

παροξυσμός] This word, found twice in the New Testament (Hebr. x 24, Acts xv 39), is not used again by Demosthenes, nor indeed does it appear to occur elsewhere in the sense of 'exasperation' in any of the earlier Greek writers. In the Aphorisms of Hippocrates, 1243 (Liddell & Scott), it is a medical term, in the sense perpetuated in our 'paroxysm.' The verb however is found in Or. 21 (Meid.) § 2 ὥρισθῃ καὶ παρωξύνθῃ, 57 (Eubul.) § 49 ἡ πόλις πάσα...ὀργιζομένη παρώξυντο, ib. § 2, Or. 47 (Euerg.) § 19; also the adj. in Or. 20 (Lept.) § 105 λόγοι παροξυντικοὶ πρὸς τὸ...πεῖσαι.

§§ 15—19. Again, the witnesses depose to a Challenge as well as to a Will. Now Challenges are meant to meet the case of those transactions, which it is otherwise impossible to bring before the court. In the present case, what call was there for a Challenge? The arbitration took place in Athens, and they have deposed that the original will was produced before the arbitrator. If this was true, they ought to have put the original will into the box and the producer should have proved it by evidence. In that case the jury, after weighing the credibility of the deposition and inspecting the seals of the will, would have decided accordingly; and, had I thought myself wronged by the verdict, I might have proceeded against the deponent in question. But, as it is, no single witness has undertaken the whole responsibility; no! they have cleverly divided it, by one witness (Cephisophon) deposing to having a document inscribed 'Pasion's Will'; and another (Amphias), to having produced it after being sent to do so by the former witness; but whether it was genuine or not, was 'more than he knew.'—In fact, Stephanus and his friends made the Challenge a mere mask to enable them to depose to a will, so that the jury were led to believe that the will was my father's, and I myself was debarred from being heard on my wrongs, and so that by these very means my opponents might ultimately be convicted of having given false evidence—a result which they hardly expected.

15. μὴ θέλειν] ἐθέλω is the proper form in Attic prose, θέλω in Attic verse, but the latter is occasionally found in Dem. in such formulæ as ἂν θεὸς θέλῃ. (See Veitch Gk. Vbs.) It may also be used when a vowel precedes.

προκλήσεις] Harpocr. s. v. εἰώθεσαν ὅπῃτε δικάζοντό τινες, ἐξαιτεῖν ἐνίοτε θεραπαίνας ἢ θεραπόντας εἰς βάσανον ἢ εἰς μαρτυρίαν τοῦ πράγματος, καὶ τοῦτο ἐκαλεῖτο προκαλεῖσθαι, τὸ δὲ γραμματεῖον τὸ περὶ τούτου γραφόμενον ὠνομάζετο πρόκλησις. παρὰ πολλοῖς δὲ ἐστὶ ρήτορις. Δημοσθένης δ' ἐν τῷ κατὰ Στεφάνου καὶ περὶ ὧν πρόκλησις γίνεται δηλωῖ. Hermann, Public Antiquities, § 141, 20; Meier & Schömann, p. 871 Lips.

16. οἷον...οἷον] 54 § 17 οἷον...πάλιν...πάλιν.

βασανίζειν οὐκ ἔστιν ἐναντίον ὑμῶν] In Dobree's Adversaria, we have the suggestive note 'Qu. interrog. Qu. the fact.' As a general rule doubtless this examination of slaves took place in private, before a magistrate or arbitrator or other authorized person, in the presence of a number of bystanders either concerned as witnesses or merely present out of curiosity (Or. 47 § 12); and the text as it stands would seem to imply that administration of torture in open court was not allowed.—We find Aeschines (Fals. Leg. § 126) proposing to 'question' certain slaves in public: ἀγωμεν δὲ καὶ τοὺς οἰκέτας καὶ παραδιδώμεν εἰς βάσανον...παρέσται δὲ ἤδη ὁ δῆμος καὶ βασανίζει ἐναντίον ὑμῶν, ἂν κελεύῃτε...κἀλεῖ μοι τοὺς οἰκέτας δεῦρο ἐπὶ τὸ βῆμα... At this point (it is important to notice) follows a Challenge which Demosthenes declines. Thus we have a proposal only, and it may be concluded from ἂν κελεύῃτε, that even if the Challenge had been accepted, the court would have had to give a special order for such departure from ordinary usage.

Again in [Dem.] Or. 47 κατὰ Εὐέργου ψευδομαρτυριῶν § 17, we read: ἔδει αὐτὸν, εἴπερ ἀληθὴ ἦν ἃ φασιν αὐτὸν προκαλεῖσθαι, κληρουμένων τῶν δικαστηρίων κομισαντα τὴν ἀνθρωπον, λαβόντα τὸν κήρυκα, κελεύειν ἐμέ, εἰ βουλομένη, βασανίζειν, καὶ μάρτυρας τοὺς δικαστὰς εἰσύντας ποιέσθαι ὡς ἐτοιμὸς ἐστὶ παραδοῦναι (cf. ib. § 6). But it would be idle to suppose that this passage proves that the torture might take place in open court; all that is meant is that the defendant might have produced the girl, when the court was about to sit, challenged the plaintiff to 'quesοἶον—ἔξω τῆς χώρας] As an illustration of this form of Challenge, we find in Or. 32 the plaintiff (Zenothemis) borrowing money in Syracuse (§ 4) and the defendant challenging him at Athens to sail to Syracuse and appear before the authorities there (§ 18). Cf. ex iure manum consertum voco in Cicero pro Murena § 26 (with Mr Heitland's note).

πλεῖν ἢ βαδίζειν] Here, as often, contrasted with one another, as the ordinary words for 'going by sea or by land,' Fals. Leg. § 164 οὐτ' ἐπείγασθαι βαδίζουσιν οὐτε πλεῖν αὐτοῖς ἐπποικίλῃ στοᾷ] 'The painted portico.' So called from its pictures, representing the legendary wars of Athens and the battle of Marathon. See Or. 59 (Neaer.) § 94 and Aeschin.

The public arbitrators had particular buildings assigned them according to the tribe to which they belonged: thus in Or. 47 § 12 the arbitration takes place in the Heliaea, οἱ γὰρ τὴν Οἰνηίδα καὶ τὴν Ἐρεχθίδα διαιτῶντες ἐνταῦθα κάθηται.

ἐχρῆν] As usual, without ἀν. We might have had εἰπερ ἀληθὲς ἦν, ἐνέβαλεν ἂν τὸ γραμματεῖον, implying ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐνέβαλεν, whereas the sentence as it stands does not require ἀν because it implies not ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐχρῆν, but χρῆν μὲν ἐμβαλεῖν ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐνέβαλεν. So also with ὥφελον, ἐμελλον, ἔδει, προσήκεν; 'sed multo latius patet haec ratio... Omnino, ubicunque non potest contrarium opponi, recte abest particula.' Hermann de particula ἀν § XII. On a similar principle we have τί ἦν ἀπλούστερον above, which follows the analogy of δίκαιον ἦν, εἰκὸς ἦν, &c.

τὰ σημεῖα] Or. 42 §§ 2, 8. Probably the seals attached to the will (cf. Becker's Charicles, Sc. ix note 14), and not those on the deposition-case or ἐχίνος (as supposed in Stark's addenda to Hermann's Privatalt. § 65, 9). On the ἐχίνος cf. Or. 39 § 18 σεσημασμένων τῶν ἐχίνων, and note on Or. 54 § 27. For the opening of the seals of a will, see Ar. 18. εἰς...οὐδεὶς] 'No single witness has accepted the whole responsibility'; cf. § 38 διελόντο τὰ δίκηματα. εἰς οὐδεὶς is a much stronger negative than οὐδεὶς. Or. 21 (Midias) § 12 ἐν γὰρ οὐδὲν ἐστὶν ἐφ' ᾧ...οὐ δίκαιος ὢν ἀπολωλέναι φανήσεται. Cf. Fals. Leg. § 201, ἐν οὐδ' ὁτιοῦν, Thuc. 11.

ὁ μὲν...ὁ δὲ] Cephisophon (§§ 21, 22)...Amphias (ὁ Κηφισοφώντος κηδεστής, §§ 10, 17).—The subject of ἕκαστος (ὁ μὲν...ὁ δὲ) is μεμαρτύρηκε implied by the former part of the sentence. This is all that is meant by Dobree's punctuation 'Distinguish ὁ δὲ, πεμφθεὶς,' to show that πεμφθεὶς is subordinate to παρέχειν and is not to be taken with ὁ δὲ. Trans. 'another, that he produced the will on being sent by him (Cephisophon).'

19. παραπετάσματι] sc. προφάσει (46 § 9 πρόφασιν...τὴν πρόκλησιν), προσχήματι (5 § 6), as a 'cloak,' or 'pretext,' lit. a 'screen' or 'curtain.' Plat. Protag. 316 π ταῖς τέχναις ταύταις παραπετάσμασιν ἐχρήσαντο, immediately after προσχῆμα ποιείσθαι καὶ προκαλύπτεισθαι.

in the very way in which the court would have believed that the will was my father's, and I should have been debarred from getting a hearing, and in which my opponents would now be palpably convicted of giving false evidence.' This makes nonsense, as the jury in the former trial did believe the witnesses, and Apollodorus was debarred from speaking. ἄν is quite out of place with ἐπίστευσαν and ἀπεκλείσθην, but not so with φωραθεῖεν (which cannot here be taken as a simple optative expressing a wish). It thus appears that we should (with G. H. Schaefer) remove ἄν from the aorist indicative and place it with the aor. optative, and read as follows: ὡς (or ὡσθ') οἱ δικάσται...ἐπίστευσαν, ἐγὼ δὲ ἀπεκλείσθην...οὗτοι δ' ἄν μάλιστα φωραθεῖεν. The sense thus gained is fairly satisfactory: 'the witnesses combined the attestation of a challenge with the attestation of a will (made the former a pretext for the latter). The immediate result was that the jury in the previous trial believed the will was really my father's and therefore decided against me without giving me a hearing on my present wrongs. The ultimate result was that by that very means my opponents would be clearly convicted of having given false evidence.'

Hermann attempts to explain the passage by the following translation:

'Illi vero, provocationis praetextu usi, de testamento testati sunt eo modo, quo facillime iudices hoc patris testamentum esse crederent, ego autem ab oranda causa mea excludi debebam[?], ipsi vero—falsa testati esse deprehenderentur; atqui contrarium sperabant. Illa enim oἱ τοῖ δὲ (hic voce paullum subsistit orator) φωραθεῖεν τὰ ψευδῆ μεμαρτυρηκότες, ironice dicta esse patet' (Opuscula iv 27, de particula ἄν i 7).

Dobree says: 'Sensus est: ita rem administrarunt, ut tunc quidem iudices deciperent; postea autem hoc palam fieret, quamvis id non praeviderent.—Qu. de modorum permutatione. Similis locus F. Leg. 424. 16' τοσοῦτ' ἀπέχουσι τοῦ τοιοῦτον τι ποιεῖν, ὥστε θαυμάζουσι καὶ ζηλοῦσι καὶ βούλονται' ἄν αὐτοὺς ἕκαστος τοιοῦτος εἶναι.

§§ 19—23. To prove this, take the evidence of Cephisophon. He deposes to a document having been left him by my father, inscribed 'Pasion's Will'; thinking that to depose to this only was a mere trifle, and that he could not safely go so far as to add (what in itself would have been a simple matter) 'that this was the document produced by the deponent.'—Now, had Phormion's name appeared outside, the deponent might reasonably have kept the document for Phormion; further, had it really been endorsed 'Pasion's Will,' it would have belonged to me by inheritance like the rest of my father's property, and I should of course have appropriated it, feeling that, with a lawsuit before me, the will, if its terms were those alleged, would be rather detrimental to my interests. The fact that, in spite of the alleged endorsement, it has been produced to Phormion, not to myself, and been let alone by me, proves the forgery of the will and the falsehood of the deposition of Cephisophon. However, I dismiss him for the present, especially as he has given no evidence on the contents of the will, which by the way is a strong proof of the falsehood of the deposition of Stephanus and his friends. Cephisophon, the very person who deposes to having the document, did not dare to depose to its identity with that produced by Phormion; and yet the present witnesses (Stephanus and his friends) have declared that it is a copy of the other, though they cannot claim to have been present when the will was drawn up, never saw it opened before the arbitrator, and indeed have deposed that I refused to open it. If so, have they not clearly charged themselves with having given false evidence?

Maprvpla] The wording of this deposition is identical with that of the speech itself (§§ 18 and 20), with the exception of the clause ὑπὸ τοῦ πατρὸς (naturally suggested by καταλειφθῆναι), and the description of the witness as Κεφάλωνος (or Κεφαλίωνος) Ἀφιδναῖος. Κεφάλων is a parallel form of Κεφαλίων and is found elsewhere (Plut. Arat. 52). One Κηφισοφῶν Ἀφιδναῖος is mentioned in inscriptions as trierarch and commander of the fleet, and it has been proposed to identify him with the witness in this case, though the name of the trierarch's father is not given (Boeckh, Seewesen p. 442). The composer of the deposition may have been led to assign Cephisophon to Aphidna by a passage in Or. 59 κατὰ Νεαίρας §§ 9—10, where a person of that name bribes one Stephanus of Eroadae to charge Apollodorus with causing the death of a woman at Aphidna. (A. Westermann u.s. pp. 108—9, cf. § 8 supra.) The authenticity of the document is, however, confirmed by the fact that an inscription of the year 343 B.C. mentions Κηφισοφῶν Κεφαλίωνος Ἀφιδ-ment been, not merely, 'This is Pasion's,' but 'This is Pasion's will,' &c.), then he would certainly have claimed it as heir to his father's property and, finding it detrimental to his own interests, would have kept it close.' The effrontery of this statement is sufficiently startling.

As regards the phrase διαθήκην ἀναιρεῖσθαι, it may be noticed that in Isaeus Or. 6 (Philoct.) §§ 30—33, we have πείθουσι τὸν Εὐκτῆμονα τὴν διαθήκην ἀνελεῖν ὡς οὐ χρησίμην οὖσαν τοῖς παισὶ· followed by ὁ Εὐκτῆμων ἔλεγεν ὅτι βούλοιντο ἀνελεῖσθαι τὴν διαθήκην and ποιησάμενος πολλοὺς μάρτυρας ὡς οὐκέτι αὐτῷ κέοιτο ἡ διαθήκη, φῆχετο αὐτῶν. Cf. also Isaeus Or. 1 (Cleonym.) § 14, ἀσθενῶν... ἐβουλήθη ταύτας τὰς διαθήκας ἀνελεῖν, where Schömann remarks 'ἀναιρεῖν est λύειν tollere, rescindere: ἀναιρεῖσθαι autem, de contractuum testamentorum - que tabulis, proprie est repetere ab eo, apud quem depositae fuerunt, quod fit a sublaturis.' In these passages, however, the phrase is used of a testator revoking his own will; here of an heir claiming his father's will, with a view to suppressing it. See note on Or. 34 § 31, and cf. 48 § 46.

22. τῷ παρέχεσθαι Φορμίῳ] 'By its being produced, not by, but to Phormion.'—εἰᾶσθαι δ' 'and yet let alone (not made away with) by myself.' (See last note.) The pf. pass. εἰᾶσθαι is apparently never used elsewhere. Or. 8 § 59 εἰᾶσθαι, 10 § 8 ἐαθέντα, Isocr. 4 § 97 ἐλάθησαν.

23. αὐτὸς ἔχειν] 'That he had the document in his own keeping.'

παρείχετο] παρέχεσθαι dicitur, qui sua causa, παρέχειν, qui alterius causa facit (Huettner).

ἐξ ἀρχῆς] Emphatic position, as in 9 § 25 ‘Were present in the first instance,’ as witnesses when Pasion made his will (cf. Meier & Schömann, p. 878 Lips.). But it may be remarked that, even supposing they were so present, it does not follow that they would know the contents of the document. (See note on Or. 46 § 2 and Becker’s Charicles, Sc. ix, note 18.)

§§ 24—26. Let us now examine the terms of the deposition, and we shall see that its object is to make it appear by any means, fair or foul, that my father made this will. It speaks of ‘the will of Pasion’; whereas it ought to have run ‘the will which Phormion asserts to have been left by Pasion’; and you are aware that there is a vast difference between a thing being really true and Phormion’s saying so.

26. εἴ τινές εἰσι] 'if there is any will of Pasion's at all.'

φάσκειν] (sc. εἶναι διαθήκας.) Here, as often, used with the collateral notion of saying what is untrue. Thus both φημι and φάσκω are used in Soph. El. 819 of promising without performing: φησὶν γε φάσκων δ' οὐδὲν ὧν λέγει ποιεῖ. [For the whole sentence, cf. Eur. Alc. 528, χωρὶς τό τ' εἶναι καὶ τὸ μὴ νομίζεται.]

27. κατασκεύασμα] The 'fabrication,' 'forgery,' of the will. Cf. 21 § 123; 23 § 13; 24 § 16 (κατασκευασμὸς ὑπὲρ τοῦ κ.τ.λ.), and κατασκευάζειν in §§ 13 and 20.

ὧν διεφθάρκει, ἦν ...] 'To escape the penalty of having corrupted her whose name I cannot here mention without impropriety, but whom you yourselves know without my naming her.' (For this delicacy of allusion, cf. note on § 3.)—ὧν διεφθάρκει ἦν is equivalent to τῆς διαφθορᾶς τῆς γυναικὸς ἦν (or τοῦ διεφθαρκεῖν αὐτήν ἦν). The substantive is here 'thrown into' the verb as in Fals. Leg. § 238 p. 415 ἐν αὐτοῖς οἷς ἐτιμάσθε, 'in the very honours you enjoyed,' where Shilleto quotes de Corona § 312 ἐφ' οἷς ἐλυμήνω and a striking instance from Plato, Phaedo p. 94 c. We may add Midias § 189 p. 576 ἐφ' οἷς ἐλειτουργοῦν ὑβρίζειν, and Ar. Ach. 677 οὐ γὰρ ἀξίως ἐκείνων ὧν ἐνανμαχήσαμεν γηροβοσκόμεσθ' ὑφ' ὑμῶν. Cf. inf. § 68 and Or. 16 § 13; 19 § 77; 21 §§ 25, 128; 23 § 120; 55 § 32. In 29 § 51, τάντιγραφα, ὡς σύ με προῦκαλέσω, must be corrected into τάντιγραφα ὧν κ.τ.λ., as has independently occurred to another scholar.

ὑπὲρ τοῦ κατασχεῖν] 'for the purpose of securing.' So inf. § 47 ὅπως τὴν ἀφορμὴν τῆς τραπέζης κατὰσχοι.

κυρίῳ γενέσθαι] The dative is used as though the sentence had begun with ἡ διαθήκη κατασκευαστο Φορμῶνι instead of with its equivalent in sense ἦν τὸ κατασκεύασμα τὸ τῆς διαθήκης. Cf. 20 (Lept.) § 107 ἐκεῖ μὲν γὰρ ἐστὶ τῆς ἀρετῆς ἄθλον τῆς πολιτείας κυρίῳ γενέσθαι. The regular construction would of course require κύριον.

The inf. is found as pass. in Or. 20 § 142.—The sense is:—'a slave who is thinking how to escape punishment for having wronged, dishonoured, his master's household, damaged his master's property.' τὰ τῶν δεσποτῶν refers to his master's wife, but is expressed purposely in a general way. Cf. 9 § 31 δοῦλος ὑποβολιμαῖος τὰ μὴ προσήκοντ' ἀπώλλυε καὶ ἐλυμάλνετο.

28. διαθήκην μετὰ τῆς προκλήσεως] § 12 προσεμαρτύρουν τῇ προκλήσει τὴν διαθήκην and § 15 πρόκλησιν ὁμοῦ διαθήκῃ μαρτυρεῖν. τάδε διέθετο] The usual formula. Thus, Plato's will began:

τάδε κατέλιπε Πλάτων καὶ διέθετο, and Aristotle's: τάδε διέθετο Ἀριστοτέλης (Diog. Laert. iii 41 and v 11).

τάλαντον κ.τ.λ.] Sums in gross, charged on land, are meant (as Pabst and Kennedy understand it); not annual rents (as G. H. Schaefer supposes).—On συνοικίαν see notes on Or. 36 §§ 6 and 34.

Πεπαρήθου] A small island, N.W. of Euboea. As it was an Athenian colony, Athenians could hold property there (Dareste). Its wine is mentioned in 35 § 35.

§§ 29—36. Again, the 'lease' upon which Phormion took the bank from my father, though itself a fabrication, will prove the 'Will' an absolute forgery.

It concludes with a clause stating that my father owes eleven talents to the bank. This was added in order that whatever sums were traced to Phormion might be made out to have been 'paid' in discharge of this debt, and not embezzled.—(You imagine perhaps that, as Phormion speaks bad Greek, he is merely a foreigner and a fool. To be sure, he is anything but a good Greek in hating those he ought to honour, but in villany and knavery he is far from a fool.)

The terms of the 'lease' shall now be read and examined.

(1) No one would have paid so large a rent, as that alleged, for the banking business.

(2) No one would have committed the rest of his property to a man under whose management the Bank got into debt.

(3) The stringency of the provision preventing Phormion from doing business as a banker on his own account is inconsistent with the singularly generous terms of the will and proves the latter to be a forgery.

29. φέρε δὴ...δείξω...δείξω] 30 § 25 φέρε δὴ...ἐπιδείξω...μάρτυρας δὲ τῶν μὲν ὑμῖν παρέχομαι, τῶν δ' ἐπιδείξω μεγάλα τεκμήρια. φέρε δὴ may be followed either by the Aor. Subj. or by the Fut. Ind. δείξω here, and in 20 § 26, is apparently Future; ἐπιδείξω in 52 § 20, and ὑπομνήσω in 22 § 60, are ambiguous; εἶπω (19 §§ 169, 234), ἀναγνῶ (18 § 267), παρὰσχῶμαι (59, §§ 55, 79) and ἐξετάσωμεν (20 § 62) are Aorists Subjunctive. On the other hand ἀναγνώσσομαι (Andoc. 1 § 47) is clearly Future (Huettner).

τὴν μίσθωσιν κ.τ.λ.] See Or. 36 §§ 4—6.—καὶ γὰρ ἐκ ταύτης, 'for from this too,' &c., 18 § 25; 21 § 10; 37 § 35; 54 §§ 24, 26. [The clause καίπερ ἐσκευωρημένης reads unlike the style of Demosthenes. P.]

πλάσμα] Cf. πέπλακε in line 10 of Argument, and Or. 36 § 33. Hesychius has πλάσμα· σχήμα· τισμός ('pretence'). ψεύσμα· ἡ κτίσμα.

ἐνδεκα τάλ.] The origin of this 'debt' is carefully explained in Or. 36 §§ 4—5 (see note on προσώφειλε p. 7), and in the present speech the plaintiff says nothing that materially shakes that explanation. [The construction is, ὀφείλων τοῦτ' εἰς τὰς π., 'owing Phormion eleven talents on the deposits,' or 'for the deposits' which he had put out to interest. Kennedy translates, 'upon the deposits to Phormion.' See § 31 fin. P.]

κύριον] 27 § 55 καὶ αὐτῆς (the mother of Dem.) καὶ τῶν χρημάτων κύριον ποιεῖν.

πάντες ἤδεσαν κ.τ.λ.] This must be taken as a rhetorical exaggeration. All that the speaker probably means is that as Phormion was only the lessee, not the owner of the bank, he could be called upon by Apollodorus, the lessor after Pasion's death, to give an account of all the moneys held by the bank. As a contrast we have in § 66 ἐργασίας ἀφανείς διὰ τῆς τραπέζης ποιῆται.

κεκομίσθαι] In middle sense. Or. 41 § 11 οὐκ ἀνενηνόχασι κεκομισμένοι (τὴν φιάλην). Or. 56 (Dionysod.) § 3 δέον δ' αὐτὸν ἐν τῇ πέρυσιν ὧρα κεκομίσθαι τὰ χρήματα. Trans. 'that whatever sums he might be proved to possess, he might pretend he had recovered in the way of debts.'

σολοικίζει τῇ φωνῇ, βάρβαρον] (See note on Or. 36 § 1 τὴν ἀπειρίαν τοῦ λέγειν.) Hdt. iv 117 φωνῇ δὲ οἱ Σαυρομάται νομίζουσι Σκυθικῇ, σολοικίζοντες αὐτῇ. Aeschin. 3 § 172 βάρβαρος ἑλληνίζων τῇ φωνῇ. σόλοικος is a word of narrower meaning than βάρβαρος and is applied mainly to faults of pronunciation or mistakes in Grammar, especially Syntax, due to foreign extraction. The word βάρβαρος originally referred to language (as an onomatopoeitic word connected with the Sanskrit var-vara, 'a jabberer') and was used to describe the incoherent jargon (as the Greeks considered it) of all languages but their own (Aesch. Ag. 1050). But it gradually attained a wider signification and embraced all that was non-Hellenic in the customs, the politics, the laws, and the moral and intellectual characteristics of foreign nations. (Cf. Isocr. Paneg. § 3 n.)

Hesychius (possibly with the present passage in view) has the gloss σολοικίζει· βαρβαρίζει, and Aristotle (περὶ σοφιστικῶν ἐλέγχων § 3) explains σολοικίζειν by τῇ λέξει βαρβαρίζειν and (in § 14) illustrates it by instances from the rules of gender. The distinction drawn between βαρβαρισμός and σολοικισμός by Zeno and the Stoics, and accepted by the writers on Rhetoric, is perhaps best expressed by Quintilian: 'vitium quod fit in singulis verbis, sit barbarismus ... cetera vitia omnia ex pluribus vocibus sunt, quorum est solocismus' (i 5, 6 and 34).

[Apollodorus wishes to throw a doubt on Phormion's ever having had a lease at all on the terms now brought forward. He says he would have been a fool to pay so much for a business that was encumbered if not insolvent; and Pasion would have been equally foolish if he had let the bank to one who had managed it so badly as Phormion. P.]

εἰ γὰρ κ.τ.λ.] A sophistical argument to bear out the previous clause δι' ὃν ὠφειλήκει ἢ τράπεζα. It is quite true that

ἡ τράπεζα ἐνεδέησε χρημάτων, but then the 11 talents in question were held by Pasion on the security of land and were part of the assets of the business.— On καθήμενον κ.τ.λ. v. Or. 36 § 7, n.

ἐν τῷ μυλῶνι] So far from being made master of the rest of the household, Phormion ought to have been punished, as a slave, with hard-labour at the mill, for bad management. For the mill, as a common part of slaves' labour, cf. the Phormio of Terence ii 1, 18 herus si redierit, Molendum usque in pistrino, vapulandum, habendae compedes. In Lysias Or. i § 18 a master threatens his θεράπαινα with the punishment μαστιγωθεῖσαν εἰς μύλωνά ἐμπεσεῖν, and Dinarchus, contr. Dem. § 23, says that Memnon the miller was condemned to death for making a freeborn boy work in his mill. Cf. Eur. Cycl. 240 εἰς μύλωνά καταβαλεῖν, and Pollux ἵνα κολάζονται οἱ δοῦλοι, μύλωνες κ.τ.λ. (K. F. Hermann, Privatali. § 24, 9, p. 216 Blümmner.) The parallel of Samson, 'eyeless in Gaza at the mill

34. ἐὼ ταῦτα κ.τ.λ.] The speaker, it will be observed, makes no attempt to meet fairly the statement made on the opposite side, accounting for the 11 talents not being actually in the bank. (Or. 36 §§ 4—6.)

ὑφῆρται] 20 § 24. [Phormion, he says, has filched, or secretly withdrawn, eleven talents from the bank, which he now pretends Pasion and Pasion's heirs were bound to repay. P.]

μὴ τραπεζίτευσιν] The object of this clause appears to have been to prevent Phormion's doing business on his own account, apart from the profits made on the bank. The plaintiff seems rather unfairly to suggest that Phormion was allowed to make no profit whatever out of the lease.

τίς γὰρ ἂν κ.τ.λ.] 'Is there any man, I ask, who, after taking precautions to ensure his own children receiving the profits of a lessee's management of the bank, by preventing him from doing business on his own behalf, would have nevertheless actually provided for that lessee's appropriating the profits he had himself laid by in his lifetime and left behind him on his death?' [The two things, he says, are inconsistent. If Phormion must bank only in the interest and for the benefit of Pasion's family, it was not likely that he would have had so much money left him by Pasion; i.e. he must have got it unfairly. The sentence is artificially constructed, and is one of those sometimes called 'bimembered,' where each clause is antithetical to the other, as here προύνοσθη δπως το παρεσκεύασεν δπως. P.]

τυχῶν γε τῆς παρ' ὑμῶν δωρεῖας] The fact that Pasion was made a citizen of Athens increases the disgrace brought on his family by his providing in his alleged will that his wife should marry Phormion.—Or. 59 § 2 ψηφισαμένου τοῦ δήμου τοῦ Ἀθηναίων Ἀθηναίων εἶναι Πασίωνα καὶ ἐγγόνους τοὺς ἐκείνου διὰ τὰς εὐεργεσίας τὰς εἰς τὴν πόλιν followed by τῇ τοῦ δήμου δωρεῇ. Or. 36 § 47. [τυχῶν γε seems an imaginary answer in favour of Phormion; 'very true; but then it was after he had received the franchise (that he took the wife).'] 'So then' (the retort is), 'like a slave who makes a wife over to his master, rather than in the converse case, Pasion gave him, it seems, a marriage portion larger than any citizen ever did!' P.]

ὥσπερ ἂν] sc. διδοῖν. Pasion's gift of his wife with a large dowry to Phormion, is the kind of gift a slave might offer his master in acknowledgment that all the slave had belonged by right to his master, and not such a gift as might be expected from a superior to an inferior. In the latter case a very slight favour would be enough. At any rate the inferior would be content with being allowed to have the honour of being married to his superior's wife, without any dowry at all.

τοῖς εἰκόσι...ἐξελέγχεται ψευδῇ] 'That which the facts, the dates, the probabilities of the case, show to be false, Stephanus the defendant has not scrupled to bear witness to.' Kennedy. For τοῖς εἰκόσι see esp. §§ 9—14. τοῖς χρόνοις...ἐξελέγχεται (cf. 19 § 60) seems inexplicable, except as a rhetorical flourish, for we have had nothing like an argument from dates; and Dobree rightly asks Quomodo? Huettner suggests a reference to § 33. Even τοῖς πεπραγμένοις is barely justifiable, unless it is to be referred to §§ 15—18.

§§ 37—39. Phormion attempts to prove the existence of the 'will,' by going about saying that Nicocles gave evidence to having been guardian, and Pasicles to having been in wardship, under the will. Why then were not the terms of the will deposed to by Nicocles and Pasicles, instead of by Stephanus and his friends? Was it because the former did not know the terms? If not, much less could the latter. How then came the latter witnesses to depose to one set of facts, the former to another? It's the old story; they divided the responsibility of the wrong; the guardian and ward deposed to the guardianship as being under the will, and the other witnesses, under cloak of a challenge, deposed to the contents—the scandalous contents—of the 'will.'

§§ 40—42. In bar of the previous action, Phormion pleaded a discharge deposed to have been granted by me, releasing him from all further claims.

This is false, as I shall prove at the proper time; but even assuming it to be true, it shows that Stephanus has given false evidence and that the will to which he bears witness is a forgery. For no one would be so foolish as to take the precaution of having witnesses present when he gave a discharge to a lessee with a view to getting rid of any claims against himself on the part of that lessee; and yet allow the 'lease' itself and the 'will' to remain sealed to his detriment. The plea is therefore inconsistent with the evidence and the lease is inconsistent with the will; and thus the whole affair is proved to be a fabrication and a fraud.

distinction there drawn between ἀφιέναι and ἀπαλλάττειν may be exemplified thus:

ἀφῆκε μὲν Ἀπολλόδωρος ὁ ἀπαλλαγείς, ἀπήλλαξε δὲ Φορμίων ὁ ἀφεθείς.

41. τούτῳ κ.τ.λ.] Stephanus, however, has no right to declare that the evidence to the release is false. [The meaning is, that Stephanus was in league with Phormion, and therefore was not in a position to deny, though he knew it to be untrue, any plea of Phormion's against Apollodorus. P.]

τοῦ βεβαίαν αὐτῷ τὴν ἀπαλλαγὴν εἶναι] The plaintiff's object in having witnesses to his alleged ἀφesis of Phormion would be to ensure his own ἀπαλλαγὴ, that is, his getting quit of any counter-claim on the part of the latter. Or. 33 § 3 πάντων ἀπαλλαγῆς καὶ ἀφesis γενομένης. Cf. 36 § 25.

If ἀπαλλαγὴ were synonymous with ἀφesis, we should have to render 'in order to make his discharge of Phormion's dues valid.' 'Who would be such a fool,' he would then ask, 'as to give an ἀφesis in presence of witnesses and so lose all right to further claims?' But the sense is rather: 'Admit it true that the plaintiff gave a release to Phormion in the presence of witnesses with a view to his own riddance of any counter-claim on Phormion's part; no one who had (as alleged) done this, would be such a fool as to allow the compacts and agreements, the will, &c. (καὶ τὰλλα sc. περὶ τὴν μίσθωσιν) to remain in existence to his own detriment. No! if he had given a receipt, he would have opened and suppressed the documents. But, as a fact, he had not touched them, and his refraining from suppressing them is thus inconsistent with the alleged grant of a release to Phormion.'—ποιήσασθαι ἀφesis not 'to get' but 'to give a release,'=ἀφείναι, as 'any verb in Greek may be resolved into the cognate substantive with ποιείσθαι.' Shilleto on *Fals. δείκνυε] Plat. Phaedr. 228 π, 268 α. Neither δεικνυ nor ἐδεικ-νυ is found in Dem. ἐδεικνυε occurs in 18 § 233; 19 § 114; 34 § 42 (Huettner).

ἀντιγέγραψαι] ‘You have pleaded’ in answer to the indictment or plaint (λῆξις); see Dict. Antiq. s. v. Antigraphe.
 ‘The two pleadings together, the plaint on the left side, the plea on the right, form (as we should say) the issue on the record. The deposition complained of was annexed’ (C. R.
 Kennedy). Cf. Meier and Schömann, p. 830 Lips.—τὸ καὶ τὸ, ‘so and so’; ‘this or that,’ cf.
 9 § 68; 18 § 243; 19 § 74; 21 § 141; 54 § 26, and similarly τόσα καὶ τόσα. 34 § 24.

46. τὴν ἀντιγραφὴν] Harpocr.
 s. v. τὰ τῶν δικάζομένων γράμματα, ἃ ἐδίδωσαν περὶ τοῦ πράγματος, καὶ τὰ τοῦ διώκοντος καὶ τὰ τοῦ φεύγοντος, ἀντιγραφὴ, καὶ τὰ μαρτύρια· Δημ. κατὰ Στεφάνου...

 The document that follows, is the only specimen of an ἀντιγραφή that has come down to us. Though rejected by West-ermann, and bracketed by Dindorf, it is quoted by Pollux 8, 58 and in the lexicon rhetoricum Cantabrigiense, p. 664.

ἐπ' ἐξαπάτη] Or. 20 (Lept.) § 98 ἐξαπάτης ἔνεκα.—ῥηθησομέ-νους. This future is used chiefly in the participle and infinitive (22 § 4; 27 § 53; 47 § 3; 58 § 25), while the ‘third future’ is probably confined to the third person singular εἰρήσεται (Veitch Greek Verbs s. v. *εἰρω). ῥηθήσεται however is found in Thuc.
 i 73, Ar. Ethics iv. 1, 14, and Rhet. i 12 and 13.

§§ 47—50. I hear they propose to speak of my original action and to denounce it as fraudulent and vexatious. But I submit that this would be irrelevant to the present issue, and I claim that, instead of their being allowed to go into the proofs of the original claim which they debarred me from adducing, they should be compelled, in the interests of justice and for the convenience of the jury, to keep to the record, and prove that the testimony by which they deprived me of those proofs was true.

47. πυνθάνομαι] Lyourg. 55 πυνθάνομαι δέ, Dem. 21 § 208 πέπυσμαι τοίνυν.

περὶ ὧν = περὶ τούτων περὶ ὧν δίκην λαγχάνειν περὶ τίνος is, however, rare (40 §§ 17, 31, 35); cf. λαγχάνειν περὶ τίνος (37 § 18). Elsewhere the genitive alone is

τὴν ἐξ ἀρχῆς δίκην] The original indictment of Phormion in the δίκη ἀφορμῆς to which Or. 36 is a παραγραφή.

συκοφαντήματ'] not found elsewhere in the Demosthenic speeches.

τὸ ὕδωρ] see Or. 54 § 36.

48. οὔτε νῦν κ.τ.λ.] i.e. 'it is easy enough for my opponents to introduce into their reply matter that is irrelevant to the case and is in no part of my indictment, just as formerly it was easy enough for them to get an acquittal by reciting false depositions.'

Whether we read οὔτε τότε ψευδεῖς or not, we must in either case take the second clause as a pointed reference to the former trial.

49. αἷς δὲ ἀφείλοντο μαρτυρίας] so. τοὺς ἐλέγχους.—On τὴν δίκην εἰσῶ, see note on § 7 πρὸς ἐκείνους εἰσῶ.

50. περὶ... ὑπὲρ] § 11 n. δῶξις] (Dem.) Or. 47 § 70 οἱ δὲ νόμοι τούτων κελεύουσι τὴν δῶξιν εἶναι. The word is also found in Antiphon Or. 6 § 7 τὴν δῶξιν εὐσεβέας ἐνεκα ποιέσθαι.—On λήξει... εἴληχα cf. Or. 36 § 21 λήξων.

§§ 51, 52. The defendant will urge that the jury in the former trial were led to dismiss my suit by reason of the witnesses in support of the discharge on which Phormion's special plea was based; and not by reason of those who (like himself) gave evidence to the will, as part of the main issue. But I reply that every one knows that juries look to the main issue as well as to the special plea, and I contend that witnesses to the main issue (like the defendant) crippled my case on the special plea. Where all gave false evidence, it is not enough for any individual defendant to point out that some other witness damaged my case more than he did, but he must prove that his own evidence is true.

51. παραγραφὴν ἡττημένος] 24 § 15 τὰς γραφὰς ἡττηντο.

τὰ πεπραγμένα] The facts of the case on its merits, as opposed to the special plea. See note on Or. 36 Argument 1. 23 ἄπτεται τῆς εὐθείας κ.τ.λ.

ἀσθενεῖς ἐποίησαν κ.τ.λ.] 'Weakened my arguments on the special plea.' This need not imply that he actually spoke; as a matter of fact, we find the court would not listen to him (§ 6).

52. ἀποφαίνειν...δεικνύναι] 18 § 206; 27 § 62; 55 § 6.

§§ 53—56. By giving false evidence against me, the defendant has done wrong to the unwritten laws of natural affection, for my wife is his first cousin. Very different has been the conduct of my wife's father, Deinias, who holds himself debarred by the claims of kinship from giving even true evidence on my behalf against my opponent Stephanus, who is his sister's son.

τοὺς γεγραμμένους νόμους...τὰ τῆς φύσεως οἰκεία] Soph. Antig. 454 οὐ γὰρ σθέενειν τοσοῦτον φόβον τὰ σὰ κηρύγμαθ' ὥστ' ἀγραπτα κάσφαλῇ θεῶν νόμιμα δύνασθαι θνητὸν ὄνθ' ὑπερδραμεῖν. There, as here, the unwritten law of natural affection is contrasted with human ordinances. Cf. ἀγραφος νόμος (And. 1 § 86), ἀγραφοὶ νόμοι (Plat. Rep. 563 D), ἀγραφα νόμιμα (Dem. 23 § 70; 18 § 275).

'Intelligens (asks Cobet) quae sint τὰ τῆς φύσεως οἰκεία opposita τοῖς νόμοις τοῖς γεγραμμένοις? Non opinor. Sed latet in οἰκεία vocabulum quo non est aliud apud Oratores tritius et frequentius, nempe τὰ τῆς φύσεως δίκαια ἀναιρεῖ, veluti in Orat. xxv 28 προφάσεις πλάττων καὶ ψευδεῖς αἰτίας συντιθεῖς τὰ κοινὰ δίκαια ἀνατρέψειν οἶε. Rectissime igitur componuntur τὰ τῆς φύσεως δίκαια et τὰ τῶν νόμων δίκαια, quae commemorat idem Orator xxv 3 μεθ' ἑαυτοῦ δειξὼν ἐκάτερος τὰ τῶν νόμων δίκαια' (Novae Lectiones p. 619).—τὰ τῆς φύσεως οἰκεία may however be retained in spite of the above suggestion, and we may readily render it 'natural relationship' or better 'the home-ties of nature,' 'the natural ties of home affections.' Stephanus is denounced in § 65 as 'the common enemy of all human nature'; and in § 54, as neglecting τὰ τῆς φύσεως ἀναγκαῖα.

C. R. Kennedy (Introduction to this speech p. 45) observes, "To give wilfully false testimony against the plaintiff was an aggravation of his offence,... for the Athenians excused a man for being reluctant even to give true evidence against a relation." [The patriarchal system, descended from the old Aryan peoples, made the Greeks view all family ties as almost inviolable. With all their respect for 'written law,' the obligations of relationship had more of religious sanction. See Cox, Hist. of Greece, i. pp. 15—18. P.]

54. ὁ τῆς ἐμῆς γυναικὸς πατὴρ] i.e. Deinias, father of the Theomnestus who speaks the first 15 §§ of Or. 59 κατὰ Νεαίρας, when Apollodorus takes up the speech. Apollodorus, besides being brother-in-law to Theomnestus by marrying the sister of the latter, gave his own daughter in marriage to him (Or. 59 § 2).

ἀνεψιαδοὺς] Hesych. ἀνεψιαδοὺς· ἐκ τοῦ ἀνεψίου γεγονώς, ἢ τῆς ἀνεψιάς, second cousins.
 The form of the word follows the analogy of λυκιδεὺς, κυνα-δεὺς, ἀδελφιδοὺς, θυγατρίδοὺς, ἀλωπεκιδεὺς, the terminations in -ιδεὺς, -ιδέος, -αδεὺς, -αδέος (οὗς) being a kind of patronymic form. P.] See Dict. Ant. s. v.

πολλοὶ πεποιήκασιν κ.τ.λ.] Instances of such generosity are given in the passages quoted from Dem. in the note on § 35, supra, where instead of ἐπιδύναι προῖκα the rather less common phrase προσθεῖναι προίκα is used.

τὰ τῆς συγγενείας ἀναγκαῖα]
 'The strong ties of kindred.'
 Cf. necessitudo. Fals. Leg. § 290 ὑπὲρ συγγενῶν καὶ ἀναγκαίων.
 Cf. Or. 36 § 30 ἀνάγκη...οἰκέων.

55. Δεινίας Θεομνήστου Ἀθμονεὺς] The father's name is very likely to be right, as Deinias had a son named Theomnestus (Or. 59 §§ 2 and 16) and the grandson very often bore the same name as the grandfather (note on Or. 39 § 27). But of the numerous persons named Deinias or Theomnestus, not one is described in any inscription as Ἀθμονεὺς, and the ascription of the witness to the deme in question is perhaps due to the invention of the composer of the document.

It is clear that Deinias, on being called, refused to swear to the deposition read aloud to him, οὐδὲ τἀληθῇ μαρτυρεῖν ἐθέ-λει. The deposition ought therefore to be followed by the word ἐξωμοσία as in § 60. (A. West-ermann, u. s. pp. 109—111.)
 Cf. Or. 49 § 20.

Apollodorus, be it observed,

<τὴν>^a αὐτοῦ ἐκδοῦναι Ἀπολλοδώρῳ κατὰ τοὺς νόμους γυναικα ἔχειν, καὶ μηδεπώποτε παραγενέσθαι μηδὲ αἰσθῆσθαι, ὅτι Ἀπολλόδωρος ἀφῆκε τῶν ἐγκλημάτων ἀπάντων Φορμίωνα.²

assumes that the reason why Deinias refuses to swear to the deposition is that it would be to the detriment of his kinsman Stephanus; but the disclaimer may really have been due to Deinias being aware that the evidence was false. As the document before us is untrustworthy, we cannot tell what the proposed evidence really was,—possibly something referring to Pasion's will (as suggested by Westermann u. s.) or rather something to the detriment of Stephanus' character, e.g. his bad behaviour to Apollodorus and his family, or his receiving bribes from Phormion to give false evidence against the plaintiff. (Lortzing, Apoll. p. 80.)

56. δμοίός γε] Or. 24 (Timocr.) § 106 δμοίός γε, οὐ γάρ; Σόλων νομοθέτης καὶ Τιμοκράτης, ib. 181 and Or. 22 (Androt.) § 73 δμοῖον γε, οὐ γάρ; also 18 § 136; 36 § 56.

ἀλλ'—οὐκ ὥκνησε] 25 § 51

ἀλλ' οὐχ οὗτος οὐδέν, οὐδ' ἂν ἔχοι δεῖξαι, 9 § 31 ἀλλ' οὐχ ὑπὲρ Φίλιππου... οὐχ οὕτως ἔχουσιν. Elsewhere we have the ἀλλά repeated, e.g. Or. 21 (Midias) § 200 ἀλλ' οὐ Μειδίας, ἀλλ' ἀπὸ τῆς ἡμέρας ταύτης λέγει κ.τ.λ. and Or. 23 (Aristocr.) § 89 ἀλλ' οὐκ Ἀριστοκράτης, ἀλλὰ προφηλακίζει μὲν κ.τ.λ. Passages like these led Dobree to say, 'malim ἀλλ' οὐκ ὥκνησε,' but either construction is allowable.—οὐδ' εἰ μηδένα τῶν ἄλλων, sc. ἥσχύνη. If he had no respect for any one else, he might at least have respected (had some regard for) his own mother and her relations.

§§ 57—62. I must tell the jury, by the way, of an atrocious trick which was played me to my great disadvantage in the former action. At the trial itself, the deposition on which I mainly relied proved to be missing. I have since learnt that it was stolen by Stephanus while the suit was still before the arbitrator.

ἐξεπλάγην ὅτ' ἡγωνιζόμεν ὦ ἄνδρες δικασταί, τοῦθ' ὑμῖν εἰπεῖν βούλομαι· τήν τε γὰρ τούτου πονηρίαν ἔτι μᾶλλον ὑμεῖς ὄψεσθε, καὶ ἐγὼ τῶν γεγενημένων ἀποδουράμενος τὰ πλεῖστα πρὸς ὑμᾶς ὥσπερ εἰ ῥάων

^b 'secl. ποιῆσαι, quo sensus obscuratur' Bl. coll. 19 § 47; 3 § 1; 29 § 11; 45 § 28.

I call witnesses to prove this: they take an oath of disclaimer. —I thought as much.—To prove they are perjured, I now produce a challenge (duly attested by witnesses) calling on Stephanus to allow his slave to be tortured as to the abstraction of the document; my witnesses depose he refused the challenge.

Now, do the jury suppose that one who thus perpetrated a theft without any personal provocation, would have had the slightest hesitation in giving false evidence in his own interests and at the special instance of another?

57. ἐξεπλάγην] The form -επλάγην is post-Homeric and is used in compounds with the sense 'strike with terror or amazement' (Veitoh Gk. Vbs. s. v. πλήσσω). For the simple verb, ἐπλήγην is used, as in the first line of the next section, but only in the sense of 'receiving a blow from.'

ἀποδουράμενος τὰ πλεῖστα πρὸς ὑμᾶς] 'by unburdening to you all that I can of my past sorrows.' Hdt. II 141 πρὸς τῷ γαλμα ἀποδύρεσθαι ὅλα κινδυνεύει παθεῖν. Or. 55 § 24; 60 § 37; Plat. Rep. 606 A.

ῥάων ἔσομαι] 'I shall feel relieved' or (to translate it still more closely) 'I shall feel easier.' For this use of ῥάων (εὐθυμότερος, Hesychius), cf. Eur. Ion 875 στέρνων ἀπονησαμένη ῥάων ἔσομαι. Herc. Fur. 1407 φίλτρον τοῦτ' ἔχω ῥάων ἔσει.

58. τῷ κακῷ πληγείς, malo percussus; Hdt. I 41 συμφορῇ πεπληγμένος, Eur. Alc. 405 ξυμφορῇ πεπλήγμεθα.

τήν ἀρχήν] 'the magistrate,' in whose possession the sealed casket of depositions was kept until the trial. Cf. notes on Or. 53 § 24 τήν ἀρχήν and on Or. 39 § 9 where ἀρχήν, like magistratus in Latin and 'authorities' in English, is used of the holder of the office as well as of the office itself. 'Portentose Reiskius τὴν Ἀρχίππην,' says Dobree,—Archippe having died eight or ten years before the suit against Phormion.

τὸν ἐχίνον κεκινήκηναι] 'had tampered with the deposition case.' κινεῖν is similarly used elsewhere in the sense of 'meddling with unlawfully,' in Or. 22 Androt. § 71 and Or. 24 Timocr. § 179 χρήματα κινῶν λεγδ. Hdt. VI 134 κινεῖν τὰ ἀκίνητα.

59. κακῶν ἀλλοτρίων κλέπτῃς κ.τ.λ.] 'did not shrink from being set down as having stolen what stood in other people's way.' κακῶν ἀλλοτρίων κλέπτῃς is a very singular expression, 'a thief of other people's ills,' meaning (as some suppose) one who steals what is detrimental to other people's interests, in this case the μαρτυρία, which is a κακὸν οἰκείον to Phormion and a κακὸν ἀλλότριον to Stephanus. But Lambinus justly objects to the phrase, and Lortzing p. 91 rightly observes, singulariter dicta sunt. Reiske says 'Fur alienorum malorum est Graecis ille qui mala, fraudes, scelera, clam, in occulto exsequitur et perficit, non sponte sua, sed iussu alieno'; and similarly C. R.

Kennedy (rather vaguely) renders it 'a person who would commit a theft as a tool of another.' G. H. Schaefer, who rightly doubts whether κακὰ ἀλλότρια can mean anything but mala quae alius patitur, proposes to read κακιῶν with the sense 'qui quid furatur, ut sceleribus alius accomodet.' Another critic (Beels, diatribe p. 100) says: 'κακῶν ἀλλοτρίων κλέπτης lepide vocatur Stephanus, qui in gratiam Phormionis et fortasse eius iussu, testimonium e capsula surripuerat.' Blass takes κακῶν ἀλλοτρίων as a genitive of price. Lastly, Huettner observes: 'κακῶν ἀλλοτρίων κλέπτης Stephanus dicitur, quod surrepto illo testimonio, quo Apollodori causa maxime nitebatur, Phormionis nequitiam dissimulavit et ne coargueretur impedivit (κλέπτειν occultare, Soph. Aj. 1137; Dem. 29 § 5; Aesch. 3 § 142).' In Plato Rep. 346 ε we have μηδὲνα ἐθέλειν ἐκόντα ἄρχειν καὶ τὰ ἀλλότρια κακὰ μεταχειρίζεσθαι ἀνορθοῦντα ('to handle and set right other people's disorders'); but neither this nor any other passage that I can find supports the sense usually assigned to the words before us.

It may therefore be worth while to suggest that κακῶν may be corrupt and should be altered into καὶ τῶν where καὶ emphasizes the whole clause τῶν ἀλλοτρίων κλέπτης ὑπέμεινεν ὀνομασθῆναι, and not τῶν ἀλλοτρίων only. [The latter construction would inappropriately import into the passage some of the humour of the lines in Aristoph. Ranae 610 εἴτ' οὐχὶ δευὰ ταῦτα, τύπτειν τοῦτον κλέπτοντα, πρὸς τ' ἀλλότρια 'isn't it a shame to beat this poor fellow (Xanthias) for stealing, and that too—another man's goods?' καὶ τῶν ἀλλοτρίων κλέπτης seems a highly probable emendation; nor is there any difficulty in καὶ referring to the general character of a κλέπτης τῶν ἀλλοτρίων. P.] Cf. also Or. 28 § 22 ἀλλὰ καὶ τὰλλότρια ἀποστερῶν ἀποδέδεικται.

Or again we may alter κακῶν into καὶ ἐκῶν, comparing § 62 where ὁ τὴν τοῦ κλέπτης φανῆναι (δόξαν) μὴ φνυγῶν is parallel to δε ἃ μηδεὶς ἐκέλευεν ἐθελοντῆς (= ἐκῶν) πονηρὸς ἦν.

ἀλλοτρίων in any case is intended to point the contrast with ὑπὲρ αὐτοῦ in the second half of the sentence.

composer of the present document and the next and of that in Or. 46 § 21 has not taken the trouble to invent any names for the witnesses. He describes them as 'friends of Phormion' to suggest a motive for their disclaiming cognisance of the alleged theft on the part of his witness Stephanus. The writer adds that it was 'on the declaration or award of the arbitrator between Phormion and Ap.' But so long as there were fresh witnesses being brought forward (as appears from § 58 πρὸς μαρτυρίαν κ.τ.λ.), the case was not ripe for the arbitrator's decision; so we must either suppose that the writer has made a mistake, or that at any rate he uses ἀπόφασις in a vague and general sense for the process of decision and its immediate antecedents. (A. Westermann, u. s. p. 111, 112; cf. Kirchner, p. 31; Schucht, p. 71.) —On ἀπόφασις, cf. Or. 54 § 27 ad fin. The word in this sense is from ἀποφαίνω, not from ἀπόβημι.

ἡ τῆς χρείας ἀνάγκη] ἡ ἀναγκαία χρεία· 23 § 148; 50 § 13; ἀνάγκη and χρεία are practically synonymous as in Hom. Il. 8, 57; Thuc. vi 68 § 4; Arist. Plut. 534. 'The pressure of their necessitous lot leads to some allowance being made for them in the eyes of those who view the case with human fellow-feeling.' Stobaeus (46, 72) has ἡ τῆς ἀνάγκης χρεία. He also has οὐδεμίαν δικαίαν πρόφασιν ἔχουσι, besides, for obvious reasons, omitting ὥσπερ οὗτος. The extract proceeds with the words πολλὰ δ' οὖν κακὰ πράγματα τοὺς ἐλευθέρους ἡ πένια βιάζεται ποιεῖν, ἐφ' οἷς ἂν ἐλεοῖντο δικαιότερον ἢ προσπολλύουσιν, which do not appear in the present passage. They are really taken from Dem. Or. 57 (Eubulides) § 45, as Meineke might have noted in his edition of Stobaeus. For the copyist's patchwork δ' οὖν κακὰ πράγματα we should therefore restore δουλικά πράγματα from Demosthenes himself, and print the passage as a separate extract.

ἐξ εὐπορίας πονηροὺς] 'made bad by their wealth.' Kennedy is hardly correct here in rendering 'men who (for all their riches) are thus flagrantly dishonest.' It is not in spite of, but directly from, their large means that they become bad citizens. P.]

§§ 68—70. His affected airs as he sullenly slinks along the sides of the streets, so far from showing a modest reserve, really indicate an unsociable character. All this solemn guise is purposely put on, to veil his real disposition, while it serves to repel the approaches of his fellow-men. He has never contributed to the needs of any one of all the citizens of Athens; but as a usurer, who counts his neighbours' needs his own good fortune, he has ejected relations of his from their homes, and shown himself ruthless in the exaction of interest from his debtors.

68. ἂ πέπλασται κ.τ.λ.] explained by the contrast immediately after, τοῖς ἀπλῶς ὡς πεφύκασι βαδίζουσι καὶ φαιδροῖς. ἂ πέπλασται καὶ βαδίζει instead of ἣν ἔχει πεπλασμένην ὄψιν καὶ τὸ σεμνὸν βάδισμα, is a fresh instance (like ὧν διεφθάρκει in § 27) of the fondness of the Greeks for throwing into the verb what in other languages would be naturally expressed by a substantive.

ἔσκυθρωπακῶς] Or. 54 § 34 μεθ' ἡμέραν μὲν ἔσκυθρωπακάσι καὶ λακωνίζεν φασι... For this and similar words expressing sullen and morose demeanour the student should read the speech of Hercules in Eur. Alc. 773—802.

For a similar passage, showing how keenly the behaviour of persons walking in the streets was criticised at Athens, we may compare Or. 37 (Pant.) § 52 where the defendant anticipates that the plaintiff will bring up against him his fast walking and loud talking, and his constantly carrying a stick. After contrasting their respective characters he adds (§ 55) τοιοῦτος ἐγὼ ὁ ταχὺ βαδίζων καὶ τοιοῦτος σὺ ὁ ἀτρέμας. Again Plato, Charmid. p. 159b, expressly mentions 'walking quietly in the streets' as a mark of σωφροσύνη. σωφροσύνη τὸ κομῶν πάντα πράττειν καὶ ἡσυχῇ ἐν τε ταῖς ὁδοῖς βαδίζειν καὶ διαλέγεσθαι. Aristotle ascribes κίνησις βραδεία and φωνὴ βαρεῖα to his μεγαλόψυχος (Eth. iv 9=3), and Theophrastus characterises the 'Arrogant man' (ὁ ὑπερήφανος) as δεινὸς... ἐν ταῖς ὁδοῖς πορευόμενος μὴ λαλεῖν τοῖς ἐντυγχάνουσιν, κάτω κεκυφώς.

Cf. supr. § 63 ἴσα βαίνων κ.τ.λ. and infr. § 77.

σχέσει] cf. τὸ σχῆμα inf. § 69; 19 § 251; Plat. Gorg. 511 ε περιπατεῖ ἐν μετρίῳ σχήματι. [διάγειν ἐν σχέσει seems unlike Demosthenes. The same may be said of ποιεῖν δόικητον, 'to deprive of a home,' § 70. P.]

ἀπλῶς] 37 § 43 ἀπλῶς καὶ ὡς πέφυκα ζῆν.

τοῖς...φαιδροῖς...προσελθῶι τις ἂν καὶ δεηθείη] The 'Surly man' (ὁ αὐθάδης) is characterised by Theophrastus as apt προσαγορευθεῖς μὴ ἀντιπροσεῖπαι, and the 'Arrogant man' as προσελθεῖν (to greet) πρότερος οὐδενὶ θελήσας. —φαιδροῖς, 'cheerful,' 'bright' δεηθείη καὶ ἐπαγγεῖλειεν] 'prefer a request and make a promise (or proposal).' The two words are correlative to one another like 'asking and granting a favour.' ἐπαγγεῖλειεν is due to H. Wolf. Dobree unnecessarily suggests 'Quaere an potest = ἐπαγγεῖλαιτο, i.e. openi peteret.' This would involve a needless repetition of the idea of δεηθείη. [Besides, ἐπαγγελλεσθαι is rather 'to make a profession of,' 'to propose that some one should accept your service' in some matter. P.]

πεπλασμένοις καὶ σκυθρωποῖς] 'Affected and sullen characters.'

69. πρόβλημα τοῦ τρόπου] 'A cloak to mask his real character.' Soph. Phil. 1008 ὥς μ' ὑπῆλθες, ὡς μ' ἐθάρσσω λαβὼν πρόβλημα σαντοῦ παῖδα τόνδ' ἀγνώτ' ἐμοί. Cf. παραπέτασμα supr. § 19, also πρόσχημα in the sense of 'an excuse,' 5 § 6, Plat. Prot. 316 d. For προβάλλεσθαι, praetendere, cf. Thuc. i 37 § 4; ii 87 § 3; iii 63 § 2.

ἐνταῦθα δηλοῖ] 'He shows herein the real rudeness and malignity of his temper,' § 70; 25 § 45; 54 § 14; 21 § 204; Plat. Grat. 394 E.

τῷ πώποτ' εἰσήνεγκας] 'to whose service did you ever contribute?' Cf. Or. 53 § 9 ἐρανον αὐτῷ...εἰσόσοιμι.

συμβέβλησαι] 'to whom have you ever lent any aid?' (Kennedy). συμβάλλεσθαι (with perf. pass. used as mid.) is here used in a general sense of helping, as in Or. 21 (Mid.) § 133 συμβαλουμένους τοῖς συμμάχοις. Cf. 59 § 69 εἰς ἐκδοσιν...τῇ θυγατρὶ συμβαλέσθαι, followed by εἰσενεγκεῖν εἰς τὴν ἐκδοσιν (§ 70). It is used of 'contributing' ib. § 113 προῖκα...συμβάλλεται, Lys. 4 § 10 τὸ ἥμισυ τοῦ ἀργυρίου συνεβαλόμην. We have the active use in Or. 84 § 1 συμβόλαια πολλοῖς συμβάλλοντες.

70. ἐξέβαλες] 'ousted from his patrimony,' cf. Or. 36 § 49 ἐκβαλεῖν. The debtor in such a case would be said ἐκπεσεῖν or ἐκοτῆναι τῶν ὄντων, ib. § 50. Or. 29 § 2 λῆαν ὥμως καὶ πικρῶς ὄντα συγγενῇ τοῦτον ἐκ τῆς οὐσίας ἀπάσης ἐκβέβληκα.

θεῖον] his (maternal) uncle, not patrium. Reiske suggests that this Nicias may be identified with the person of that name in Or. 36 § 17 married to the sister of Apollodorus' wife. But the relationships that would thus result are rather complex (cf. supra §§ 54—56), and it seems simpler to suppose that there were two persons of that name in the same family.

ἀοίκητον] 'a homeless outcast.' The word is rare in this meaning, being generally used of an uninhabitable country ('ἀοικητος καὶ ἔρημος Hdt. II 34, cf. v 10. So in Plat. Legg. 778 B, etc.' L and S). Unless we accept it in the sense of 'homeless,' it would be necessary either (as Reiske says) to alter παῖδα into οἶκον or to read δοικον (as G. H. Schaefer suspects). The latter word is found in this sense in Plato Symp. 203 D and elsewhere. In Lucian however (p. 727), the word ἀοικητος is used as in the present passage: Gallus § 17 περιέμενον ἀοικητος ἐστῶς, ἀχρι δὲ ὁ Μνήσαρχος ἐχειργάζετό μοι τὸν οἶκον. ('Ἀλεκτρυὼν loquitur.)

μέρος πεποιήκας. οὐδείς δὲ πρόποθ' οὕτω πικρῶς οὐδ' ὑπερήμερον εἰσέπραξεν ὥς σὺ τοὺς ὀφείλοντας τοὺς τόκους. εἴθ' ὃν ὁράτ' ἐπὶ πάντων οὕτως ἄγριον καὶ μιαρὸν, τοῦτον ὑμεῖς ἡδίκηκός' ἐπ' αὐτοφώρῳ λαβόντες οὐ τιμωρήσεσθε; δεῖν' ἄρ' ὧ ἄνδρες δικασταὶ ποιήσετε κοῦχί δίκαια.

ὑπερήμερον εἰσέπραξεν] 'levied judgment on a defaulter.' (Kennedy.) Dem. Or. 33 (Apat.) § 6. Or. 21 (Mid.) § 11 τῶν τοῦς ὑπερημέρους εἰσπραττόντων, and §§ 81, 89 συνέβη δὲ ὑπερημέρῳ γενομένῳ λαθεῖν αὐτῷ διὰ τὸ ἀδικηθῆναι. In Theophrastus the 'Penurious man' (ὁ μικρολόγος) is described as δεινὸς ὑπερημέριαν πρᾶξαι καὶ τόκον τόκου ἀπαιτῆσαι. Pollux: (speaking of debt) ὁ οὐκ ἐκτίσας κατὰ προθεσμίαν ὑπερήμερος. Harpocr. ὑπερήμεροι οἱ δίκην ὀφλόντες ὁπαινοῦν καὶ τὰ ἐπιτίμια τοῖς ἐλοῦσι μὴ ἀποδιδόντες ἐν ταῖς τακταῖς προθεσμίαις...

In the whole of this passage the speaker dexterously avails himself of the odium and unpopularity attending the trade of a money-lender at Athens. Cf. Or. 37 (Pant.) § 52 μισοῦσιν Ἀθηναῖοι τοὺς δανείσαντας. Thus, in the Epistles of Alciphron, borrowed doubtless in part from the later Attic Comedy, in a letter beginning μέγα κακὸν εἰσιν οἱ κατὰ τὴν πόλιν τοκογλύφοι, the money-lender is described as πρεσβύτερον, ὀφθῆναι ῥικνόν, συνεσπακτά τὰς ὀφρῦς (I 26), cf. ib. III 3 § 2 ὁ Χρέμης ὁ κατεσκληκῶς, ὁ κατεσπακῶς τὰς ὀφρῦς, ὁ ταυρηδὸν πάντας ὑποβλέπων. In the same letter we have another

εἴθ' ὃν κ.τ.λ.] 21 § 97; 23 § 174; 25 § 53; 39 § 12; 24 §§ 208, 205; 19 § 282. Cf. Midias § 97.

§§ 71—76. Against Phormion, who produced the defendant as his witness, you have a right to be indignant for his effrontery and his ingratitude. When Phormion was for sale, instead of being bought by a cook, or what not, and learning his master's trade, he had the good fortune to come into the hands of my father, who taught him the business of a banker, and conferred on him many other benefits. Yet, with all his wealth, he is ungrateful enough to allow the founders of his fortunes to remain in poverty and distress. He has not scrupled to marry her, who was once his own master's wife, thus securing to himself a large marriage-portion, while he suffers my daughters to languish without a dowry and become poor old maids in their father's house. Meanwhile, he counts and calculates the amount of my money, and criticises me as narrowly as a master might his slave.

71. νεμεσῆσαι] A poetic verb, rarely found in good Greek

 ἰδόντας. οἶμαι γὰρ ἅπαντας ὑμᾶς εἰδέναι, ὅτι τοῦτον, prose. It occurs, however, in Or. 20 (Lept.) § 161 τοιαῦτα... οἷς μηδεὶς ἂν νευεσθῆσαι; twice in Plato, and also in Arist. Rhet. II 9. Here, as elsewhere, νευεσθᾶν is used in its regular sense of 'indignation at undeserved good fortune' (Arist. Eth. II 7 § 15 ὁ νευεσθητικὸς λυπεῖται ἐπὶ τοῖς ἀναξίως ἐδ' πράττουσι).

ἂν μαθὼν... ἦν] ἂν belongs solely to ἦν, the principal verb of the apodosis, although it is placed immediately before the emphatic participle μαθὼν. 6 § 20. See Goodwin's Moods and Tenses § 42, 3 note 1; § 224 ed. 1889.

72. τραπεζίτης ὦν] The participial clause is here, as often, more emphatic than the principal verb ἐκτίσας. 'Since my father, into whose hands he came, was a banker.'

73. γινώριμον] Kennedy renders this: 'a friend instead of a slave.' γινώριμος however is a weaker word than φίλος, though it is curiously placed after it by an anti-climax in Or. 18 (de Corona) § 284 ξένος ἢ φίλος ἢ γινώριμος. But in the present passage, the context leads us to prefer translating it: 'a man of note instead of a mere slave.' In 8 § 66 γινώριμος is contrasted with ἀνώνυμος.

τοσοῦτων ἀγαθῶν ἡγεμόνας] 'who had led him to, showed him the way to, so many social and political advantages.' ἡγεμόνας, auctores, 18 § 24; Xen. Cyr. I 5 § 12.

ἀναιδείας] For the gen. cf. Or. 36 § 48 εἰς τοῦθ' ἤκειν μανίας. 19 § 72; 21 § 194; 27 §§ 24, 31; 21 § 62; 57 § 64; 33 §§ 15, 22; 59 § 72.

74. καταχύσματα] Harpocr. Δημοσθένης ἐν τῷ κατὰ Στεφάνου α'. ὅτι τῶν νεωνήτων οἱ δεσπότες τραγήματα κατέχεον Ἀριστοφάνης Πλούτῳ δηλοῖ (Ar. Plut. 768 φέρε νῦν τοῦσ' εἶσω κομίσω καταχύσματα ὥσπερ νεωνήτοιςιν ὀφθαλμοῖς ἐγώ). The sweetmeats, nuts, &c. were scattered over the newly-purchased slave and scrambled for by his fellow-servants. 'This was done, not on the slave's account, but for the sake of a good omen, as the Scholiast tells us.' Becker's Charicles III 33 (=p. 368 of Eng. abridg.). Hermann, Privatalt. § 12, 5, p. 82 Blümner; St John's Manners and Customs of the Greeks, III 27.

οὔσης κυρίας] He, as the husband, has got possession of property, as κύριος (or legal possessor) of her, as she was of the said property. P.] Meier

θυγατέρας] Two daughters, one of whom was shortly afterwards married to Theomnestus, the prosecutor of Neaera (Or. 59 §§ 2, 8).

75. εἰ...συνέβη τι παθεῖν κ.τ.λ.] 'If, in the ordinary course of nature, anything had happened to me'; a common euphemism for death. Cf. 23 § 59 and note on Or. 54 § 25.

οἷα πόλλ'] 8 § 41 ἐάν ποτε συμβῇ τι πταῖσμα, ἃ πολλὰ γένοιτ' ἂν ἀνθρώπῳ.

ἐπεδικάζοντο] Or. 43 Macart. § 55 τῆς ἐπικλήρου ἐπιδικάζεσθαι and ἐπεδικαζόμεν γενέει ὧν ἐγγυράτω. When there was no son to inherit the estate, the heiresses were bound to be married to their nearest relatives (not in the ascending line). The next of kin brought his claim before the chief Archon, whose duty it was ἐπιμελεῖσθαι τῶν ἐπικλήρων εἰσιν αὐταῖς διὰ τὸ τὴν μητέρα τὴν ἐμὴν τοῦτον λαβεῖν· ἐπειδὴ δ' ἀπόρως ἡμεῖς ἔχομεν, τῆνικαῦτα δ' οὐ συνεκδώσει ταύτας, ἀλλὰ λέγει καὶ λογίζεται τὸ πλῆθος ὧν ἐγὼ χρημάτων ἔχω. καὶ γὰρ τοῦτ' 76 ἀτοπώτατον πάντων. ὧν μὲν ἀπεστέρηκεν ἡμᾶς χρημάτων, οὐδέπω καὶ τήμερον ἠθέλησεν ὑποσχεῖν τὸν λόγον^b, ἀλλὰ μῆδ' ^c εἰσαγωγίμους εἶναι τὰς δίκας παραγράφεται· ἃ δὲ τῶν πατρῶων ἐνειμάμην ἐγώ, ταῦτα λογίζεται. καὶ τοὺς μὲν ἄλλους ἂν τις ἴδοι τοὺς οἰκέτας ὑπὸ τῶν δεσποτῶν ἐξεταζομένους· οὗτος

(Or. 43 § 75), public notice was given of the claim, and if no one appeared to dispute it, the Archon adjudged the heiress to him (ἐπεδικασεν αὐτῷ τὴν ἐπικληρον). If another claimant appeared, a court was held to decide the suit, according to the Athenian law of consanguinity. Cases even occurred in which the suitor would get his wife taken off his hands to enable him to marry such an heiress (e.g. Or. 47 § 41). If the 'heiress' was poor, and the nearest relative did not choose to marry her, he was bound to give her a marriage-portion according to his own fortune (C. R. Kennedy, Dict. Antig. s. v. Epiclerus). Or. 43 § 54 lex, τῶν ἐπικληρῶν δοῖαι θητικὸν τελοῦσιν, εἰ μὴ βούληται ἔχειν ὁ ἐγγύτατα γένους ἐκιδότω ἐπιδοῦς κ.τ.λ. (Cf. K. F. Hermann, Public Antig. § 120, notes 6—12; Privatalt. § 64, notes 10 and 11 = Rechtsalt. p. 66 Thälheim, with Pollux III 33; and see Aristoph. Vesp. 583—7.)

συνεκδώσει] 18 § 268; Lysias 19 § 59.

76. ἐξεταζομένους] 'scrutinised,' 'narrowly examined,' 'called to account,' 'taken to task' (§§ 80, 82; 2 § 27 πικρῶς ἐξετάσαι). Liddell and Scott refer to this passage, and explain it 'to question by the torture,' comparing Polybius xv 27 § 7 (φιλοτίμως ἐξετάσαι πᾶσαν προτιθέντα βάσανον); but in view of the context it seems better to give it a general sense, though not to the exclusion of the special meaning above suggested. Besides, a reference to the passage in Polybius will show that the verb there refers not to the torture itself, but to the close examination preceding the torture. The torture was only to be applied if the ἐξέτασις failed. [The verb is here used for ἐλεγχόμενος τὴν οὐσίαν, 'having their property inquired into.' Slaves, in fact, had no property: but their masters might inquire if they had, rightly or wrongly, become possessed of anything, e.g. of means to purchase their liberty. 'To make an inventory of property' is ἐξερᾶζειν (Ar. Eccl. 729), or ἐξέτασιν ποιῆσθαι, which is also a military term. P.]

Towards the state, I have performed public services in a most liberal manner, passing even beyond the requirements of the law, to express the gratitude due to Athens from one who owes his citizenship to her generous adoption of his father. Don't taunt me then, Phormion, with what is really to my credit, but prove, if you can, that I am guilty of immorality like your own. How dare you criticise another's life* and character?

77. τῆς ὀψέως τῇ φύσει κ.τ.λ.] These are datives of respect,— 'in the matter of appearance,' &c. Kennedy wrongly construes with κρίνω, 'I judge by,' &c. P.]

τῷ ταχέως βαδίζειν καὶ λαλεῖν μέγα κ.τ.λ.] For the general sense, cf. Lysias 16 § 19 οὐκ ἄξιον ἀπ' ὀψέως...οὔτε φιλεῖν οὔτε μισεῖν οὐδένα, ἀλλ' ἐκ τῶν ἔργων σκοπεῖν· πολλοὶ μὲν γὰρ μικρὸν διαλεγόμενοι καὶ κοσμίως ἀμπεχόμενοι μεγάλων κακῶν αἰτίοι γέγονασιν, ἔτεροι δὲ τῶν τοιούτων ἀμελοῦντες πολλὰ κάγαθὰ ὑμᾶς εἰσιν εἰργασμένοι. Plut. Pericl. 5. See also note on § 68 and cf. particularly Or. 37 (Pant.) § 52 Νικόβουλος ἐπιφθονός ἐστι καὶ ταχέως βαδίζει καὶ μέγα φθέγγεται καὶ βακτηρίαν φορεῖ, and esp. § 55 where Nicobulus says of himself οὐχὶ λήληθα ἐμαυτὸν, οὐδ' ἀγνοῶ οὐ τῶν εὐπεφυκότων κατὰ ταῦτα ὦν ἀνθρώπων, οὐδὲ τῶν λυσitelούτων ἑαυτοῖς. εἰ γὰρ ἐν οἷς μηδὲν ὠφελοῦμαι ποιῶν, λυπῶ τινάς, πῶς οὐκ ἀτυχῶ κατὰ τοῦτο τὸ μέρος; The parallel is so close that it lends some colour to the inference that the two speeches were written by the same orator, and that if Demosthenes wrote either, he probably wrote both. Cf. Introd. p. xlv.

Yet, suppose I could have clapped your present property on your shoulders and arrested you summarily as a thief caught in the act, then, if you denied the theft, you would have been compelled to confess that you got it all from my father: you could not have got it elsewhere, for you were a barbarian when we bought you. And yet you ungratefully resisted a suit for the sums claimed from you on our part; you abused us, you criticised the antecedents of our family. Well, even if I am bound to think less of myself than of all the rest of my audience, I am at any rate bound to think more of myself than of Phormion; and Phormion, at least, is bound to think less of himself than of me. ^k Z et Bl. cum libris coll. 26 § 22, 10 § 40. ὑβρίσθαι Dobree (G. H. Schaefer, Dind.).

ὑβρισθεῖς] This reading makes it necessary to take ὥστε with οὐ δύναμαι κατασχεῖν and at first sight leaves ei without a verb. To remove the supposed difficulty, Dobree proposed ὑβρίσθαι, placing παρατησάμενος—κατασχεῖν in a parenthesis. But the emendation is at once unnecessary and inadequate, and we prefer accepting the arrangement suggested by Shilleto, who was the first to explain the manuscript reading correctly. Interpunctionis egebat locus, non coniecturae. The passage should run as follows: ἐγὼ δ' ὦ ἄνδρες Ἀθηναῖοι καὶ περὶ Πασικλέους, (παρατησάμενος καὶ δεηθεὶς ὑμῶν συγγνώμην ἔχειν, εἰ, προεληλυθὼς εἰς τοῦθ' ὥστε ὑπὸ τῶν ἔμαντοῦ δούλων ὑβρισθεῖς οὐ δύναμαι κατασχεῖν, ἃ τέως οὐδὲ τῶν ἄλλων λεγόντων ἀκούειν ἐδόκουν ἐρῶ καὶ οὐ σιωπήσομαι) ἐγὼ γὰρ...νομίζω. 'γὰρ post parenthesin saepe fraudi fuit criticis' (Fals. Leg. § 107 not. crit.).

[The passage is slightly ἀνακόλουθον, but it can hardly be doubted that we must construe προεληλυθὼς εἰς τοῦθ' ὥστε—ὑβρισθεῖς οὐ δύναμαι κατασχεῖν,

'having reached such a point that—I am unable to restrain (my feelings),' and συγγνώμην ἔχειν (ἐμοί) εἰ—ἐρῶ καὶ οὐ σιωπήσομαι. The ἐγὼ δ' at the beginning is resumed at ἐγὼ γὰρ ὁμομήτριον. There is no great difficulty in the passage; certainly it is not made clearer by any proposed alteration. He was going to say ἐγὼ καὶ περὶ Πασικλέους—ἐρῶ, but he lost himself, as it were, in the maze of the intervening clauses. P.]

84. παραπετωκῶς] 'Court-ing,' 'flattering.' As this verb does not seem to occur elsewhere in this sense, H. Wolf and Dobree would prefer ὑποπετωκῶς as in §§ 63, 65; but the text is supported by the mss and by Harpocration, who says: ἀντὶ τοῦ ὑποπετωκῶς. Δημοσθένης ἐν τῷ κατὰ Στεφάνου.—παραπετωκῶς implies subservience of a less abject and cringing form than ὑποπετωκῶς, which would be too strong a word for this context. 'ὑποπίπτειν est ad pedes alicuius, παραπίπτειν ad latus alicuius succumbere' (Lortzing, Apoll. p. 90).

Πασικλέα] The silence of Pasicles is a point brought against Apoll. in Or. 36 § 22. The insinuation in the text seems quite gratuitous, and its indelicacy forms a singular contrast to the plaintiff's affectation of reserve in referring to his mother in the earlier part of the speech (§ 3 and § 27).

§ 85. Farewell, then, to my so-called brother; while I turn to my true friends, the jury, and appeal to them not to allow me to be laughed to scorn by my own servants and by those who cringe to them, like Stephanus.—My father was a great benefactor to the state, and it would hardly be creditable to yourselves that his son should suffer wrong.

ἀσπίδας] The father, Pasion, had a shield manufactory, as we learn from Or. 36 § 4.

ἐπιδούς] Used of voluntary free gifts for state purposes (ἐπιδόσεις) opp. to εἰσφέρειν. See Wolf's Leptines p. 66, ed. Beatson, notes 109, 110; and Boeckh, P. E. Book IV, chap. 17, p. 759 Lamb. Or. 21 § 165 ἐκὼν ἐπιδούς τριήρη. The system of voluntary trierarchies began in 357 B.C.; cf. 18 § 99.

ἐτρηράρχησε τριηραρχίας] At first sight this is an exception to the usual idiom, whereby a cognate accusative is not used after a verb except with an adjective. Or. 28 § 3 χορηγεῖ καὶ τριηραρχεῖ καὶ τὰς ἄλλας λειτουργίας λειτουργεῖ. But the clause πέντε τριη-ταῦτ', οὐκ ὀφείλειν ὑμᾶς νομίζων χάριν ἡμῖν, ὑπομνησκῶ· ἡμεῖς γὰρ ὀφείλομεν ὑμῖν· ἀλλ' ἵνα μὴ λάθῃ τι παθὼν τούτων ἀνάξιον· οὐδὲ γὰρ ὑμῖν ἀν γένοιτο καλόν.

ρεῖς ἐθελοντῆς ἐπιδούς is virtually an adjectival phrase descriptive of the nature of the trierarchies. Thus, in English we do not say 'he fought a fight' by itself, but 'he has fought a good fight.' (See Mayor on dicta dicere and servitutem serviunt Cic. Phil. II § 42, where the absence of the adj. is explained by the sense of the acc. being different from that of the governing verb and therefore cognate in form alone.) 'Speciose Reiskius ἔ ἐτριηράρχησε τριηραρχίας i.e. πέντε' Dobree. Compare Antiphon 5 § 77 καὶ χορηγίας ἐχορήγει καὶ τέλη κατεπίθει, Andoc. I § 73 εὐθύνας ὥφλον ἀρξάντες ἀρχάς, Dem. 18 § 114, 24 § 150. Kühner's Gk. Gr. II p. 265 n. 3, Lobeck's Paralipomena p. 501—538, and Rehdantz, indices s.v. etymologica figura, where it is shewn that this use of the cognate accusative is specially frequent in legal and constitutional phrases. On the trierarchal services of Apollodoros, see note on Or. 36 § 41. §§ 86—end. Time would not suffice to tell of all the outrages inflicted on me; but you may form some notion of their enormity if each one of you would just think of the slave he left at home and imagine himself treated by him as I have been treated by Phormion. Whatever satisfaction each of you would claim under such circumstances, you will allow me to have a right to now, and I therefore ask you, for the sake of the laws and of your solemn oaths, to establish a signal precedent by the punishment of the man who by his false evidence robbed me of that satisfaction. Remember all that you have heard on our side and meet my opponents' suggestions at every point. If they deny that they are responsible for all the details of their deposition, ask them 'What stands in the document?' 'Why did not Stephanus erase the clause?' If they say that a will has been deposed to by a guardian, by a ward, and by one who has it in his keeping; then ask these three witnesses 'What will?' 'what are its terms?' for not one of the three has gone so far as to attest the terms of the will, which are deposed to by the other witnesses (viz. by Stephanus and his friends). If they appeal to your compassion, remember that the victim of a wrong deserves more pity than those who are doomed to be punished; and that if you inflict that punishment, you will grant redress to myself, you will restrain my opponents from their abject adulation, and you will be giving a verdict which will be true to your solemn oath.

φθάνειν in this sense is found only in late Greek, e.g. Argument to Or. 4 (Philippic) τῷ φθάσαντι (λόγῳ), and Aelian Var. Hist. 1 34 τὰ φθάσαντα, 'the matters before-mentioned.' ἐπικατασκευάζειν (according to Sophocles' Lex. of late Greek) is found in Dio Cassius 50, 23, 3 ('to construct on') and Eusebius 11 557 A ('to prepare after'). It is here perhaps middle, and not passive. — προσεισάγω is found in Dio- genes Laertius 9, 88 (quoted by Liddell and Scott, who take it as middle in the present passage).

§§ 1—3. Stephanus has made a long reply to my former speech, and, as I suspected, has had a good deal to say in defence of his evidence. A cunning rogue himself, and well primed by Phormion's numerous advisers, he has attempted to mislead you into the notion that he is not responsible for all the details of his deposition. He has not brought a single witness to prove, either (1) that he was present when my father made the alleged will, or (2) that he ever saw it opened after my father's death; and yet he has actually deposed that the copy set forth in his deposition is a transcript of the 'will.' By so doing he is palpably convicted of having given false testimony.

1. παράγων—ὑπενόουν] Apollodorus had already, in his former speech, thrown out his suspicions that Stephanus would have recourse to this line of defence. See Or. 45 §§ 44 and 87.

τὴν ἀπολογίαν...μελετᾶν] 'prepared their defence.' μελετᾶν, like meditari, with which it is etymologically connected, is often used of 'rehearsing a part,' 'conning over a task,' 'practising for a performance.'

2. μάρτυρας ... ὡς ... παρεγένετο] The plaintiff objects that Stephanus could not attest to a document being a copy of Pasion's 'will,' as he calls no evidence to prove he was present when the will was made (cf. Or. 45 § 26). But even supposing he had been present, it would not follow that he was familiar with the terms, as even the witnesses to a will would not necessarily know its contents, or be able to attest to its correspondence with any document purporting to be a copy of the same. Cf. Isaeus Or. 4 (Nicostratus) § 13 τῶν διατιθεμένων οἱ πολλοὶ οὐδὲ λέγουσι τοῖς παραγινόμενοις ὃ τι διατίθενται, ἀλλ' αὐτοῦ μόνου, τοῦ καταλιπεῖν διαθήκας, μάρτυρας παρίστανται, τοῦ δὲ συμβαίνοντός ἐστι καὶ γραμματεῖον ἀλλαγῆναι καὶ τάναντία ταῖς τοῦ τεθνεώτος διαθήκαις μεταγραφῆναι. οὐδὲν γὰρ μᾶλλον οἱ μάρτυρες εἰσονται εἰ ἐφ' αἷς ἐκλήθησαν διαθήκαις, αὐταὶ ἀποφαίνονται (Becker, Charicles, Scene ix note 18).

The inelegance of the triple repetition διατιθεμένων...διέθετο.. διαθένον is considered open to criticism by A. Schaefer, Dem. u. s. Zeit, III 2, 187.

4. πρόκλησιν...μὴ μαρτυρίαν] Or. 45 § 43 προκλήσεως ἐστὶν ὑπεύθυνος, οὐχὶ μαρτυρίας. Stephanus disclaims responsibility for the deposition, but the plaintiff on his part insists that the deposition is inseparable from the Challenge, as no Challenge could be put in evidence at a trial unless attested by the deposition of a responsible witness.

§§ 6—8. If Phormion's assertion was the defendant's only reason for deposing to the document being a copy of Pasion's will, then he has been guilty of giving hearsay evidence which is false and which he has given in a manner contrary to the law.

ἀπὸ τῆς αὐτῆς ἐπισκήψεως] The laws enact 'that the evidence of the absent witness shall come before the court under the same impeachment as that of the witnesses attesting the same, in order that, if the absent witness acknowledge his evidence, he may be liable to a trial for false testimony, and if he disown it, then the attesting witnesses.' For ἐπισκήψις, the process of bringing an action for false witness, cf. Arist. Pol. II 12 § 11 Χαράωνδου ἰδίων οὐδέν ἐστι πλὴν αἱ δίκαι τῶν ψευδομαρτυριῶν, πρῶτος γὰρ ἐποίησε τὴν ἐπίσκηψιν. Or. 47 §§ 1 and 5 Θεόφνημος αὐτοῖς ὡς ἀληθῆ μαρτυρηκόσιν οὐκ ἐπεσκήψατο οὐδ' ἐπεξέρχεται τῶν ψευδομαρτυριῶν, ib. 51. Or. 29 §§ 7, 41 and Or. 34 § 46 note. Cf. Meier and Schömann, p. 491 Lips.

ἐὰν μὴ ἀναδέχεται] 'if he does not acknowledge it' e.g. on the ground of its being forged or incorrectly copied. Isaeus Or. 3 §§ 23, 24 tells us 'it was usual to select persons of good character to receive such evidence and to have as many of them as possible' (C. R. Kennedy in Dict. Ant. s.v. ἐκμαρτυρία). Cf. Schol. on Aeschin. Fals. Leg. § 19 εἰ ἐπανεληθὼν ἐκείνος (sc. ὁ ἐκμαρτυρήσας) εἶπεν, ὅτι οὐδὲν εἶπον, ἐκρίνοντο οὗτοι (sc. οἱ μαρτυρήσαντες) ὡς συκοφάνται.

§§ 9, 10. The defendant has also given evidence contrary to another law. Under cover of the testimony of the defendant and his friends, Phormion has virtually given evidence in his own cause, which is illegal; and the law declares that a suit for false testimony shall be maintainable against a person on the ground of his having given evidence contrary to the law.

9. πρόφασιν λαβὼν τὴν πρόκλησιν] In Or. 45 § 19 (which should be compared with the whole of the present sentence) this Challenge is denounced as a παραπέτασμα. So below, προστησάμενος τούτους 'putting these men forward as an excuse.' For the favourite antithesis between λόγος and ἔργον, cf. Thucydides passim, and Antiphon, Or. 5 § 5 οὐ γὰρ δίκαιον οὔτε ἔργῳ ἀμαρ-τόντα διὰ ῥήματα σωθῆναι οὔτε ἔργῳ ὁρθῶς πράξαντα διὰ ῥήματα ἀπολέσθαι· τὸ μὲν γὰρ ῥήμα τῆς γλώσσης ἀμαρτημὰ ἐστὶ τὸ δ' ἔργον τῆς γνώμης. Cf. ib. § 84 and Or. 6 § 47 οἱ μὲν ἄλλοι ἄνθρωποι τοῖς ἔργοις τοὺς λόγους ἐλέγχουσιν, οὗτοι δὲ τοῖς λόγοις τὰ ἔργα ζητοῦσιν ἀπιστα καθιστάναι. See also Blass Att. Ber. i 129¹, 213¹ = 141², 218².

τούτων is redundant after δι' ὧν, that is, μαρτυρούντων might have agreed with ὧν, instead of a new clause introduced with a genitive absolute. [The latter was preferred from its tendency to combine with ὡς. P.]

γραφαῖς...δίκαις] See note on Or. 54 § 2.—εὐθύναις, 'audits,' 'examinations on surrendering office,' as opposed to δοκιμασία, 'the enquiry preliminary to taking office.'

III 18 and for examples cf. Lysias Or. 12 §§ 24—26, Or. 22 § 5; Or. 13 §§ 30—33. Dem. de Cor. § 52, Plato Apol. p. 25, Isaeus Or. 11 § 4. 'A favourite instrument of debate with speakers in the public assembly and law courts is the interrogation of the adversary. The object of this is to enforce an argument; or to take the adversary by surprise and extract from him an unguarded admission; or to place him in an awkward dilemma, by shaping your question in such a way, that he must either by avowing it admit something which his antagonist wishes to establish, or by refusing seem to give consent by his silence to that which the questioner wishes to insinuate; or to gain some similar advantage' (Cope's Introduction to Ar. Rhet. p. 362).

ὁ προβαλλόμενος κατὰ ταῦτα] The person who produced the false witness, προβάλετο or προϋστήσατο, was liable to what was called a δίκη κακοτεχνιών for conspiring to defeat the ends of justice. Or. 47 § 1 τὸν προβαλλόμενον ὑπόδικον ἐχρη τῶν κακοτεχνιών.

§ 11. That the defendant's evidence is false may be concluded from the material on which it is written.

τύρηκεν. λελευκωμένον τε γάρ ἐστι καὶ οἰκοθεν κατεσκευασμένον. καίτοι τοὺς μὲν τὰ πεπραγμένα μαρτυροῦντας προσήκει οἰκοθεν τὰς μαρτυρίας κατεσκευασμένας μαρτυρεῖν, τοὺς δὲ τὰς προκλήσεις μαρτυροῦντας, τοὺς ἀπὸ ταῦτομάτου προστάντας[†], λελευκωμένον καὶ οἰκοθεν κατεσκευασμένον] The plaintiff curiously argues the falsehood of the defendant's deposition from the nature of the material on which it is inscribed. The document, he points out, is 'whitened, and must have been brought from home purposely prepared.' This would have been proper enough for a deposition attesting to the facts of the past, in which case there is time to draw up an elaborate document. But a deposition purporting to attest a Challenge (evidence to which might be given by any duly qualified person even accidentally present) would naturally be rapidly written on the spot ἐν μάλθῃ, i.e. on a waxen tablet. This would allow of any addition or erasure being made at the request of the witnesses before they attested it. 'The difference between these methods,' as C. R. Kennedy remarks, 'was much the same as between writing with a pen on paper and with a pencil on a slate' (Dict. Ant. s.v. μαρτυρία). The distinction here drawn is (as Mr Paley observes) between a waxed tablet (δέλτος) scratched with a point like the Roman stilus, and a whitened surface on which the letters could be conveniently laid on with black pigment (μέλας).

οἰκοθεν κατεσκευασμένον] a 'pregnant' expression, equivalent in sense to οἰκοι κατεσκευασμένον καὶ οἰκοθεν ἀπηνεγμένον. Similarly below, where Reiske unnecessarily proposes οἰκοθεν ἐπιφερομένας τὰς μαρτυρίας κατεσκευασμένας μαρτυρεῖν. For the general drift of the argument and its imputation of deliberate design, cf. Cic. Phil. II § 85 unde diadema? non enim abiectum sustuleras, sed attuleras domo meditatam et cogitatum scelus. προστάντας. See p. 186.

τοὺς προστάτας] These words are rather obscure. Kennedy renders προστάτας as equivalent to παρόντας. Rather, perhaps, 'who stand forward voluntarily.' P.]

ἢν, εἰ...ἐβουλήθη, ῥάδιον ἦν] Or. 28 § 5 ἐχρῆν εἰσκαλέσαντας μάρτυρας πολλοὺς παρασημήνασθαι κελεύσαι τὰς διαθήκας, ἢν, εἰ τι ἐγίγνετο ἀμφισβητήσιμον, ἦν εἰς τὰ γράμματα ταῦτ' ἐπανελθεῖν (Goodwin's Moods and Tenses, § 333, ed. 1886).

§§ 12—17. Further, my father made no will at all, nor do the laws allow it, laws which bind every citizen of Athens without exception. It was not until ten years after my father's death that Phormion obtained the citizenship; not foreseeing this, how could my father have insulted our family, cast contempt on your bounty and disregarded the laws, by giving his own wife in marriage to Phormion, and that by a will which he was legally incompetent to make? The law forbids a man's making a will if he have male issue lawfully begotten.—Again, the law only allows those who are not 'adopted' to dispose of their property by will, and my father was a citizen by 'adoption' only. Lastly, it does not permit a person to make a will if he is of unsound mind, and the terms of the alleged 'will' which give my father's widow to Phormion are inconsistent with the terms of the 'lease,' and argue the absence of sound mind and therefore my father's incompetence to make any will whatever.

12. κειμένους...θεῖναι] κείμεαι is constantly borrowed as a perfect passive to ριθμῳ, while τέθειμαι is almost invariably

(See further in notes on Or. 34 § 16, Or. 39 Argument, line 23, and on Isocr. ad Dem. § 36.)

μηδὲ νόμον...ἐπ' ἀνδρὶ θείναι] Just as a privilegium was forbidden by Roman law, so at Athens legislation expressly affecting a particular individual, whether in his interest or to his detriment, was not allowed, except in the single instance of ostracism; of the law quoted in Andocides, de mysteriis § 87 μηδὲ ἐπ' ἀνδρὶ νόμον ἐξείναι θείναι, εἰ μὴ τὸν αὐτὸν ἐπὶ πᾶσιν Ἀθη-

13. ὁ μὲν νόμος...ὁ δὲ πατὴρ κ.τ.λ.] The sentence is rather loosely written, and the sense might have been brought out better by some such arrangement as this: ὁ μὲν νόμος...κελεύει, ὁ δὲ πατὴρ Φορμίωνι οὕτω Ἀθηναίῳ γενομένῳ ἔδωκε τὴν ἑαυτοῦ γυναῖκα· ἐτελεύτησε γὰρ κ.τ.λ. tion of such as had been adopted when Solon entered on his archonship, and had thereby become unable either to renounce or to claim an inheritance) shall be allowed to dispose of his own property at his pleasure, provided he have no male issue lawfully begotten.' Cf. Or. 44 § 68 'ὅσοι μὴ ἐπεποίητο' φησὶν 'ὅτε Σόλων εἰσῆι εἰς τὴν ἀρχήν, ἐξεῖναι αὐτοῖς διαθέσθαι ὅπως ἂν ἐθέλωσιν,' ὡς τοῖς γε ποιηθείσιν οὐκ ἐξὸν διαθέσθαι. Isaeus Or. 6 (Philoctemon) § 28 τοῖς φύσει υἱέσιν αὐτοῦ οὐδεὶς οὐδενὶ ἐν διαθήκῃ γράφει δόσιν οὐδεμίαν, διότι ὁ νόμος αὐτὸς ἀποδίδωσι τῷ υἱεὶ τὰ τοῦ πατρὸς καὶ οὐδὲ διαθέσθαι ἐᾷ ὅτῳ ἂν ὥσι παῖδες γνήσιοι. Hermann, Rechtsalt. ed. Thalheim § 10 p. 72⁴.

The law is quoted to prove that Pasion had no right to make a will, (1) because he had male issue lawfully begotten (sc. Apollodorus). But it will be noticed that the law does not forbid such persons from making any will whatsoever. It simply enacts that those who have no male issue may dispose of their property as they please. Pasion was not debarred by this law from making a will, but was not allowed to make any disposition he chose, since (as in our law of entail) the right to the property was secured to the son.

Again (2), Pasion was a citizen by 'adoption,' whereas this law implies that no 'adopted' person could dispose of his property as he pleased. But it will be observed on the other side, that the plaintiff has deliberately confounded two different senses of ποιεῖσθαι (1) 'to adopt into a family' and (2) 'to present with the citizenship.' ἐπεποίητο refers to 'family adoption' (Or. 44 Leoch. ad fin.), and the plaintiff argues as though it meant the same as ἐπεποίητο πολίτης.

The verbs themselves are less commonly used than their participles. P.] Cf. Rutherford's New Phrynichus p. 153.

εἰ δοκοῦσιν εὖ φρονούντος κ.τ.λ.] It is curious to find the plaintiff setting up this suggestion of lunacy when in another speech, Or. 49 (Timoth.) § 42, delivered at an earlier date, he describes his father as not only giving him a written statement of debts due, but also, in his last illness, telling him and his brother the details of each particular sum, the name of the debtor, and even the purpose for which the money was lent.

He might have turned his argument to more account, if, instead of insinuating that the terms of the alleged will suggested that his father was of unsound mind, and therefore legally incompetent to make any will at all, he had urged that, his father having been of sound mind up to the day of his death, the 'insane' provisions of the will betrayed it to be a forgery.

οὕτω δεινὸν] 'They little dreamt I should be clever enough to examine all these questions thoroughly.' This passage has been quoted as an indication of the plaintiff's consciousness of his own oratorical skill, and as a presumption in favour of the view that Apollodorus is himself the writer of the speeches delivered by him which have come down to us among the orations of Demosthenes (A. Schaefer, Dem. u. s. Zeit., III 2, 192).

§§ 18—21. The forgery of the will is also proved by the law of betrothals, which provides that a woman may be affianced for lawful wedlock by her guardians, i.e. certain near relations, such as father, brother, or grandfather. As none of these are in existence, and you may be sure that the other side would have produced them, or pretended to do so, to suit their purpose, it follows that my mother was an 'heiress,' and the law declares that the son of an heiress, when he comes of age, shall be his mother's guardian. Now I was abroad on public service (and therefore of full age) when Phormion married my mother (and he did so without obtaining the consent of myself, her guardian).

18. σκέψασθε τοὺς νόμους] The accusative after the principal verb, where in English we should prefer making it the nom. of the subordinate clause. Cf. Or. 45 § 24. Kennedy partially keeps up the Greek construction by rendering it thus: 'look now at the laws, (to see) from whom they require betrothals to be obtained.'

ἐγγύας] The betrothal (ἐγγύσις) was made by the natural or legal guardian of the girl, in the presence of the relatives of both parties. 'All children born before a marriage legally contracted in this respect were γνήσιοι, and consequently, if sons, ἱσμοιοι, or entitled to inherit equally.' Dict. Ant. s. v. Matrimonium, Hermann, Privatalt. § 80, 7 (= p. 261 ed. Blümner).

στρατευόμενος κ.τ.λ.] And therefore of full age; referring back to παῖδας ἡβήσαντας.

21. πάλαι] Pasion died B.C. 370, the trierarchy probably took place in B.C. 368 (Or. 45 § 3), and it was during the plaintiff's absence on this public service that the marriage of Archippe took place. The interval here implied by the vague word πάλαι 'some time before' would seem to be two years. The plaintiff wishes to insinuate that, though some time elapsed before the marriage proper (ἔγημε), intrigues had been going on at an earlier date, and this is how the writer of the deposition in § 21 seems to have understood it.

τὴν μητέρα τὴν ἐμήν] These words, which would have been appropriate enough in the mouth of Apollodorus, are out of place in the deposition, and betray carelessness on the part of the compiler of the document. Even apart from this detail, the general contents of the deposition are different from what we are led to expect by the plaintiff's language in introducing it. (A. Westermann, u. s. p. 113.)

22. τῶν ἐπικλήρων] The plaintiff attempts to prove that his mother was an 'heirress.' If so, her property ought to have passed absolutely into the hands of her eldest son, on his coming of age, whether her husband was alive or not. But there is not a single trace of such a relation between Archippe and Apollodorus in the rest of the speeches of the latter. Archippe was most probably of foreign extraction (cf. Or. 45 § 22) and the plaintiff's argument seems the merest shuffling. (See further, A. Schaefer, Dem. u. s. Zeit, III 2, 176.) On ἐπιδικασία τῶν ἐπικλήρων cf. Or. 21 (Mid.) § 113 lex, ἐάν τις...διδῶ ἐτέρῳ ἢ διαφθεῖρη τινὰς ἐπαγγελλόμενος, ἐπὶ βλάβῃ τοῦ δήμου...ἀτιμος ἔστω. δεκάσμος however (strictly meaning a systematic bribery by division into sets of ten) is only a late word and is not found in the Attic Orators, though ἀδέκαστος occurs in Ar. Ethics ii 9 § 6, οὐ γὰρ ἀδέκαστοι κρίνομεν (τὴν ἡδονήν), and Aeschines, Timarch. § 85, has συνδεκάζειν τὴν ἐκκλησίαν καὶ τὰλλα δικαστήρια and ib. § 86 μαρτυρεῖν τὸν μὲν ὡς ἐδέκαζε τὸν δὲ ὡς ἐδεκάζετο. Cf. Isocr. Or. 8 § 50 θανάτου τῆς ζημίας ἐπικειμένης, ἐάν τις ἀλῶ δεκάζων, and Lysias Or. 29 § 12 δεδεκασμένοι. So in Latin, we have decuriae used of organised bribery at elections, Cicero, pro Plancio § 45 decuriatio tribulium and decuriasse Plancium, conscripsisse. Cf. the obscure name given to bribed dicasts at Athens, Λύκου δεκάς. In wholesale bribery an agent, it is conjectured, was chosen from each tribe, and the group of ten thus selected to deal with their fellow-tribesmen were comically called λύκου δεκάς from the statue of Lycus near the law-courts. Meier and Schömann, p. 184 Lips. Harpocr. s.v. δεκάζων.

The usual phrase for bribery is χρήμασι φθίρειν (or διαφθίρειν), though the euphemism χρήμασι πείσσει is still more frequent. It is curious to note how frequently the word δωροδοκία occurs, and how rarely δεκασμός and its corresponding verb. Again and again we have charges of receiving bribes, seldom of giving them; possibly because those who gave them were too powerful to be attacked. —ἐπὶ δωροδοκίᾳ, 'with a corrupt motive,' is here a general term, implying without directly expressing the corresponding term δεκασμός.

ἑταιρείαν ἐπὶ καταλύσει τοῦ δήμου] Thuc. viii 54, ὁ Πεισανδρὸς τὰς ξυνωμοσίας...ἀπάσας ἐπελθὼν καὶ παρακελευσάμενος ὅπως...καταλύσουσι τὸν δῆμον κ.τ.λ. See Grote, H. G. chap. 51 (iv p. 394, ed. 1862). Cf. Aristotle's Const. of Athens, 8 § 4 τοὺς ἐπὶ καταλύσει τοῦ δήμου συνιστα-

Rather (as above, § 25), 'with a view to winning the causes brought either by private persons or on public grounds.' Or. 36. The ἐργαστήριον is the shield-manufactory of Or. 36 § 4.

§ 28. The jury, by the way, should also notice that no one ever makes a copy of a will. How then came Stephanus and his friends to know that the contents of the document appended to the deposition are a copy of my father's will?

καταλείπουσιν] is especially used of leaving behind one at death. 'The reason why people leave their wills behind them (instead of publishing them before they die) is to prevent any one knowing their contents.' Kennedy renders it: 'keep wills by them until their death.'

[I incline to think κατακλείουσιν is the true reading. The reason why people 'leave wills' is to shew how they wish to dispose of their property; the reason why they 'keep them under lock and key' is that no one may have access to them. P.] This sense is best expressed by κατασεσημασμένας καταλείπουσιν.

For the reiteration διατιθέμενοι... διατίθενται, see §§ 2 and 3.

§ 29. I implore the jury to grant me redress, that those who are so prompt to give false evidence may be punished on all grounds, particularly for the sake of justice and the laws.

τῶν νόμων] Placed last for emphasis, since the whole speech has dealt with quotations of laws and not with εἰκότα, or 'presumptive proofs,' as in the former oration.

§§ 1—3. (Arethusius has incurred a debt to the public treasury and has neglected to discharge it.) I have accordingly laid an information against him and drawn up a specification of his property. I have done so, not in the spirit of an informer, but in the simple desire to exact vengeance for having been outrageously wronged by Arethusius and his brother Nicostratus. The purity of my motives will be proved, (1) by the small amount at which the two slaves are valued (two-and-a-half minae), so that the pecuniary gain to which I am legally entitled for bringing this information is small, while the loss which I should incur, if I fail, is 1000 drachmae (or four times the value of the slaves). (2) The fact that I have laid the information in my own name, proves that I am prompted by the personal motive of revenge alone. Content with that revenge, I am willing to waive all claim to the reward which the law in such cases allows the bringer of the information (viz. three-fourths of the valuation).

The court will now permit me to justify myself by shewing how ungratefully I have been dealt with by my opponents and by relating, so far as time permits, the most atrocious and flagrant of all the wrongs which they have inflicted upon me.

1. οἰόμενος δεῖν τιμωρεῖσθαι] ‘To avoid the fatal charge of sy-cophantia, any one prosecuting a fellow-citizen for some public offence endeavoured to shew that he had private and personal grounds of enmity against the accused; and if he succeeded in proving this, it was considered the most natural and reasonable thing in the world that he should endeavour to satisfy his hatred by becoming public prosecutor.’ Wilkins’ Light of the World p. 30 (where a reference is made to Lewes’ History of Philosophy i 108). For illustrations of the Greek view of the reasonableness of revenge, see note on Isocr. ad Dem. § 26.

τὸ μέγεθος] ‘the size,’ ‘the amount,’ a neutral word, here meaning probably ‘the small amount,’ ‘the paltriness of the specification.’ Herod. ii 74, μεγάθει μικρός. The sum of two-

ἀπογραφῆς] ‘specification,’ or ‘inventory,’ of property, used especially of information as to State property alleged to be unlawfully held by a private person. χιλίων δραχμῶν] The fine inflicted on a prosecutor who in a public accusation failed to obtain a fifth part of the votes. This fine was attended by complete or partial disfranchisement. Hyper. Eux. 44, 5 τὸν ἐγχειρήσαντα συκοφαντεῖν αὐτοὺς (in an ἀπογραφῇ) εὐθὺς ἡτλώσαν τὸ πέμπτον μέρος τῶν ψήφων οὐ μεταδόντες, Lysias 18 § 14 χιλίας δραχμαῖς ἐξημίωσατε τὸν βουλόμενον τὴν ἡμετέραν γῆν δημοσίαν ποιῆσαι. μηδέποτε—γράψασθαι] Lipsius (in note 320 on p. 311 of Meier and Schömann) regards this as an exaggeration. Cf. Hager in Journ. of Philology vi 15.

ὥστ' οὐκ ἂν ἐξευρεῖν] A mixed phrase between ὥστ' οὐκ ἂν ἐξεύρον and ὥστε μὴ ἐξευρεῖν.

The use of ἂν with ὥστε and the infinitive is rare, but it occurs when a mere contingent result is described. P.]

2. αὐτός is kept in the nom., referring back to ἡγησάμενος, in spite of the interposition of δεινότατον εἶναι, which leads us to expect an acc. with the infinitive ἀδικεῖσθαι (Shilleto on Fals. Leg. § 337).

τοῦνομα παρέχειν] ‘to lend his name,’ i.e. allow himself to be used as a cat’s paw.

τεκμήριον—ὡς ψεύδομαι] My opponents might have said, ‘If you really had a quarrel against us, why did you not file the action against us in your own name?’ Perhaps we should read: οὐ γὰρ ἂν ἐὰν ποτε ἕτερον ἀπογράψαι, ‘for I never should have allowed another, &c.’ P.]

3. εἰ ἦν ἱκανὸν...ὑμεῖς ἂν συγγνώμην εἴχετε...νῦν δ' οὐδὲ διπλάσιον...ἱκανὸν ἂν γένοιτο] The student will be careful to distinguish between the two forms of conditional sentences here combined. 'If the time allowed had been sufficient, you would have made allowance for me..., but, as the case is, even twice as much time would not suffice.'

Goodwin, Greek Moods § 49, 2 and § 50, 2 (§§ 410, 455 ed. 1889).—On τὸ ὕδωρ cf. Or. 54 § 36.

ῥα...οἶα] 'What benefits they have received from me and what a requital they have paid me for them,' or, better, 'the return they have given me for all the benefits I have conferred upon them.' For this idiomatic use of the double relative, cf. Soph. El. 751 οἷ' ἐργα δρᾶσας οἶα λαγχάνει κακῶς.

§§ 4—9. My opponent's brother Nicostratus, was my neighbour in the country, and, being about the same age, we were thrown much together and became more and more intimate with one another. I granted him whatever he asked of me, and he on his part was of some service to me in taking charge of my property whenever I was abroad on public or private business.

On one of these occasions, when I had left him in charge, three of his servants ran away from him. While pursuing them, he was taken prisoner by a privateer, and sold as a slave. On my return, I was told of his unhappy plight by one of his brothers, Deinon, and I supplied the latter with travelling expenses and thus enabled him to go to the rescue of Nicostratus. The latter, on his return, informed me that he had been ransomed for a considerable sum. He appealed to me with tears in his eyes and pointed to the marks left by the galling fetters (though he is now ashamed enough of those scars that are the memorials of his slavery). He thus succeeded in inducing me to forgive him the three minae, which I had advanced for his brother's travelling expenses, and to contribute, as a free gift towards the twenty-six minae required for the ransom, the sum of ten minae which I raised on the security of some of my property.

4. Νικόστρατος γάρ] γάρ is almost invariably used at the beginning of narratives like the present; the English idiom generally requires us to omit it in translation, though we may sometimes render it, 'Well, then,' 'to proceed, then.' Cf. Or. 55 § 10 τοῦ γὰρ χωρίου κ.τ.λ., 27 § 4.

γνωρίμως εἶχε] γνωρίμος is a much weaker word than φίλος, as has already been noticed, on Or. 45 § 73. The gradually increasing intimacy between Apollodorus and Nicostratus is well expressed by the successive phrases (1) γνωρίμως εἶχε, (2) μᾶλλον ἀλλήλοις ἐχρώμεθα, (3) πάνυ οἰκείως διεκείμεθα of the present section, and (4) φίλος ἀληθινός of § 12. Cf. 33 § 5 γνωρίμως ἔχω...πάνυ οἰκείως χρώμαι. ἐτελεύτησεν ὁ πατήρ] The death of Pasion took place B.C. 370 (Or. 46 § 13).

κατῳκουν...οἰκῶ] If any distinction is to be drawn, the compound verb should be rendered 'I settled' and the simple 'I live'; but it is more likely that οἰκῶ is intended as a virtual repetition of the preceding κατῳκουν. In such cases it is unnecessary to repeat the preposition, e.g. Eur. Bacch. 1065 κατήγεν ἤγεν ἤγεν εἰς μέλαν πέδον and Orest. 181 διοιχόμεσθ', οἰχόμεθα, where Porson remarks that, when a verb is repeated, it is generally used first in its compound, then in its simple form. Or. 36 § 4 προσώφειλε...ώφειλε, 33 § 18 ἐξοίσειν...ἐνήροχεν.

μᾶλλον...ἡλικιώται] 'We grew more and more familiar with one another from being not only neighbours but also of the same age.' Or. 55 § 23 ad fin. and Or. 35 § 6 ἐπιτηδείοι μοί εἰσι καὶ χρώμεθ' ἀλλήλοις ὥς οἶόν τε μάλιστα.

δημοσίᾳ τριηραρχῶν] This reference to the speaker's public services is dexterously inserted to ingratiate him with his audience, as well as to lead up to the subsequent narrative συμβαίνει δὴ μοι τριηραρχία.—On some of the later trierarchal services of Apollodorus cf. note on Or. 36 § 41.

5. τριηραρχία περὶ Πελοπόννησον κ.τ.λ.] The date of this event, if it could be determined with certainty, would assist materially in determining the date of the delivery of the speech. It seems very probable that this trierarchy should be identified with that referred to in Or. 45 § 3, which, as we have already seen, may be placed in the year 368 B.C. See Introd. p. lvii.

διὰ ταχέων] Thuc. i 80 διὰ ταχέων ἐλθεῖν, Isocr. 14 § 3 διὰ βραχείων ἀν' ἐποικισάμεθα τοὺς λόγους followed by ἀναγκαῖον διὰ μακροτέρων δηλῶσαι (Kühner Greek Grammar ii § 434, 1. d). Or. 50 (Polycl.) § 12 ἀναγόμενος διὰ τάχους, 47 (Euerg.) § 49.

stantly contrasted with κατὰ γεσθαι; the latter word occurs in § 6 κατήχθη εἰς Αἴγιναν. The verb, with its corresponding substantive ἀναγωγὴ, implies a notion that ships in the open sea or, as we say, on the 'high seas,' are at a greater elevation than vessels in harbour. So in Thuc. i 48 and viii 10 μετέωρος is an epithet of ships at sea. Similar references to this familiar optical illusion may be noted in Milton's Paradise Lost ii 636, Far off at sea a fleet descried Hangs in the clouds, and in Ruskin's thymy slopes of down overlooked by the blue line of lifted sea (Modern Painters iii iv 14 § 51).

ἐπιστέλλω ... ὅτι ἀνήγμαι καὶ οὐχ οἷός τ' εἶην] The historic present ἐπιστέλλω being virtually a secondary tense has the optative εἶην in the dependent clause. For the combination of the indicative ἀνήγμαι with the optative εἶην, we may compare Or. 59 (Neaer.) § 81 λέγων ὅτι οὐκ ᾔδει...ἀλλ' ἐξαπατηθεῖη, 47 (Euerg.) § 50 λέγων ὅτι...δεῖ

The optative of the perfect and future was less familiar than the optative of the other tenses. It is apparently for this reason that the indicative of the perfect or the future was often retained after secondary tenses, even when the present or the aorist was changed from the indicative to the optative. Goodwin, Moods and Tenses § 70, 2, R 2 (§ 672 ed. 1889). The mss appear to have been misled by the

κατακλώοιμι] Or. 38 § 18 τοῦ εἰς Σικελίαν πλοῦ διὰ τούτου κατεκώλυθη.

6. παρὰ τούτου] 'From the defendant's house.'—ὧν ἐγὼ κ.τ.λ. i.e. 'of the number of those whom I had given him.'

κατέπλευσα τριηραρχῶν] 'When my voyage as trierarch came to an end.' Or. 50 § 12 κατέπλευσα τοὺς πρέσβεις ἄγων. For the preposition in κατέπλευσα cf. κατήχθη infra, and see note on ἀνήγμαι supra § 5.

ἐπὶ τούτου] 'In quest of him,' 'to fetch him back.'

7. ἐπῆναι] Not 'praised,' but, rather, 'thanked.' Cf. § 13, ἐπαιέσας με ἐκέλευσε κ.τ.λ. So also in Ar. Ranae 538 κάλλιστ', ἐπαινῶ, 'thank you!' where however the notion of declining the offer is also involved.

ἀληθινὸς φίλος] ἀληθινός is the Latin verus; ἀληθής verax. 'We may affirm of the ἀληθής that he fulfils the promise of his lips, but the ἀληθινός the wider promise of his name' (Trench, Synonyms of the New Testament § viii). See also Donaldson, New Cratylus § 258 and Kühner Greek Gr. i § 334. 7. [ἀληθινός is 'genuine,' as χρυσός, ἀρετή, &c.; ἀληθής is more directly contrasted with ψευδής, as ἀληθής λόγος. But the distinction is not always observed. Euripides has ἀληθής φίλος Suppl. 867, and σαφής φίλος is not unusual in the same sense. P.] Cf. note on Or. 40 § 20.

κλάων] 'In Tragedy κλαίω and κλάω; in Aristophanes κλάω prevails, in Attic prose κλαίω and κλάω, the latter gaining ground.' Veitch, Greek Verbs.

εἴκοσι μυνῶν] Aristotle, Eth. v 10 § 9, gives as an example of νομικὸν δίκαιον, conventional right, τὸ μὴ τὸ λυτροῦσθαι, the right of every man to claim his freedom on payment of one mina,—perhaps referring only to slaves. P.]

λελυμένος] Isaeus Or. 5 § 44 οὐδ' ἐκ τῶν πολεμίων ἐλύσω οὐδένα, Lysias Or. 19 § 59, Dem. Fals. Leg. § 169.

ἐκέλευε] 'urged me,' 'asked me,'—less strong than the aorist ἐκέλευσε (inf. § 9). The impf. of this verb is often found in passages where we should expect the aorist, especially in Herodotus and Thucydides. It may be regarded as used in a tentative sense, in so far as the result of the request is uncertain.

8. ἔλκη ἐν ταῖς κνήμαις] Ar. Eq. 907, τὰν τοῖσιν ἀντικνημίοις ἐλκῦδρια περιλείφειν.

οὐ μὴ θελήσῃ] 'There is little chance of his consenting.'

Nicostratus would naturally refuse to display the scars left by the galling fetters: to do so would be to confess that he had incurred the disgrace of having been sold as a slave.

With οὐ μὴ the subjunctive (especially in the aorist tense) is commoner than the future indicative, and is indeed the reading of the mss in the present passage. The indicative was proposed by Dobree in accordance with the canon of Dawes which declared the first aorist subjunctive active and middle a solecism after οὐ μὴ and ὅπως μὴ. Goodwin, Moods and Tenses p. 79, and § 89, 1 (§§ 295, 364, ed. 1889).

ἀπεκρινάμην] The Attic form corresponding to ὑπεκρινάμην in Herodotus and ἀπεκρίθην in late Greek, e.g. in the New Testament (Winer's Gr. p. 327, ed. Moulton). Cf. Rutherford's New Phrygichus p. 186.

ὅτι ἐν τῷ ἔμπροσθεν χρόνῳ εἶην φίλος, καὶ νῦν βοηθήσοιμι] 'That I had been his true friend formerly, and would assist him now.' The opt. εἶην represents not the present or future but the imperfect of direct discourse; while the future optative βοηθήσοιμι corresponds to the future ind. of oratio recta. 'The fut. opt. in Classic Greek is used only in indirect discourse after secondary tenses to represent a fut. indic. of the direct discourse' Goodwin, Moods and Tenses § 26 (§ 128 ed. 1889). βοηθήσοιμι is wrong, because it would represent ἐβοήθησα of the oratio recta and would therefore be inconsistent with νῦν.—Similarly below, εἰσόισοιμι (contrasted with ἀφείην) represents the fut. indic. of direct discourse. Cf. 36 § 6 ἔσοιτο, and Rehdantz, index 1, s.v. optativus.

ἔρανον κ.τ.λ.] 'I would contribute 1000 drachmae towards his ransom,' i.e. 10 minae out of the total amount of 26 minae mentioned in § 7 ad fin. On ἔρανος cf. Hermann, Privatalt. § 65, 13, esp. p. 74^a of Rechtsalt. ed. Thalheim. 'L'éranos, dit très-exactement M. Foucart (des associations religieuses chez les Grecs, Paris, 1873, p. 143), n'était ni un don, ni un secours, mais un prêt qu'il fallait rembourser' (Dareste).

οὐκ ἔγραψα δέ, οὐδ' ἔγραψα μὲν οὐκ ἐπρέσβευσα δέ, οὐδ' ἐπρέσβευσα μὲν οὐκ ἔπεισα δέ τοὺς Θεβαίους. Kennedy neatly translates: 'nor did I content myself with mere words; but what I promised I performed.'

διαφόρως—τῷ Φορμίῳ] The context shews that the reference is to the estrangement between Apollodorus and Phormion shortly after the death of Pasion in 370 B.C.—τὴν οὐσίαν refers mainly to the banking-stock which forms the subject of Or. 36, the claim to which was not brought forward until some twenty years later.

ἃ παρ'—ἐτύγχανεν] 'Videtur tunc temporis divisio bonorum inter Apollodorum et fratrem (36 § 8) nondum facta fuisse.' Blass.

δωρεῖαν] not as a loan, but as a free gift. Cf. 36 § 15.

§§ 10—13. Not many days afterwards, he came once more and told me with tears in his eyes that the persons who had advanced the ransom were demanding payment of the remaining sixteen minae, and that the agreement required him to refund the money within thirty days, or, failing payment, to be liable for twice the amount. He could raise no money, he said, on the farm in my neighbourhood, as that property was already encumbered by a claim upon it on the part of his brother Arethusius; and he asked me to advance the remainder, as otherwise my former gifts would be thrown away, and himself carried off to prison as the lawful property of the ransomer. He further promised to collect the whole amount and to repay me. Accordingly, I raised the remaining sixteen minae on the security of my lodging-house, and lent him this sum for a year without interest.

10. ἀπαιτοῖεν] ἀπαιτεῖν (cf. ἀπολαμβάνειν) is 'to ask for one's due,' 'to request repayment of what is one's own.' Andocides II § 22, ἀ...ἀφείλεσθε, ταῦθ' ὑμᾶς, εἰ μὲν βούλεσθε, αὐτῷ, εἰ δὲ [μὴ] βούλεσθε, ἀπαιτῶ. Or. 33 § 6 οὐ χρήσται κατήκειρον αὐτὸν ἀπαιτοῦντες, and Or. 49 § 2.

So ἀποδοῦναι 'to pay what is due,' 'to make full payment of the sum borrowed.' Or. 20 (Lept.) §§ 11, 12 χρήματα ἀπῆλθον followed by ἀποδοῦναι. Or. 49 § 2 οὐ μόνον οὐκ ἀπέδωκε χάριν ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸ δοθὲν ἀποστρεῖ με. In Arist. Rhet. II 7 § 5, among the reasons which indicate the absence of real gratitude, we have ὅτι ἀπέδωκαν ἀλλ' οὐκ ἔδωκαν ('they merely returned the favour,' simply repaid a debt, and nothing more).

διπλάσιον ὀφείλειν] Or. 56 § 20. Cf. Revue archéologique, 1866 no. 11 (quoted by Dareste), εἰ μὴ ἀποδιδῶ τὴν μισθωσιν κατὰ τὰ γεγραμμένα ἢ μὴ ἐπισκευάξῃ, ὀφείλειν αὐτὸν τὸ διπλάσιον, and the stipulatio duplae of Roman law.

τὸ χωρίον τὸ ἐν γειτόνων μοι] 'the property (or farm) in my immediate neighbourhood.' ἐν γειτόνων seems to be an elliptical phrase equivalent to ἐν τοῖς τῶν γειτόνων 'in my neighbours' lands,' 'in my own neighbourhood.' In early Greek there is probably no other instance of this phrase, and as ἐκ γειτόνων is not without example in the Attic Orators, it appears preferable to the reading in the text, which is obtained by Reiske from τὸ ἐγγειτόνων, found in three good mss (SAB). Inperie Reiskius, says Dobree, who refers to Ar. Plut. 435 ἡ κατηλὺς ἡκ τῶν γειτόνων. For ἐκ γειτόνων cf. Lycurgus, (Leocrates) § 21 οὐδὲ τὰ θρία τῆς χώρας ἀσχυρόμενος ἀλλ' ἐκ γειτόνων τῆς ἐκθρεψάσης αὐτὸν πατρίδος μετοικῶν (cf. e vicinia and exadversam in the sense of prope). For ἐν γειτόνων we find no parallel earlier than Lucian, φιλοψευδῆς § 25 ἐν γειτόνων δὲ ἡμῖν ὤκει and convivium § 22; also Icaromenippus § 8 ἐν γειτόνων ἐστὶ τὰ δόγματα καὶ μὴ πολλὰ διεσθηκότα ('their doctrines are next door to one another and differ but slightly').

πρᾶσθαι...ὠνεῖσθαι] The former is used as the aorist of the latter; ὠνησάμεν (though common in Lucian and Plutarch) being never found in early Greek Prose, and perhaps once only in Greek comedy (in a doubtful fragment of Eupolis). The correct aorist and present are found side by side in § 21, πρᾶντο followed by ὠνούμενος; similarly in Lysias, Or. 7 § 4, πριάμενος occurs with ὠνούμεν in the very next sentence. Cf. Rutherford's New Phrynichus p. 210.

τίθεσθαι] lit. 'to get security given you,' hence 'to lend money on security' of land, &c; 'to lend on mortgage,' as opposed to τίθεται, lit. 'to give security,' 'to put in pledge,' 'to mortgage,' 'to borrow on security.'—Hermann, Privatalt. § 68, 15 = Rechtsalt. p. 100⁴ Thalheim, quotes Dionys. de Isaeo 13 (Is. frag. 29), which illustrates the general sense of the present passage; δανειζόμενῳ οὐδεὶς ἂν ἔδωκεν ἐπ' αὐτοῖς ἐτι πλέον οὐδὲν ἀποδεδωκότε τίς μισθώσει.

ἃ νῦν ἀπογέγραπται] 'which have been scheduled in the present suit (entered in the ἀπογραφή, or specification).'

ὡς ἐνοφειλομένου — ἀργυρίου] 'on the ground that money was due to himself thereon.' The property was already saddled with a debt due to Arethusius, to whom it was (in part at least) mortgaged. Arethusius, in other words, had a lien of money upon the property. In another speech delivered by Apollodorus, Or. 49 (Timoth.) § 45, we have the words ἐνεπισκήψασθαι ἐν τῇ οὐσίᾳ τῇ ἐκείνου ἐνοφειλόμενον αὐτῷ τοῦτο τὸ ἀργύριον.

To contract a fresh loan on the security of property already mortgaged was of course fraudulent and was very properly forbidden. Cf. Bekker's Anecdota p. 259 μὴ ἐπιδανείσασθαι ἐπὶ τοῖς αὐτοῖς ἐνεχύροις. Or. 35 (Laecrit.) § 21 ἔστιν ἐν τῇ συγγραφῇ ὅτι ὑποτίθεσσι ταῦτ' ἐλεύθερα (unencumbered) καὶ οὐδενὶ οὐδὲν ὀφείλοντες, καὶ ὅτι οὐδ' ἐπιδανείσονται ἐπὶ τούτοις παρ' οὐδένο. See also Or. 34 §§ 6, 50. Hermann, Rechtsalt. p. 103⁴ Thalheim.

11. ἵνα μὴ ὁ τε ἀποδέδωκα, τὰς χιλίας δραχμὰς, ἀπόλωνται] i.e. ἵνα μὴ αἱ τε χιλίαι δραχμαί, ἃς ἀποδέδωκα, ἀπόλωνται. τὰς δραχμὰς is here attracted into the same case as the relative ὁ, the object of ἀποδέδωκα. person ransomed from the enemy shall be the property of the ransomer, if the former fail to pay the redemption money.' Hermann, Rechtsalt. ed. Thahheim p. 20⁴ note 7, and p. 32⁴ note 7.

12. ἅπερ ἂν] sc. ἀποκρίναιτο. οὐκ ἂν νομίσας ἀδικηθῆναι] i.e. οὐ νομίσας ἀδικηθῆναι ἂν. ἂν is often separated from its verb by such words as οἶμαι, δοκῶ, οἶδα, νομίζω. Xen. Cyrop. viii 7 § 25 ἡδέως ἂν μοι δοκῶ κοινωρήσαι, Goodwin, Moods and Tenses, § 42, 2, p. 62 (§ 220, ed. 1889). This is most frequently the case when ἂν is closely attracted to an emphatic negative, e.g. Or. 36 § 49 οὐ γὰρ ἄλλο γ' ἔχαις οὐδὲν ἂν ποιῆσαι.

ὅτι ὦ Νικόστρατε, κ.τ.λ.] ὅτι, which usually introduces an indirect construction, is here followed by oratio recta, and need not be translated. Xen. Cyrop. vii 3 § 3 ἀπεκρίνατο ὅτι, ὦ δέσποτα, οὐ ζῆ, Goodwin, Moods and Tenses, § 79 (§ 711 ed. 1889).

ἐπειδὴ...οὐ δύνασαι κ.τ.λ.] G. H. Schaefer suggests ἐπειδὴ δ' οὐ δύναμαι (for δύνασαι) πορίσαι...ἀργύριον γὰρ (for μὲν) ἐμοὶ οὐ πάρεστιν...τῶν (om. δὲ) κτημάτων...κίχρημι δ τι βούλει. He holds that this reply suits the request of Nicostratus in § 11, πῶρισον τὸ ἐλλείπον τοῦ ἀργυρίου, better than the manuscript reading. The proposed alteration does not, however, commend itself as conclusive; indeed, the emphatic pronoun ἐμοί, and the words οὐδ' ἔχω οὐδ' αὐτός, are more appropriate as a contrast to the second person δύνασαι than to the proposed substitution δύναμαι. The sense of the text is simply this: 'inasmuch as you are at present unable to pay the whole of the debt, although I have no money by me, nor indeed have I any at all (e.g. at my banker's) any more than yourself, I freely grant you the loan of any part of my property: you may mortgage it for the remainder of your debt and have the use of the money for a year without interest.'

κίχρημι] here, as elsewhere, of a friendly loan, commodare, as contrasted with δανείζω, which

 'lodging-house' mentioned in Or. 45 § 28, for that belonged to his mother, who did not die until 360 B.C.; but another, possibly of equal value (100 minae).
 Such a security would amply suffice for a loan of 16 minae, and the rate of 16 per cent.
 below mentioned would, if paid on the value of the house, exactly produce the 16 minae required. In consideration of lending this sum on the security in question, Arcesas would further receive interest (from Apollodorus) at the rate of 16

ἐπὶ ὀκτῶ ὀβολοῖς τὴν μνᾶν τοῦ μηνὸς ἐκάστων] 'Who lent me the money at an interest of 8 obols per mina per month,' i.e. 12×8 obols per 600 obols (or '16 per cent.') per annum. When the interest is quoted at so many obols per mina per month, we have simply to double the number of obols to find the rate per cent. per annum. Thus ἐπὶ πέντε ὀβολοῖς is 10 per cent.: again ἐπὶ δραχμῇ (i.e. ἐφ' ἑξ ὀβολοῖς) is 12 per cent., and ἐπὶ τρίτῃ ἡμιωβελίῳ (i.e. $2\frac{1}{2}$ obols per mina per month) is 5 per cent. per annum. From 12 to 18 per cent. appear to have been the commonest rates of interest at Athens. (For this, and another Athenian method of reckoning rates of interest, see Donaldson's Greek Grammar ad fin., or Dict. Antiq. s. v. Fenus.)

§§ 13 cont.—15. As soon as he had got the sixteen minae, so far from being grateful, he actually laid a plot to rob me of them, calculating on my being driven by my youthful inexperience into foregoing the attempt to recover the money which he owed me. First, as I was then engaged in lawsuits against my relations, he made overtures to them and pledged himself to make common cause with them. Next, as he was acquainted with my proposed pleadings, he disclosed them to my opponents, and further got me condemned to pay a fine in a case for which I had never really received a summons, though he fraudulently entered the name of his brother Arethusius as one of the witnesses to the summons alleged. Moreover, in the event of my bringing to a preliminary hearing the lawsuits which I had obtained leave to institute against my relations, they were preparing to inform against me as a debtor to the treasury and to get me thrown into prison. Lastly, Nicostratus actually got me condemned as a debtor to the treasury, made a forcible entry into my house, and carried off all my furniture, though it was worth far more than the 'debt' in question.

But a litigious person like Apollodorus doubtless had many such opponents, even apart from those whose lawsuits are expressly recorded in the orations that have come down to us (see Or. 36 § 53).

τοὺς λόγους ἐκφέρει μου εἰδώς] 'Divulges my arguments, with which he was acquainted.'

ἐγγράφει τῷ δημοσίῳ ἀπρόσκλητον κ.τ.λ.] Lit. 'registers (against me) for the state-treasury an unsummoned fine of 610 drachmae arising from production of property in court,' i.e. 'enters me as a state-debtor to the amount of 610 drachmae, demanded from me without formal citation, as a fine for non-production of property in court'; or, as Prof. Kennedy renders it, 'registers (against me) a fine to the treasury... upon a writ of exhibit of which I had no notice by legal summons.'

Before entering on the details, it may be well to explain the general drift of the passage. Apollodorus is engaged in a variety of lawsuits, in one of which we must suppose that he was alleged to be in possession of certain articles, probably documents, either actually belonging to one of his opponents or such that the latter had a legal right to demand production of them. The proper course on the part of Nicostratus, who had made common cause with one of these opponents, would have been to serve Apollodorus with a summons, duly attested by witnesses, requiring him to produce the articles in question. If Apollodorus had, without assigning a legally valid reason, refused to do so, Nicostratus would have been entitled to have a fine levied on Apollodorus and to get him entered as a debtor to the state for the amount of that fine. Instead of this, it appears that Nicostratus served no summons on Apollodorus (the ἐπιβολή was ἀπρόσκλητος), thus giving the latter no opportunity for shewing cause against the production of the articles demanded; he then proceeded to obtain a verdict against his opponent in contumaciam, and to have him registered as owing 610 drachmae to the public treasury. Hence comes our common legal term, an exhibit or writ of production. With ἐμφανῇ καταστήσαι we may further compare our ordinary phrase sub poena duces tecum, used when a solicitor (for instance) holds a document which the court can require to be put in, for the furtherance of the ends of justice. εἰσελθὼν κ.τ.λ.] Nicostratus made a forcible entry into the house of Apollodorus with a view to levying execution for the fine which Apollodorus had been condemned to pay to Nicostratus, or rather to his tool Lycidas.

τὰ σκεύη πάντα ἐξεφόρησε] 'carried out all my furniture' (i.e. distrained upon me for my alleged debt). Or. 22 (Androt.) § 57 βαδίζειν ἐπ' οἰκίας καὶ σκεύη φέρειν μηδὲν ὀφειλόντων ἀνθρώπων. Nicostratus seized property worth more than 20 minae, although the 'debt' amounted to little more than six. (610 dr. = 6 m. 10 dr.)

§§ 15—18. On my proceeding against Arethusius for fraudulent citation, he came into my property at night and laid waste my orchard with all its fine

fruit-grafts, its vines and its olive-trees. Further they put up a boy of free birth to go in broad daylight and pluck the flowers of my rose-bed, hoping I would mistake him for a slave and strike him, and thus make myself liable to an indictment for assault. In this they were disappointed. Thereupon, as soon as I had brought to the preliminary stage before the magistrate my indictment of Arethusius for fraudulent citation, and was on the point of taking it before the jury, he lay in wait for me when I was coming up from the Peiraeus late at night and violently assaulted me, and was only prevented from dashing me into the quarries by some people hearing my cries and rushing to the rescue.

Not many days after, I brought my case before the jury and with the greatest ease got Arethusius convicted. Though the jury proposed to condemn him to death, I begged them to acquiesce in the penalty proposed by my opponents themselves, a fine of one talent.

In translating the whole sentence it is convenient to omit δε, to render ῥῆμν and ἐβάδιζον as principal verbs, and to begin a new English sentence with the first words of the apodosis, ἐλθὼν εἰς τὸ χωρίον κ.τ.λ.

τὸν Ἀρεθούσιον] to be taken in apposition with τὸν κλητῆρα, unless indeed the words are only an interpolated explanation of τὸν κλητῆρα (cf. § 10).

τῆς ψευδοκλητείας] Harpocr. ψευδοκλητεία ὄνομα δίκης ἐστίν, ἣν εἰσίσιν ἐγγεγραμμένοι ὀφείλιν τῷ δημοσίῳ, ἐπειδὴν αἰτιῶνται τινας ψευδῶς κατεσκευάσθαι κλητῆρας καθ' αὐτῶν πρὸς τὴν δίκην ἀφ' ἧς ὤφλον. Meier and Schömann, pp. 414—415 Lips.

The genitive is here used after βαδίζειν ἐπὶ τινι on the analogy of the construction commonly found after διώκειν, εἰσάγειν and ἐπεξεργεσθαι (in the legal sense). Plato, Leg. 886 B ἐπεξίτω φόνου τῷ κτείναντι. Or. 49 (Apollodorus v. Timotheus) § 56 μὴ...ἐπὶ τόνδε κακοτεχνίων ἐλθοιμ. The phrase βαδίζειν ἐπὶ τινα is found in a similar sense in Or. 52 (Apollod. v. Callippus) § 32 ἐπὶ τὸν Κηφισιάδην βαδίζειν. Cf. 56 §§ 15, 18, and 42 § 12 εἰς τὸ δικαστήριον βαδίζειν.

ὅσα ἐνῆν φυτὰ—διαθεῖν] 'he cut off all the choice fruit-grafts that were there, and the trained vines besides; he also broke down the nursery-beds of olive-trees set in rows around my plantations, making worse havoc than would ever be made, even by enemies in war.'

ἀκροδρῶν] The primary sense of the word is 'fruit,' the secondary 'fruit-trees.' Though used in early writers of any edible fruit, later authorities restrict it to the hard-shelled varieties alone. Cramer's Anecdota Oxoniensia III 357 Ὅρφεὺς ἀκρόδρνα πᾶσαν ὀπώραν καλεῖ. Γάληνος δὲ καὶ οἱ τὰ φυτουργικὰ συνταξάμενοι ἀκρόδρνα φασὶ τὰ σκέπην ἔχοντα, οἷον ρόλας, κάρνα, ἀμυγδάλας καὶ εἰ τι ὅμοιον (pomegranates, nuts, almonds and the like), ὀπώρας δὲ τὰ ἀσκεπῆ ὡς μήλα, ἀπίους καὶ τὰ ὅμοια (apples, pears, &c). Similarly Democritus, Geoponica x 74 ἀκρόδρνα καλεῖται ὅσα ἐξωθεν κέλυσος ἔχει. In Xenophon, Oeconom. 19 § 12 we have τὰλλα ἀκρόδρνα πάντα after mention of vines and fig-trees, and in Plato, Critias 115 B, τὸν ἡμέρον καρπὸν, τὸν τε ξηρὸν (different kinds of grain)...καὶ τὸν ὅσος ξύλινος (fruits of hard rind). παιδιᾶς τε δὲ ἔνεκα ἡδονῆς τε γέγονε δυσθησαύριστος ἀκρόδρων καρπός, ὅσα τε παραμύθια πλησμονῆς μεταδέρπια ἀγαπητὰ κάμνοντι τίθεμεν. [†] Bekker cum Ar. ἐλαιῶν Z cum SFQ et Harp.

The etymological formation of the word, referring as it does originally to what we may call the 'tree-tips,' or the fresh growth at the furthest extremities of the branches, may be illustrated by the passage in Hesiod's Works and Days 231 οὔρεσι δὲ δρύς ἄκρη μὲν τε φέρει βαλάνους, μέσση δὲ μελίσσας, and Theocritus, xv 112 πὰρ δέ οἱ ὥρια κείται, ὅσα δρυὸς ἄκρα φέροντι.

[It seems to me that ἀκρόδρυα meant trees which produced fruit chiefly on the upper boughs, as distinguished from vines, from which the grapes hang in clusters nearer to the ground. The edible acorn, βάλανος, may have been specially so described, if we limit δρύς to the sense of 'oak-tree.' P.]

γενναίων] 'of a choice kind,' 'of a good stock.' Plato, Leg. 844 π τὴν γενναίαν νῦν λεγομένην σταφυλὴν ἢ τὰ γενναῖα σῦκα ἐπονομαζόμενα ὀπωρίζειν. (Cf. nobilis in Martial iii 47, 7 frutice nobili caules and as an epithet of uva ib. iv 44, 2 and olivæ v 78, 19.) Athenæus, xiv § 68 p. 653 γενναῖα λέγει ὁ φιλόσοφος (sc. Plato u. s.), ὡς καὶ Ἀρχιλόχος* παρέλθε, γενναῖος γὰρ εἰς. ἢ τὰ ἐπιγεννημένα, ὅλον τὰ ἐπεμβεβλημένα· ὁ γὰρ Ἀριστοτέλης καὶ ἐπεμβολάδας ἀπλοῦς ὀνομάζει τὰς ἐγκεκεντρισμένας. (The second explanation is clearly wrong. I only cite it to illustrate the next note.)

ἀναδενδράδας] 'trained vines' growing on trees, 'tree-vines.' The climbing vine is contrasted with the ground-vine of Lesbos in the Pastoralia of Longus, ii 1 πᾶσα κατὰ τὴν Λέσβον ἀμπελος ταπεινὴ, οὐ μετέωρος οὐδὲ ἀναδενδράς, ἀλλὰ κάτω τὰ κλήματα ἀποτείνουσα καὶ ὥσπερ κιττὸς νεμομένη. Cf. Petrie Papyri xxix 7 πεφύτευται...τὰ περὶ τὴν ἀναδενδράδα, and Polyb. xxxiv 11 § 1 ἀναδενδρίτης οἶνος, and Geoponica v 61 ἀναδενδρίτης, also Strabo v p. 231 τὸ δὲ Καίκομβον (Cæcubum) ἐλωδὲς ὃν εὐωνοσάτην ἀμπελον τρέφει τὴν δενδρίτιν. Columella iv 1, 8 vitis arbutiva, and Pliny N. H. xvii 23 § 199 sqq. nobilis vina non nisi in arbutis gigni. The best trees for the purpose were, according to Pliny, the elm (amicta vitibus ulmo of Hor. Ep. i 16, 3) and the poplar; next to these the ash, the fig-tree and the olive.

φυτευτήρια] 'nursery-beds,' 'plantations,' found in this sense also in C. I. A. iv 2, 53 a, φυτεῦσαι φυτευτήρια ἐλαῶν.

16. παιδάριον ἄστον] i.e. a little boy, who was free born.
It was expected that Apollodo-rus would have mistaken the boy for a slave and either bound or beaten him, thereby rendering himself liable to an indictment for assault (ὄβρις).

ἐκέλευον—ἐκτίλλειν] 'prompted him to pluck off the flowers of my rose-bed.' ἐκέλευον, 'put him up to...', 'persuaded him.' [ἐκτίλλειν is perhaps 'to pick off the young shoots as they were growing.' P.]

The rhetorician Hermogenes quotes the phrase τὴν ῥοδωνιὰν

λεια (Spengel, Rhetores Graeci ii 353). Harpocration has the following article, ῥοδωνία. Δημοσθένης ἐν τῷ περὶ τῶν Ἀρεθου-σίου ἀνδραπόδων. ῥοδωνία ἐστὶν ἡ τῶν ῥόδων φυτεία ὡς περ ἰωνία ἡ τῶν ἰων, ὡς Ἐκαταῖος ἐν α' περι-ηγήσεως δηλοῖ. Similarly Pollux i 229, who gives ἰωνία as the only parallel he can remember to the formation of the word ῥοδωνία (cf. rosaria, violaria).

To a modern reader, the mention of a rose-bed is immediately suggestive of a pleasure garden; but whether we look to the character of its owner, who seems to have been a dry man of business and little more, or to the context with its fruit-trees, its vines and its olives, we are driven to the conclusion that his roses were mere articles of trade, grown to be sold in town for crowns and garlands.
Just so, among the blessings of Peace, in the Pax of Aristo-phanes, 577, we find 'the violet-bed beside the well' mentioned in the very same breath as 'cakes and figs and myrtle-berries, sweet new wine and olive-trees.'
In Or. 50 § 61, Apollodorus says of his garden, τὸ ὄδω... ἐκ τῶν φρεάτων ἀπέλιπεν, ὥστε μὴδὲ λάχανον γενέσθαι ἐν τῷ κήπῳ.

The Greek appreciation of the rose seems to have been mainly utilitarian. Thus it is under the head of στεφανώματα that Theophrastus dilates on the many beauties of the rose and on its numerous varieties (πλήθει τε φύλλων καὶ ὀλιγότῃ καὶ τραχύτῃ καὶ λειότῃ καὶ χροίῃ καὶ εὐσμίᾳ, Hist. Plant. vi 6). To the Greek, says Ruskin, 'a rose was good for scent, and a stream for sound and coolness; for the rest one was no more than leaves, the other no more than water' (Modern Painters iii 4 13 § 13). 'A Greek despises flowers,' says Mr Bent, unless 'they are sweet-smelling or useful for something' (Cyclades, p. 276). It is indeed a noteworthy fact, attributable partly to the insignificance of the Attic flora, and still more to the defective development of Greek taste in this particular, that in what is known as the best period of Greek literature there is scarcely a single instance of a refined appreciation of the attractions of a flower-garden. One of the rare exceptions is the mention of κήπους εὐώδεις in Ar. Aves 1067. The passage in Eur. El. 777 κυρεῖ δὲ κήποις ἐν καταρρύτοις βεβώς, δρέπων τρεῖνις μυρσίνης κάρη πλόκους, is hardly an exception, as the epithet 'well-watered' is somewhat prosy, and the context shews that the only reason why Aegisthus is in his garden is for the purely practical object of making himself a myrtle-wreath for his sacrifice to the mountain-nymphs. Cf. Becker's Charicles p. 203—4, esp. i p. 349 sqq., of the 2nd German ed. with the excellent addenda of K. F. Hermann; also the latter's Privatalt. § 15 note 20 p. 106 ed. Blümner; St John's Manners and Customs of Ancient Greece, i 301—334, esp. pp. 304, 305; Büchschütz, Besitz u. Erwerb p. 72, and Schleiden, die Rose.

ὕβρεως] Aeschines (Timarch. § 16) quotes a 'law of Solon': ἀν τις Ἀθηναῖον ἐλεύθερον παῖδα ὕβριση, γραφῆσθω ὁ κύριος τοῦ παιδὸς πρὸς τοὺς θεσμοθέτας... ἐνοχοὶ δὲ ἔστωσαν ταῖςδε ταῖς αἰτίαις καὶ οἱ εἰς τὰ οἰκετικὰ σώματα ἐξαμαρτάνοντες, and similarly Dem. Mid. §§ 47—48. According to these two passages, it was permissible to institute a γραφὴ ὕβρεως even for outrage done to a slave, and though the text appears at first sight to imply that in such a case an indictment could not be brought, yet all that is necessarily meant is that if the lad maltreated were free born, the indictment (however unjustifiable in the present instance) would have been easier to bring forward than in the case of a slave. (Becker's Charicles iii p. 31—32 = p. 367 of English Abridgement. Hermann, Privatalt. § 6 = § 6 p. 38⁴ note 2 Thalheim.)

τηρήσας—ἐβοήθησαν] The attack reminds us partly of the murder mentioned by Cicero, pro Cluentio § 37 in arenarias quasdam extra portam Esquilinam perductus occiditur.

The quarries referred to in the text were possibly near the Museum hill where the Long Walls leading to the Peiraeus strike the wall enclosing Athens itself, or still more probably at a point immediately outside the ἀστυ, south of the Peiraic gate of Athens. In the excellent Atlas von Athen by Dr E. Curtius, the third map indicates 'recent quarries' at this point, just north of the ancient βάραθρον. In Murray's Greece, 1884, I 341, the incident described in the text is oddly supposed to have happened to Demosthenes.

Apollodorus wishes to indicate the ease with which after a necessarily short speech he had got a conviction against Arethusius. Cf. Aeschines, *Fals. Having now recounted some of the wrongs done me by Arethusius and his brother Nicostratus, I will call evidence in detail to prove that the two slaves entered by me in the specification do not belong to Nicostratus, who is now attempting to claim them, but are really part of the property of Arethusius and are thus liable to be confiscated to the state, as a partial payment of his debt to the treasury.

§ 19. At this point the speaker, after having shewn the reasons which justified him in regarding Arethusius as his enemy and exacting vengeance from him, reaches the real point

τὸν μὲν γὰρ Κέρδωνα] contrasted with τὸν δὲ Μάνην in § 20. Κέρδων is a slave-name expressive of knavish cunning (cf. ἡ κερδῶ, 'the wily one,' i.e. 'the fox'). Digest xxxviii 1, 42 Cerdonem servum meum manumitti volo (quoted by Mayor on Juv. iv 153 tollat sua munera Cerdo).

Kennedy.—[πώποτε in the earlier Attic is never used without the negative, but often in Plato and Demosthenes. P.]

Slaves were sometimes let out by their owners either for work in the mines or for any kind of labour; or again (as here) to work as hired servants for wages (ἀποφορά), which went to their masters. Aeschin. Timarch. § 97 οἰκέτας δημιουργοὺς τῆς σκυτοτομικῆς τέχνης ἐννέα ἢ δέκα ὢν ἕκαστος τούτῳ δὴ ὁβολοὺς ἀποφοράν ἔφερε τῆς ἡμέρας. δίκας ἐλάμβανε] A slave was incapacitated from conducting a law-suit either on his own account or on behalf of another.

Plato, Gorg. 483 B ἀνδραπόδου, ὅστις ἀδικούμενος καὶ προπηλακίζομενος μὴ οἷός τ' ἐστὶν αὐτὸς αὐτῷ βοηθεῖν μὴδ' ἄλλῳ οὐδ' ἂν κήδηται. Or. 37 (Pant.) § 51 ἔδει...λαχόντα ἐκείνῳ (sc. τῷ δούλῳ) τὴν δίκην τὸν κύριον διώκειν ἐμέ. (Hermann, Privatalt. § 59, 1 = Rechtsalt. § 4, p. 22* Thalheim.)

δίκας...ἐδίδον, ὅποτε κακὸν τι ἐργάσαιτο] The law by which the master had to make good any damage done by his slave is quoted as a law of Solon by Lysias, Or. 10 (Theomnest. A) § 19 οἰκῆος καὶ δούλης τὴν βλάβην ὀφείλειν. Cf. Dem. 55 § 31.—The clause containing ἐργάσαιτο refers of course to δίκας ἐδίδον alone; otherwise we should have had some such phrase as ὅποτε κακὸν τι πάθοι ἢ ἐργάσαιτο.

τὸν δὲ Μάνην] governed by ἐναπετίμησεν, but placed early for emphatic contrast with τὸν μὲν Κέρδωνα in § 19. It may almost be regarded as an accusative absolute.

Μάνης was one of the commonest slave-names. Theophrastus in his will, which is preserved by Diogenes Laertius, v 55, mentions among his slaves Callias and Manes, and the latter name occurs in Ar. Ran. 965, Lys. 908, 1213, and Pax 1146, while in the Aves, 523, it is used in the plural as a synonym for 'slaves,' νῦν δ' ἀνδράποδ' ἡλιθίους Μανᾶς. See further on Or. 45 § 86.

ἐναπετίμησεν] Archepolis handed over Manes to Arethusius as an equivalent for part of the debt due to the latter. The nominative to this verb is not Arethusius, the subject of the participle δανείσας, but Archepolis, the subject of the subordinate clause ἐπειδὴ οὐχ οἶός τ' ἦν. It will further be noticed that, while the verb ἀποτιμᾶω is generally used in the active of borrowing and in the middle of lending money on security, the compound ἐναποτιμᾶω is in the present passage applied to the debtor's transference of a part of his property on valuation in lieu of direct payment of his debt. The same compound occurs in the passive form in Dio Cassius xii 37 τὰ ἐνέχυρα πρὸς τὴν ἀξίαν ἐναποτιμηθῆναι ἐκέλευσε (i. e. Caesar ordained that the securities on which money had been borrowed should be valued and transferred to the creditors in place of a money payment).

The editors who place a comma after τὸ ἀρχαῖον, construe ἅπαν with ἐναπετίμησεν αὐτῷ, 'handed him over in full payment,' 'paid off the whole sum in the person of Manes.'

21. ὁπώραν πρίαιντο κ.τ.λ.] 'Whenever they bought up the produce of an orchard or hired themselves out to reap a harvest, it was Arethusius who made the bargain on their behalf for the purchase or for the wages respectively.' de Cor. § 51 τοὺς θεριστάς ἢ τοὺς ἄλλο τι μισθοῦ πράττοντας and ib. § 262 σῦκα καὶ βότρυς καὶ ἐλάας συλλέγων ὥσπερ ὁπωρώνης ἐκ τῶν ἀλλοτρῶν χωρίων.

μισθοῦμενος refers back to θέρος μισθοῖντο ἐκθερίσαι, just as ὠνούμενος corresponds to πρίαιντο. The latter verb having no present participle of its own, ὠνούμενος commonly takes its place and is so used in the present passage. Cf. note on § 10, where πρίασθαι is followed by ὠνεῖσθαι.

§§ 22—25. I now propose to deal with the Challenge which my opponents proposed to me, and also with that which I myself proposed to them.

At the preliminary hearing of my case against Arethusius, they put in a Challenge, and offered therein to deliver up the slaves, to be tortured by myself, their object being to claim the Challenge as a piece of evidence in their own favour in the event of my refusing to accept it.

I replied to the Challenge by stating in the presence of witnesses, that since this was not a private but a public cause and since the slaves, as I contended, were the property of the state, it was not for myself to torture them, as I was only a private person. On the contrary, it was a question for the board of police or for certain persons chosen by the Council of the state. On these conditions I was willing to accept their Challenge, and I challenged them to accept my own proposal. They declined my offer.

22. προκλήσεως] On the subject of Challenges, see Or. 45 § 15.

ἡ πρώτη ἀνάκρισις] 'the first preliminary investigation,' see note on ἀνακρινόμεν § 14 supra.

παραδιδόναι... τὰνδράποδα βασανίσαι] The principle of extracting evidence by the torture of slaves was one of the weakest points in the judicial system of Athens. Some interesting criticisms on it may be found in Forsyth's Hortensius, p. 40, and in Mahaffy's Social Life in Greece, pp. 226—8.—ἐμοὶ αὐτῷ is emphatic, just as, five lines further, εἰ ἐμοὶ ἐξεδίδωσαν contrasted with δημοσίᾳ. The speaker holds that the slaves belong to the state and should have been handed over to the public official and not to a private individual like himself.

ταύτην] Not the evidence given by the slaves, but the mere offer to allow them to be tortured, 'wishing this (offer) to be a kind of evidence on their own side.' ταύτην is attracted into the same gender as μαρτυρίαν; τοῦτο would have made the same sense, but would have been less idiomatic.

23. εἰ...εἰ] Two or even three protases, not co-ordinate, may belong to one apodosis, e.g. Plat. Men. 74 B εἰ τίς σε ἀνέροιτο τοῦτο, τί ἐστί σχῆμα; εἰ αὐτῷ εἶπες ὅτι στρογγυλότης, εἰ σοι εἶπεν ἄπερ ἐγώ, εἶπες δὴ-που ἂν ὅτι σχῆμά τι (Goodwin, Moods and Tenses, § 55. 1 = § 510 ed. 1889).

The reiteration of εἰ in the present passage has been considered open to objection; it occurs however in Or. 54 § 15, in an undoubtedly genuine speech of Demosthenes (A. Schaefer, Dem. u. s. Zeit III 2, 188 and Lortzing, Apoll. 33).

δημοσίᾳ βασανίζεσθαι] 'to be questioned publicly,' i.e. 'to be tortured by a state-officer.'

24. οὔτε τῆς βασάνου κύριος ἐγινγνόμεν] i.e. I did not acquire control of the 'question,'—authority over the examination.

οὔτε καλῶς ἔχειν] sc. ἡγούμην, 'it was unsuitable, I thought, for myself to decide as to the answers of the slaves.'

τὴν ἀρχὴν] sc. τοὺς ἔνδεκα, as appears by comparing § 23 μετὰ (τῆς βουλῆς) ἢ μετὰ τῶν ἔνδεκα. Reiske wrongly renders: illum Archontem ad cuius tribunal haec causa pertineret, aut delectos a senatu. Frequently it is the context alone that decides whether ἡ ἀρχή or even οἱ ἀρχοντες refers to the Archons or to some other public functionaries. Thus in Or. 22 (Androt.) § 26, τοῖς ἀρχουσιν ἐφήγοι refers to the Eleven, and in Lysias, Or. κατὰ τῶν σιτοπωλῶν §§ 5—10 οἱ ἀρχοντες is several times used of the five σιτοφύλακες in the Peiraeus. On τὴν ἀρχὴν for 'the authorities,' abstract for concrete, see note on Or. 45 § 58.

γράφεσθαι] 'to have the answers written down,' or 'to κατασημνημένους] 'having sealed up the testimony extorted.' The documents were put into an ἐχῖνος or 'casket,' which was sealed up and afterwards produced in court and there opened. Or. 54 § 17 σημνηθῆναι τοὺς ἐχίνους.

βασάνους, as is proved by the subsequent clause, 'whatever the slaves said,' is here used, not of the torture itself, but of the extorted evidence. Harpocr. βάσανος· Ἀντιφῶν· λίθος οὗτω καλεῖται, ᾧ τὸ χρυσίον παρατριβόμενον δοκιμάζεται. Τπερίδης δ' ἐν τῷ κατ' Ἀντίου τὰ ἐν ταῖς βασάνοις εἰρημένα ὑπὸ τῶν βασανιζομένων καὶ ἀναγραφέντα βασάνους ὠνόμασε. (Anaximenes) rhet. xvi 1 βάσανός ἐστι μὲν ὁμολογία παρὰ συνειδότης, ἀκροτος δέ.

παρέχειν κ.τ.λ.] 'to produce in court' the evidence obtained by torture. The torture itself, it appears, did not take place in court (see note on Or. 45 § 16).

ἵν'...ἐψηφίσασθε] For ἵνα 'in which case,' cf. Or. 36 § 47. ἐκ τούτων should be taken with ἐψηφίσασθε and not with ἀκούσαντες, cf. Or. 45 § 2 ἐξ ὧν (ἀκούσαντες)...γνώσεσθε.

25. ἰδίᾳ βασανιζομένων τῶν ἀνθρώπων] equivalent to εἰ ἰδίᾳ ἐβασάνιζοντο. Hence in the corresponding clause, instead of δημοσίᾳ δέ, which would have been equally good Greek, we have εἰ δὲ δημοσίᾳ sc. ἐβασάνιζοντο (Goodwin, Moods and Tenses § 109, 6 = § 841 ed. 1889).

[The drift of the argument is: 'I objected to a private examination, because my opponents would have said that my report of their statements was untrue; whereas if the examination were public, the responsibility would have rested wholly on the authorities.' P.]

οἱ ἄρχοντες] 'The Eleven.' See note on τὴν ἀρχὴν in § 24.

§§ 26—29. My opponents are really claiming what is public property, that is, your own property, men of the jury, and I shall prove this by your own laws. When the jury were proposing to condemn Arethusius to death, my opponents proposed a pecuniary penalty and promised jointly to pay it. So far from fulfilling their guarantee, they are actually claiming your own property; and the laws declare that the property of persons who guarantee the payment of a sum to the state and fail to do so shall be confiscated; so that, even on this ground alone, the laws would require the slaves in question to be state property.

As soon as Arethusius becomes indebted to the treasury, instead of being, as was admitted in former days, the wealthiest of the brothers, he is now made out to be ever so poor, and part of his property is claimed by his mother, part by his brothers, as in the present instance by Nicostratus.

I must ask you in conclusion to consider that there will never be any lack of claimants to contest your property, and to defraud the state of her dues, by making pitiful appeals to your compassion. If you disregard all such pleas in the present case, you will do wisely in finding a verdict against Nicostratus.

ἐμοῦ συγχωρῆσαι] sc. ἐδέοντο, implored me to acquiesce in my opponents having a pecuniary penalty imposed on them.—ὡμολόγησαν αὐτοὶ συνεκτεῖσθαι, 'they agreed that they would be jointly responsible for the payment.' Kennedy.

27. τῶν ὑμετέρων] The slaves claimed by the state, for non-payment of the fine due from Arethusius, are here dexterously represented as the property of the jury.

1. 2. τετυπτήσθαι] In Classical Greek, we should have had the phrase πληγὰς εἰληφέναι. The tenses from τυπτέω*, with the exception of the future τυπτήσω (used in Attic Prose and Comedy), are characteristic of late Greek. Thus, in the first Argument to the Midias, we have τετύπτηκεν and τετυπτημένος. Again, in Lucian (Demonax § 16) we read ἐπεὶ δὲ τις ἀθλητὴς... ἐπάταξεν αὐτὸν ἐς τὴν κεφαλὴν λίθῳ καὶ αἷμα ἔρρηξεν, οἱ μὲν παρόντες ἡγανάκτουν ὡς αὐτὸς ἕκαστος τετυπτημένος, where ἐπάταξεν is correctly used (as in Classical Greek Prose) instead of the aorist active of τύπτω, while τετυπτημένος is only a late form, for which writers of the best age would have written either πεπληγμένος or πληγὴν εἰληφώς.

The κατὰ Κόνωνος affords an instructive study on this point of Greek usage, as will further appear in Excursus (A) at the end of the speech (p. 233).

5. εὐχερῶς ἔχειν κ.τ.λ.] 'make no difficulty about lying.' Or. 21 (Mid.) § 103 τὸν μαρὸν καὶ λίαν εὐχερῇ, τὸν κονιορτὸν Εὐκτῆμονα. So ῥαδίως ὁμνῶναι infra § 39. P.]

§§ 1, 2. I was grossly assaulted by the defendant Conon, and, for a very long time, indeed, my life was despaired of. When I was restored to health and strength, instead of going beyond my years by bringing against him a public indictment for brutal outrage, I followed the advice of my friends and took the easier course of instituting a private suit for a common assault. I ask for your indulgent hearing, while I briefly relate to you my wrongs, and I trust that, if I prove my case, you will help me to my rights.

- 1 Ὑβρισθεὶς ὦ ἄνδρες δικασταὶ καὶ παθὼν ὑπὸ Κόνωνος τουτουὶ τοιαῦτα, ὥστε πολὺν χρόνον πάνν μήτε τοὺς οἰκείους μήτε τῶν ἱατρῶν μηδένα προσδοκᾶν περιφεύξεσθαι με, ὑγιάνας καὶ σωθεὶς ἀπροσδοκῆτως ἔλαχον αὐτῷ τὴν δίκην^c τῆς αἰκείας^a ταυτηνί. πάντων

^c propter syllabas breves (ἐλαχον) manuli Bl. αὐτ τὴν δίκην αὐτῷ, αὐτ τούτῳ τὴν δίκην.

1. Ὑβρισθεὶς—ταυτηνί] The opening sentence is best rendered by treating Ὑβρισθεὶς and παθὼν as principal verbs, and beginning a fresh sentence with the word ὑγιάνας, e.g. 'I was the victim of wanton outrage, and I suffered such maltreatment at the hands of Conon the defendant, that, for a very long time indeed, neither my friends nor any of my medical attendants expected my recovery. Contrary to expectation, I was restored to health and strength; and I thereupon brought against him the present action for the assault in question.'

This exordium is quoted by the rhetorician Hermogenes as an example of perspicuity and directness of expression (καθαρότης, Spengel, Rhetores Graeci II 276). Here, as in Or. 45, the keynote of the whole speech is struck by the opening word, Ὑβρισθεὶς. Cf. also Or. 21 (Mid.) § 1 τὴν μὲν ἀσέλγειαν, ὦ ἄνδρες δικασταί, καὶ τὴν ὕβριν κ.τ.λ.

πολὺν χρόνον πάνν] For this position of πάνν, placed after πολὺν, and even separated from it, cf. Plato, Hipp. Maj. 282 ε ἐν ὀλίγῳ χρόνῳ πάνν, Or. 30 § 2 Ὑβριστικῶς ὑπ' αὐτοῦ πάνν ἐξεβλήθη, and (Dem.) Prooem. 18 βραχύ τί μοι πευσθῆτε πάνν.

ἔλαχον...δίκην] lit. 'obtained this suit by lot,' 'had it allotted to me,' i.e. 'obtained leave (from the Archon) to bring this action.' Where several lawsuits were instituted at the same time, the Archon decided by lot the order in which they were to be heard (κληροῦν τὰς δίκας); hence the applicant for leave to bring an action is commonly said λαγχάνειν δίκην. See Meier and Schömann, p. 791 Lips.

τῆς αἰκείας] 'the assault in question.' Ariston, as he further explains in the next sentence, is bringing against Conon a private suit for assault (αἰκείας δίκην), instead of a public indictment for wanton outrage (ὕβρεως γραφή). The penalty in the former was light, namely, a pecuniary fine paid to the plaintiff; in the latter, it was either a fine paid to the state, or, in extreme cases, death. The former implied that the complainant had been simply assaulted and struck, the latter that he had been subjected to malicious and brutal indignities.

τῇ τῶν λωποδυτῶν ἀπαγωγῇ] 'the summary process directed against foot-pads,' i.e. 'summary arrest and imprisonment for highway robbery.' The plaintiff's friends meant that Conon might have been captured flagrante delicto, and carried off to prison as a λωποδύτης (lit. 'a clothes-stealer'). According to the plaintiff's subsequent statement, this would be actually true, as Conon and his friends had stripped him of his cloak and carried it off (§ 8 ἐξέδυσαν, and § 10 ἀπεκομίσθη γυμνός, οἱ δὲ ᾤχοντο θοιμάτιον λαβόντες μου). δίκη αἰκίας. A young man like Ariston would find himself in an awkward and invidious position, as prosecutor in so ambitious a case as a γραφὴ ὕβρεως, not to mention his being unequally matched against an unscrupulous opponent who was older than himself and had numerous connexions to support him. He would also be deterred (though he does not here confess it) by the rule requiring the prosecutor to pay a fine of a thousand drachmae in the event of his not obtaining at least one-fifth part of the votes (Or. 21 § 47).

The construction is, ἐγκαλοῦντα τούτων ἂ ἐπέπονθεν. For the gen. cf. Or. 36 § 9 πῶς ἔνεστ' ἐγκαλεῖν αὐτῷ μισθώσεως.

[ὑπὲρ τὴν ἡλικίαν may mean, 'beyond the resentment suited to my years,' implying that a young man ought to put up with a little affront, and not make a serious matter of it. P.]

ἥδιστ' ἂν—τοῦτον] Cf. Or. 53 § 18 οὐχ ἵνα μὴ ἀποθάνῃ κ.τ.λ. 'Ce cri de haine a quelque chose de naïf et de sauvage; le plaignant semble le laisser échapper malgré lui, sous l'impression trop vive encore des injures, qu'il a reçues. Cet involontaire et rapide oubli de la modération qu'il s'est commandée donne à son langage un accent de sincérité plus marqué; il lui sert aussi pour amener le récit des faits de la cause' (Perrot, Revue des deux mondes, 1873, 3, p. 946).

θανάτου] The penalty of death was inflicted in cases of λωποδυστῶν ἀπαγωγῇ, and even in special cases of ὕβρεως γραφῇ. For the former, cf. Xen. Mem. 1 2 § 62 ἐάν τις φανερός γένηται λωποδυστῶν ἢ βαλαντιομῶν ἢ τοιχωρυχῶν, τοῖτοισ θάνατός ἐστιν ἢ ζῆμια. For the latter, cf. Lysias, fragm. 44 καίτοι τις οὐκ οἶδεν ὑμῶν ὅτι τὴν μὲν αἰκίαν χρημάτων ἐστὶ μόνον τιμῆσαι, τοὺς δὲ ὑβρίζειν δόξαντας ἐξεστὶν ὑμῖν θανάτῳ ζημιῶν, Dem. Or. 21 § 49, inf. § 23.—'θανάτος articulo carere solet, si supplicium significat et cum vocabulo iudiciali coniungitur' Zink (quoting Procksch in Philologus xxxviii 306).

κρίνας] ἥδιστ' ἂν κρίνας, for καίτοι ἥδιστ' ἂν ἔκρινα, well illustrates the fondness of the Greeks for participial construction. The sense is, 'though I would most gladly have brought him to trial on the capital charge.' P.]

2. δεινῆς—τοῦτου] 'The original outrage, atrocious as it was, does not surpass the subsequent brutality of the defendant.' See καὶ δέομαι πάντων ὁμοίως ὑμῶν, πρῶτον μὲν εὐνοϊκῶς ἀκοῦσαί μου περὶ ὧν πέπονθα λέγοντος, εἴτ', ἐὰν ἡδικῆσθαι καὶ παρανενομησθαι δοκῶ, βοηθῆσάι μοι τὰ δίκαια. ἐξ ἀρχῆς δ' ὥς ἕκαστα πέπρακται διηγῆσομαι πρὸς ὑμᾶς, ὥς ἂν οἴός τ' ᾧ διὰ βραχυτάτων.

παρανενομησθαι] The passive is formed just as if the verb were directly transitive in the active, i.e. as if the active construction were παρανομεῖν τινα, and not εἰς τινα. So also the active παραινέειν εἰς τινα has παραινέσθαι for its corresponding passive (see below § 4 init. and § 5 fin.).

βοηθῆσάι μοι τὰ δίκαια] 'assist me to my rights.' For the phrase and the context, cf. Or. 27 § 3 δέομαι ὑμῶν... μετ' εὐνοίας τ' ἐμοῦ ἀκοῦσαι καὶ ἡδικῆσθαι δοκῶ, βοηθῆσαι μοι τὰ δίκαια, ποιήσομαι δ' ὥς ἂν δύνωμαι διὰ βραχυτάτων τοὺς λόγους, ib. § 68, Or. 35 § 5; 38 § 2; 40 § 61. A fuller phrase may be noticed in § 42 of this speech, βοηθεῖν καὶ τὰ δίκαια ἀποδιδόναι. Kühner, Gk. Gr. 264 § 410 c, quotes Xen. Mem. II 6 § 25 ὅπως αὐτὸς τε μὴ ἀδικῆται καὶ τοῖς φίλοις τὰ δίκαια βοηθεῖν δύνῃται, — zum Rechte verhelfen. It is an extension of the cogn. acc. βοηθεῖν βοηθείαν.

The exordium has several points of coincidence with that of Or. 45. See p. 59.

In the next four sections the plaintiff states the origin of the bad blood between the defendant's family and himself. The narrative, though part of the διήγησις which naturally follows immediately after the προοίμιον of a forensic speech, is only preliminary to the recital of the facts on which the suit is really founded. It is to this portion of the statement of the case that Rhetoricians like Theodorus of Byzantium would have given the name of προδιήγησις (Arist. Rhet. III 13).

§§ 3—6. Two years ago, we were ordered out to Panactum on garrison duty, and, as ill luck would have it, the sons of Conon pitched their tents close to our own. They picked quarrels with our servants and were persistently guilty of drunken and indecent conduct at the expense of our attendants and ourselves. My messmates and myself represented the case to the general, and he reprimanded them severely for their treatment of ourselves and for their misbehaviour in the camp. Notwithstanding, they burst in upon us on that very evening and violently assaulted us; indeed, serious consequences might have ensued, but for the arrival of the officers on the scene of disorder. On our return to Athens, there was naturally some ill blood between Conon's sons and myself, but I simply made up my mind to have nothing more to do with them. However, as the result proved, my collision with the sons in the camp led to my being grossly maltreated by their father the defendant, who, instead of rebuking his sons for the original outrage, has himself

3. ἐξῆλθον] not as a youthful περίπολος, but as a regular soldier. This may be inferred from § 5, where the στρατόπεδον, στρατηγός and ταξίαρχοι are mentioned, and where there is apparently an absence of the strict discipline usual in the case of ἐφηβοί (Zink, p. 19).

The present passage places the date of the speech in the 'third year after,' or, as we should say, 'two years after,' an expedition to Panactum. See Introduct. p. lxxiii.

On Panactum, or Panactus, a fort on the borders of Attica and Boeotia (Leake's Demi

p. 128), Harpocration has this article; Πάνακτος· Δημοσθένης κατὰ Κόνωνος· πόλις ἐστὶ μεταξὺ τῆς Ἀττικῆς καὶ τῆς Βοιωτίας. He further notes that Thucydides (v 42) makes the word neuter, and Menander masculine.

ἀριστήσειαν ... δειπνοποιεῖσθαι] On ἀριστον and δεῖπνον, see Becker's Charicles, p. 313, ed. 3.—The optative ἀριστήσαιεν denotes frequent and repeated action, which is also clearly brought out by ἐκάστοτε and διετέλουν ποιῶντες.

4. ὥραν] Not to be translated 'hour,' but 'time,' as ὥρα in the former sense is found in late Greek only, and was probably first so used by Hipparchus the Alexandrine astronomer in the second century B.C. In phrases like ἔθουν ὥραν οὐδενὸς κοινὴν θεῶν (Eumen. 109) and τὴν τεταγμένην ὥραν. (Bacch. 724), the rendering 'hour' should be avoided as open to misconstruction.

ταύτην....παρῶνουν....εἰς τοὺς παῖδας] Liddell and Scott (ed. 6) inadvertently quote this passage as an instance of παρῶνειν being used transitively 'like ὑβρίζειν,' whereas ταύτην is obviously the accusative of time (sc. τὴν ὥραν) and the object of παρῶνειν is expressed by εἰς τοὺς παῖδας this has been corrected in ed. 7. For the corresponding passive to this intransitive active, see § 5 fin. παρῶνόμενος. [πάροικος and παρῶνειν mean, not 'to be intoxicated,' but 'to be abusive over one's cups.' P.]

ἔτυπτον] See Excursus (A) on p. 233.

τὰς ἀμίδας κ.τ.λ.] 'They emptied the chamber-pots on them.' Kennedy. Hermogenes, who selects the present narrative as an instance of ἀπλή διήγησις, draws attention to the orator's plain-speaking in the clauses before us, and quotes them from memory with this comment: οὐ γὰρ εἶχε μᾶλλον δευνῶσαι τῷ λόγῳ ἢ τὰ πράγματα λέγων αὐτὰ

Here follows the narrative proper.

§§ 7—9. Not long after our return from the camp, I was taking my usual evening walk in the market-place with a friend of mine, when a son of the defendant, Ctesias by name, who was intoxicated at the time, caught sight of us, and after raising a yell and muttering something indistinctly to himself, went off to a part of the town where a large party, including his father, had met for a carouse; summoned them to his standard, and made them march with him down to the market-place. On closing with us, one of them fell upon my friend and pinned him, while Conon and his son and another attacked myself, stripped me of my cloak, dashed me into the mud, jumped upon me, and otherwise grossly maltreated me. The language I heard them use, as I lay helpless on the ground, was simply awful, and would hardly bear repeating. Conon himself meanwhile set up a crowing like a victorious game-cock. When they had left me, some people, who happened to come up, carried me home, and afterwards took me to a public bath, where they washed me all over, and brought the surgeons to see me. I will now call evidence, to attest to these facts.

7. περιπατοῦντος κ.τ.λ.] Hor. Sat. i 6, 113 vesperinumque pererro Saepe forum.

ἐσπέρας] Cf. νυκτὸς in § 28; Madvig's Gk. Syntax § 66 a, Farrar's Gk. Syntax § 46 n. and Abbott's Shaksp. Gr. § 176.

ἐν ἀγορᾷ] The article is omitted, as in δορυ and πόλις (when used of Athens); below we have ἐς τὴν ἀγοράν. Similarly ἐς βαλανεῖον in § 9, followed by ἐς τὸ βαλανεῖον in § 10.

The agora probably extended at this time over the inner Cerameicus, the district to the N.W. of the Acropolis.

τοῦ Κηφισιέως] The deme Κηφισία belonged to the tribe Erechtheis, and lay 12 miles N.E. of Athens at the foot of Pentelicus. It still retains its ancient name.

κατὰ] 'opposite to,' as Aesch. Theb. 528, τύμβον κατ' αὐτὸν διογενούς Ἀμφίονος, and so frequently in Thucyd. in the sense of 'off a coast, or river.' P.]

Λεωκόριον] The monument of the daughters of Leos (Praxithea, Theope, Eubule), who, at the command of an oracle, sacrificed themselves for their country. Or. 60 (Epitaph.) § 29 (αἱ Λεωκόραι) ἐαυτὰς ἔδοσαν σφάγιον τοῖς πολίταις ὑπὲρ τῆς χώρας. Cicero de Nat. Deor. iii § 50. Harpocration states that it was ἐν μέσῳ τῇ Κεραμεικῇ, i.e. in the midst of the inner Cerameicus, the N.W. district of Athens, lying within the walls, as opposed to the outer Cerameicus, the κάλλιστον πρόσ-τειον where the Athenian warriors were buried (Thuc. ii 34, Arist. Aves 395). It was close to the Leocorium that Hipparchus was slain by Har-modius and Aristogeiton (Thuc. vi 57, Aristotle's Const. of Athens, 18 § 3).

τῶν Πυθοδώρου] 'The premises (or shop) of Pythodorus,' either understanding οἰκιῶν, or more probably δωμάτων, like the expression which occurs twice in Or. 43 Macart. § 62 (νόμος) ἐς τὰ τοῦ ἀποθανόντος εἰσελθεῖν. Theocr. ii 76 μέσαν κατ' ἀμαξι-

Pythodorus is possibly the friend of Pasion mentioned in Isocr. Trapez. § 33 Πυθόδωρον τὸν σκηνίτην καλούμενον, quoted by Harpocr. s.v. σκηνίτης: ἔοικεν ἐπώνυμον εἶναι. μήποτε (perhaps) δὲ ὡς ἀγοραῖον καλούμενον, ἐπειδὴ ἐν σκηναῖς ἐπιπράσκειτο πολλὰ τῶν ὠνίων.

διαλεχθεῖς. Cf. § 5 λοιδορηθεῖς. —ὡς ἂν μεθύων, sc. διαλεχθείη. See on Or. 34 § 32.—μαθεῖν, sc. ἡμᾶς.

πρὸς Μελίτην ἄνω] A hilly district within the walls, comprising part of the western half of Athens, and including the hill of the 'Pnyx' and that of the Nymphs. Schol. on Ar. Aves 997 τὸ χωρίον... ᾧ περιλαμβάνεται καὶ ἡ Πνύξ... Μελίτη γὰρ ἅπαν ἐκεῖνο, ὡς ἐν τοῖς ὁρίσμοις γέγραπται τῆς πόλεως. That it was near the agora is implied by the present passage, as well as by Plato Parm. 126 c, where Cephalus meets Adeimantus and Glaucon in the agora, and they conduct him to Antiphon, οἰκεῖ δὲ ἐγγὺς ἐν Μελίτῃ. It was so called from the nymph Melite, wife of Hercules (Leake's Athens i 441, 485; Dyer's Athens 97).

ἔπινον κ.τ.λ.] Either Pamphilus had invited Conon and his set to a friendly symposium, or, which is more probable, his shop was their place of lounge. Lysias 24 § 20 ἕκαστος ὑμῶν εἵσεται προσφοιτᾶν ὁ μὲν πρὸς μυροπωλεῖον, ὁ δὲ πρὸς κουρεῖον, ὁ δὲ πρὸς σκυτοτομείον, ὁ δ' ὅποι ἂν τύχῃ, καὶ πλείστοι μὲν ὡς τοὺς ἐγγυτάτω τῆς ἀγορᾶς κατεσκεύαζμένους, ἐλάχιστοι δὲ ὡς τοὺς πλείστον ἀπέχοντας αὐτῆς. (See Becker's Charicles p. 279.)

τῷ κναφεῖ] 'the fuller.' As woollen cloaks would be spoiled by ordinary washing, they were regularly sent to the fuller to be scoured. The process consisted in rubbing in a kind of alkaline marl (fuller's earth), Κιμωλία γῆ, Ar. Ran. 713, and carding (κνάπτειν) to raise the nap (Jebb's Theophrastus xxv 13, and St John's Manners and Customs of Ancient Greece iii 232).—The form κναφεὺς is found in the sixth century, and γναφεῖον in the fourth, B.C. 358 (Meisterhans, 58², n. 528).

Ἀρχεβιάδης] § 34 note.

Σπίνθαρος ὁ Εὐβούλου] This Eubulus was probably the orator and statesman, one of Demosthenes' most formidable opponents. This supposition is strongly confirmed by the fact that the orator in question is known as Εὐβούλος Σπινθάρον Προβαλλισίος. The person men-ἐξαναστήσας] The word is sometimes used as a military term of starting soldiers from ambush, as in Thuc. ii 68, iii 7 and 108 § 3 ἐξανάσταντες, and Xen. Hell. iv 8 § 37; cf. Iliad i 191. The orator makes his client, a young soldier, charac-

 in the language of military life.
 Similarly, a few lines below,

Φερρεφαττίου] The site of the temple of Persephone is uncertain; it is supposed to have been south of the Leocorium, and close to the statue of Triptolemus, but we have no data worth mentioning besides the vague indications of the present passage (Leake's Athens i 488, and Wordsworth's Athens and Attica, p. 150).

εἰς μὲν—ἐκείνον] 'One of them, whom I failed to identify, suddenly fell on Phanostratus, and pinned him.' The present προσπίπτει gives a vivid effect to the description, and the imperfect κατεῖχεν must also be noticed as implying that the plaintiff's friend was held fast during the whole of the ensuing scuffle, and therefore could offer no assistance.—ὁ υἱὸς αὐτοῦ, Ctesias.

9. τὰ μὲν ἄλλα—ἐν ὑμῖν ἔνια] i.e. 'much of what they said was most abusive, and some of it I should be sorry to repeat in your presence.' Cf. Or. 18 § 103 ὅς' ὀκνήσαιμ' ἂν πρὸς ὑμᾶς εἰπεῖν, 21 § 79 οὐ γὰρ ἐγωγε προαχθείην ἂν εἰπεῖν πρὸς ὑμᾶς τῶν τότε ῥηθέντων οὐδέν, 2 § 19 and esp. Aeschin. 1 § 55 τοιαῦτα ἀμαρτήματα καὶ τοιαύτας ὕβρεις... οἷας ἐγὼ μὰ τὸν Δία τὸν Ὀλύμπιον οὐκ ἂν τολμήσαιμι πρὸς ὑμᾶς εἰπεῖν· ἃ γὰρ οὗτος ἐργῶ πράττων οὐκ ἠσχύνετο, ταῦτ' ἐγὼ λόγῳ σαφῶς ἐν ὑμῖν εἰπὼν οὐκ ἂν ἐδεξάμην ζῆν. Cic. Ver. II 1 § 32.

This rhetorical device of professing to have compunctions at repeating the bad language of one's opponent is sufficiently obvious. The effect is threefold. (1) The court is left to imagine that the terms of abuse were singularly offensive. (2) The plaintiff is accredited with being a man of high principle for hesitating to repeat the abominable language of his opponent,—for what Aristotle would call his δυσχέρεια τῶν ἀσχηρῶν. (3) The court is flattered by the compliment implied in the assurance that the language was too indecent to be repeated in their hearing. Cf. Arist. Rhet. III 7 παθητικὴ δὲ, ἐὰν μὲν ἦ ὕβρις, ὀργιζομένου λέξις, ἐὰν δὲ ἀσεβή καὶ αἰσχρὰ, δυσχεραίνοντος καὶ εὐλαβουμένου καὶ λέγειν.

σημεῖον] To be taken with ὕβρεις; τεκμήριον with τοῦ γεγενῆσθαι. The former is 'an indication,' 'a sign'; the latter 'a conclusive proof' (note on Isocr. ad Dem. § 2). Or. 36 § 12.

ἦδε—πλευράς] 'he began to crow, mimicking the fighting-cocks that have won a victory, while the rest bade him flap his elbows against his sides, like (lit. in lieu of) wings.'

We find representations of cock-fighting on ancient gems and vase-paintings; and, if the

11. τῶν σιτίων ἀπεκεκλείμην] 'I was cut off from, debarred from, my food,' 'too ill to eat anything.' Hesy chius explains ἀποκεκλήσθαι σιτίων· ἀνορέκτως ἔχειν τροφῆς.—Strict Atticists prefer ἀπεκεκλήμην (from old Attic κλήω) to ἀπεκεκλείμην and ἀπεκεκλείσμεν (Veitch, Gk. Verbs).—ἥτρου, 'the pit of the stomach.'

12. εἰ μὴ—διεφθάρην] 'If a copious discharge of blood had not spontaneously occurred, while I was in extreme agony and at the very crisis of the malady, I should have died of internal suppuration.' [An injury, caused by the stamping upon him when down, was relieved at last by passing blood from some internal hemorrhage. P.] περιωδύνῃ is possibly a technical term; at any rate it is used by Hippocrates, 'the Father of Medicine,' and he also has περιωδυνεῖν, περιωδυνία and περιωδυνᾶσθαι [cf. Aesch. Ag. 1423 μοῖρα μὴ περιώδυνος μηδὲ δεμνιοτήρης. P.] ἔμπυος] See Excursus (B), p. 288.

παρηκολούθησε—πληγῶν] Constr. τοιαύτη νόσος, ἐξ ἧς εἰς τοῦσχατον ἦλθον, παρηκολούθησέ μοι ἐκ τῶν πληγῶν, ἃς ὑπὸ τούτων (sc. Conon, Ctesias and Theogenes) ἔλαβον.

§§ 13—15. Let me now tell you beforehand of the course which Conon will take in his reply. He will divert your attention from the facts and try to throw ridicule on the whole affair. He will tell you it was only the playful pleasantry that is common among young men about town. He will misrepresent us as just like his sons in character, and only different in being hard on other people. But the jury will be inflicting what I may call a fresh outrage upon me, if they are going to believe the defendant's bare assertion about our respective characters and to allow no weight to the evidence of our life and conduct.

13. εἰς πᾶν ἐλθὼν] While πᾶν ποιεῖν and πάντα ποιεῖν are invariably used in the active sense of 'straining every nerve,' 'leaving no stone unturned,' εἰς πᾶν ἐλθεῖν and similar phrases have often (like εἰς τοσκατον ἐλθεῖν of the last section) the passive notion of being reduced to the utmost extremity, as in the present passage.

Thus (i) in active sense we have Xen. Cyr. v 4 § 26 πάντα ἐποιοῦν πείθοντες τὸν βασιλέα, Anab. III 1 § 18 ἐπὶ πᾶν ἐλθοι, ὡς ἡμᾶς τὰ ἔσχατα αἰκισάμενος πᾶσιν ἀνθρώποις φόβον παράσχοι, Soph. O. T. 265 κἀπὶ πάντ' ἀφίξομαι ζητῶν τὸν αὐτόχειρα.

(ii) in passive; Xen. Hell. vi 1 § 12 οἶδα δέ, ὅφ' οἷας δυνάμει ... εἰς πᾶν ἀφίκετο βασιλεὺς, and v 4 § 29. Plato Symp. 194 A μάλ' ἂν φοβοῖο καὶ ἐν παντὶ εἴης.

τῆς προσηκούσης ἐλάττω δίκην] 'I have entered on an action much below the merits of the case.' Cf. latter half of § 1.

τί ποτ' ἐστὶν δ] 'what is the import (sing.) of the points (plur.) that Conon will urge in his defence.' τί...δ is more idiomatic than τίνα...δ, and is found in Or. 4 § 10; 19 § 288; 21 § 154; 36 § 28; 37 § 86.

ἀπὸ τῆς ὕβρεως—εἶναι] In apposition to λέγειν παρεσκευάσθαι, and loosely dependent on πέπυσμαι. A simpler construction might have been brought about by closing the sentence with παρεσκευάσθαι and then beginning afresh with some such sentence as the following; ἀπὸ γὰρ τῆς ὕβρεως καὶ τῶν πεπραγμένων τὸ πρᾶγμ' ἀπαγαγόν, εἰς γέλωτα καὶ σκώμματ' ἐμβαλεῖν πειράσεται, καὶ ἐρεῖ κ.τ.λ., and in English translation this would give a clearer sense than any slavishly literal rendering of the more complex construction in the text. 'He will divert your attention from the wanton outrage and the actual facts of the case; and will endeavour to turn the whole affair into mere jest and ridicule.' That εἰς γέλωτα καὶ σκώμματ' ἐμβαλεῖν is the construction (and not καὶ σκώμματ' ἐμβαλεῖν πειράσσεσθαι, καὶ ἐρεῖν), appears from (Dem.) Phil. 4 § 75 τὸ πρᾶγμα εἰς γέλωτα καὶ λοιδορίαν ἐμβalόντες, cf. Aeschin. 1 § 135 τὸ πρᾶγμα εἰς οὐκίδος καὶ κινδύνους καθίστας and εἰς γέλωτα καὶ λῆρόν τινα προτρεπόμενος ὑμᾶς, Lysias frag. 75, 1 εἰς σκώμματά τε αὐτοῖς καὶ ἀντιλογίαν καὶ ἔχθραν καὶ λοιδορίαν κατέστησαν.—Hesychius, referring perhaps to the present

καλῶν κάγαθῶν] See note on Or. 45 § 65. Trans. 'sons of respectable people, who in their youthful frolics have given themselves nicknames.' σφίσιν αὐτοῖς is not necessarily limited to the reflexive sense, but is sometimes almost equivalent to the reciprocal pronoun ἀλλήλοις (see Isocr. Paneg. § 34).

ἐρῶσι κ.τ.λ.] The construction is τινὲς ἐκ τούτων ἐρῶσιν ἑταιρῶν.—καὶ δὴ καὶ, used in descending to particulars after a general statement. Or. 55 § 10. The construction here changes from ὡς εἰσὶν to the acc. with infin.—περὶ ἑταίρας gen. sing., not acc. pl. [See Or. 21 § 36, p. 525 and Ar. Vesp. 1345. P.]

to supply the lack of a perf. passive and active of τύπτω, as the Attic prose writers know nothing of the forms τετύφθαι and τετυφέναι. See Excursus (A) on τύπτω, p. 238.

παροίνους...ὑβριστὰς...ἀγνώμονας...πικρούς] 'drunken' and 'insolent'; 'unforgiving' and 'ill-tempered.' The four epithets, separated into pairs by μὲν and δέ, refer, in the case of the first couple, to the actual 'assault and battery'; in the case of the second, to the lawsuit that had since resulted. Conon will in his artful way represent us as really wild sparks like himself, who are yet inconsistent enough to be churlish and ill-tempered, instead of genial and good-humoured as παρόνιοι and ὑβρισταὶ ought to be.

κατασκευάσει] in bad sense, 'to misrepresent,' 'trump up a story,' 'make out falsely.' Cf. Or. 45 § 82. παρασκευάσειν, the reading of the Paris ms S, depends, like the previous infinitives, on the remote verb πέπυσμαι.

15. χαλεπῶς — ἐννοχῶς] 'deeply indignant as I am at the wrongs I have suffered.' Or. 21 § 108 ἐγὼ γὰρ ἐννοχῶς χαλεπῶς ἐφ' οἷς περὶ τὴν λητουργίαν ὑβρίσθην, ἐτι πολλῶ χαλεπώτερον...τούτοις τοῖς μετὰ ταῦτα ἐνήνοχα καὶ μᾶλλον ἡγανάκτησα, 58 § 55 πρῶως ἐπὶ τοῖς γιγνομένοις φέρειν.

τοῦτ' ἀγανακτήσασαιμ' ἂν] Or. 8 § 55 ἀγανακτῶ αὐτὸ τοῦτο, εἰ τὰ μὲν χρήματα λυπεῖ τινὰς ὑμῶν εἰ διαρπασθήσεται. ἀγανακτεῖν and similar verbs implying mental emotion, though occasionally followed by a dative with or without ἐπὶ, may have an accusative neuter pronoun (Kühner, Gk. Gr. § 410, c. 5). τοῦτο is explained by εἰ ἀληθὴ δόξει οὕτοσὶ λέγειν, 'deeply indignant as I am at the wrongs I have suffered, I should (if you will pardon the expression) feel no less resentment at this, and should deem myself the victim of a fresh outrage at your hands, if Conon shall be held by you to be speaking the truth about us...' εἰ οἷόν τ' εἰπεῖν must be understood as a parenthetical apology for using the strong word ὑβρισθῆναι to express the outrage that will be done to the feelings of honest men like the plaintiff, if the defendant's bare assertion is believed outright, and if no weight is given to the unimpeachable testimony pre-

αὐτὸν αἰτιάσθαι] sc. εἶναι, 'that, whatever sort of person each one shall assert that he is, or his neighbour shall accuse him of being, such he shall be considered to be, and respectable citizens shall have no advantage at all from their daily life or conduct.' Aeschin. 1 § 153 and 2 § 5.

§§ 16—17. As to our own character, no one has ever seen us playing drunken pranks on other people, and we cannot see how our opponents can call us 'hard' on others, if we claim redress. Conon's sons are welcome to belong to their disorderly clubs, but I shall be surprised if this or any similar plea will enable them to escape with impunity.

16. οὔτε παροινούντες οὔθ' ὕβριζοντες...οὔτ' ἄγνωμον κ.τ.λ.] This refers to § 14 παροίνους... καὶ ὑβριστάς...ἀγνώμονας δὲ καὶ πικρούς. The mss have οὔθ' ὕβριζοντες, which Baiter alters into οὐδ' ὕβριζοντες. It would be better perhaps (with Bekker) to leave οὔθ' ὕβριζοντες, and to alter οὔτ' into οὐδ' before ἄγνωμον. The break between the second clause and the first is clearly greater than between the two parts of the first (viz. παροινούντες and ὕβριζοντες). Cf. 55 § 4. ἐωράμεθα] This form of the perf. of ὁρᾶν (for the older Attic ὥμαι, the 2nd and 3rd sing. of which occur in Dem.) is also found in Isocr. antid. § 110 μὴδ' ὑφ' ἐνὸς ἐωρᾶσθαι, possibly the earliest extant instance (the antidosis belongs to B.C. 355; the present speech to B.C. 355 or 341).

συγχωροῦμεν κ.τ.λ.] 'They are welcome, so far as we are concerned, to the attributes of Priapi and Sileni.' For the dat. cf. § 44 πονηροτέροις ἡμῖν εἶναι συνέβαινεν.

§§ 17 cont.—20. Compare the spirit of our laws with the course which Conon proposes to take. The laws, I understand, affix a penalty even to minor offences, to preclude the perpetration of graver crimes, to prevent men (for instance) being gradually led from wrangling to blows, from blows to wounding, from wounding to murder. Conon, on the contrary, will make light of the whole affair and will raise a laugh to get himself acquitted. Why! none of you would have laughed had you seen me when I was being brutally maltreated, and when I was carried helpless to my home.

17. θαυμάζω γὰρ] The English idiom requires us to leave γὰρ untranslated, or else to render it by the exclamation 'why!' —'What has all this to do with me? Why! for my part, I am surprised if in your court they have discovered any plea or pretext, thanks to which a man, if convicted of outrage and assault, shall escape punishment.'

οἱ μὲν γὰρ νόμοι κ.τ.λ.] The influence of μὲν extends over the whole of the two following sections, it is then caught up and reiterated in the clause εἴτ' ἐν μὲν τοῖς νόμοις οὕτως. Thus the first μὲν has no δέ corresponding to it, until we reach the words ἂν δ' εἴπη Κόνων. 'The laws say so and so...' 'Not so, Conon.'

τὰς ἀναγκαίας προφάσεις κ.τ.λ.] i.e. προεἰδόντο ὅπως μὴδ' αἱ ἀναγκαῖαι προφάσεις μείζους γίνωνται. Thus, to use the illustration supplied below by Demosthenes himself, abusive language is a πρόφασις for dealing blows; blows again are a πρόφασις for inflicting wounds; lastly wounding, for homicide. The laws, by ordaining a legal remedy at each stage, (1) defamation, (2) assault, (3) unlawful wounding, interpose to prevent defamation, which is a pretext for assault, growing into actual assault; similarly assault developing into unlawful wounding, and ultimately into homicide. 'The laws on their part have, on the very contrary, made provision, even in the case of pleas of necessity, against the development of those pleas into greater proportions.'

[The meaning is, that the law, by providing an action for every kind of insult, has made it unnecessary for the aggrieved to resort to extremes in avenging himself. By ἀναγκαλὰ πρόφασις he means, for instance, the plea, that a man was insulted and he was obliged to resent it. The law says, 'that obligation must not be pressed too far, so as to justify you in taking very violent revenge.' P.]

ἀνάγκη γάρ... γέγονεν] The plaintiff, a quiet, common-place soldier, is here on the verge of displaying a familiarity with legal technicalities which would be not only out of keeping with his ordinary character, but would be resented by those of the jury who happened to be less versed in legal learning. The court would be apt to ascribe his acquaintance with the details of the law of defamation, assault, and homicide to that over-litigiousness of character which was as unpopular, as it was common, at Athens; or, at the very least, they would put him down as a pedant. Hence Demosthenes introduces a passing apology, explaining that the plaintiff, honest man, owes all his legal lore to the enquiries rendered imperative by the maltreatment he had received from the defendant. Hence, too, the skilful disclaimer of superior knowledge involved in the subsequent phrases; φασί... γίνεσθαι and ἀκούω... εἶναι. Cf. Lysias Or. 19 §§ 5, 53.

κακῆγορίας δίκαι] Isocr. κατὰ Λοχίτου (an αἰκείας δίκη like the present case), § 3 (οἱ θέντες ἡμῖν τοὺς νόμους) οὕτω... ἡγήσαντο δεινὸν εἶναι τὸ τύπτειν ἀλλήλους, ὥστε καὶ περὶ κακῆγορίας νόμον ἔθεσαν, ὃς κελεύει τοὺς λέγοντάς τι τῶν ἀπορρήτων πεντακοσίας δραχμὰς ὀφείλειν. Cf. Lysias, Or. 10 §§ 6—12, Dem. Or. 28 § 50, Or. 21 § 82.

18. λοιδορούμενοι] 'reviling one another.' For the reciprocal sense, cf. Or. 54 § 40 ἐχθροὺς ἀλλήλοις ... λοιδοροῦμένους καὶ πλύνοντας αὐτοὺς τὰ πόρρητα, and Ar. Ranae 857 πρᾶδ' ὡς ἐλεγχ' ἐλέγχου, λοιδορεῖσθαι δ' οὐ θέμις ἀνδρας ποιητὰς ὥστερ' ἀρτοπωλίδας.

As λοιδορεῖσθαι is used in the sense of κακῶς ἀγορεύειν ἀλλήλους, so also λοιδορία sometimes occurs as an equivalent for the precise technical term κακῆγορία. Hence we have in Ar. Vesp. 1207 εἶλον διώκων λοιδορίας (sc. κακῆγορίας), and Athenaeus (xii 525 b) quotes from Antiphon ἐν τῷ κατ' Ἀλκιβιάδου λοιδορίας, possibly meaning a speech in a δίκη κακῆγορίας.

ἵνα μὴδεῖς—μὴδενί] 'to prevent anyone, when he is the weaker party, defending himself with a stone or any similar missile,' e.g. ἀνδραποκτον, Lysias Or. 4 § 6. See Mahaffy's Social Greece, pp. 358—360.

τραύματος...γραφαί] (Lysias) Or. 6 κατ' Ἀνδοκίδου § 15 ἂν τις ἀνδρὸς σῶμα τρώσῃ, κεφαλὴν ἢ πρόσωπον ἢ χεῖρας ἢ πόδας, αὐτὸς κατὰ τοὺς νόμους τοὺς ἐξ Ἀρείου πάγου φεύζεται τὴν ἀδικηθέντος πόλιν, καὶ ἐὰν κατὰ, ἐνδεχθεὶς θανάτῳ ζημιωθήσεται.

The fourth oration of Lysias is a very brief defence in a case of 'malicious wounding,' περὶ τραύματος ἐκ προνοίας. The defendant endeavours to prove the absence of πρόνοια (malice pre-pense), and implores the βουλὴ (ἢ ἐξ Ἀρείου πάγου) to rescue him from banishment (§§ 6, 12, 20). In Aeschin. Ctesiph. § 51 a τραύματος γραφή instituted by Demosthenes is mentioned; and τοῦ μὴ...φόνους γίνεσθαι] The genitive of a clause containing an accusative of the subject and an infinitive is often used (especially with μὴ) to denote the object or motive; the dative, the means and instrument or cause (Madvig's Greek Syntax, § 170, and the commentators on Thuc. II 102; VI 33; VIII 87 § 3).

19. τὸ τῆς λαιδορίας κ.τ.λ.] 'the least of these evils, namely, abusive language, has been provided for by the laws, for the avoidance of (πρὸ) &c.'—προεώραται, which may have either a middle or a passive sense, has here almost certainly the latter, especially as we have just had ἐώραμέθα as a passive in § 16. προεώραμαι occurs as passive in Arist. Met. II 1, and προεωράσθαι as middle in Diod. Sic. IX 102. Westermann here supplies ὁ νόμος, and thus takes it as a middle; but Dem. in the present passage and its context appears to prefer the plural οἱ νόμοι, though ἐκ τοῦ νόμου occurs four lines back.

§§ 21—23. It is only those who are misled by their youth into acts of outrage that deserve any indulgence, and even in their case, such indulgence ought not to get them off altogether, but should extend simply to mitigation of their penalty. But Conon is more than fifty years of age, and therefore inexcusable; and yet, instead of stopping younger men, and those his sons, from doing wrong, he was the ring-leader of them all.

Even the penalty of death would be too small for his crimes, for the conduct of his sons in their father's presence proves that he himself had no reverence for his own father.

21. δίκαιον μὲν] The rule of strict justice, stated broadly (ὅλως, 'speaking generally'), as contrasted with the concessions granted in special cases on the principles of equity (or ἐπιείκεια) implied in the next sentence.

τούτοις] repeats the previous dative τοῖς...πράττουσι ('to these, I say'), and is itself emphatically reiterated in the subsequent κἀκείνοις, referring pointedly to the plaintiff's opponents.

τοῦτον ἐμισεῖτ' ἂν δικαίως] 'even then you would have abhorred the defendant, and rightly too!' or (with Kennedy) 'even then he would have deserved your execration.'

23. προῆκται] Perfect passive with middle sense 'has had them brought up' (Liddell and Scott), or simply 'has trained them' (gezogen hat). This explanation is due to Reiske, and is probably right. But the general sense of προάγω, 'to lead on by little and little' (§ 18 προάγονται), may perhaps warrant our understanding it of Conon's permitting his sons to be constantly taking liberties, and going step by step from bad to worse. προῆκται may in the latter case be rendered 'has spoilt' (verzogen hat, Westermann and G. H. Schaefer), but the two meanings are almost identical, and the general sense

καὶ ταυτ' ἐφ' ὧν—κείται] 'and that too in the case of acts, for some of which the penalty ordained is death' (referring to laws against ὕβρις and περὶ τῶν λωποδυτῶν, cf. § 1 ad fin.). ἐφ' ὧν ἐνίοις stands for ἐπὶ τούτων ὧν ἐνίοις [or, perhaps, καὶ ταῦτα (ἐξαμαρτάνοντας) ἐφ' ὧν ἐνίοις. P.].

τοῦτον] Conon; ἐκεῖνον, his father (who was probably dead, as we may take αἰσχύνεσθαι as an imperfect imperative); τούτους, his sons.—The construction of the last clause is ἡξίου ἂν καὶ τούτους (τιμᾶν καὶ δεδιέναι) αὐτόν.

24. τὸν τε τῆς ὕβρεως] In Or. 21 (Mid.) § 46, a document is given, purporting to be the law in question.

τὸν περὶ τῶν λωποδυτῶν] The periphrasis is due to the fact that the crime has no name specially appropriated to it in Attic Greek of the best age (λωποδυσία is found only in a glossary, and λωποδυσίου δίκη in the rhetorician Hermogenes, fl. A.D. 170). Cf. § 1, where λωποδυτῶν ἀπαγωγή is parallel to ὕβρεως γραφαί.—See Mayor's note on Cicero, Phil. II § 8.—Xen. Mem. I 2 § 62 κατὰ τοὺς νόμους, ἐὰν τις φανερός γένηται κλέπτων ἢ λωποδυτῶν ἢ βαλάντιοις τῶν ἢ τοιχωρυχῶν...τούτοις θάνατός ἐστιν ἡ ζημία.

ἀπράγμονες καὶ μέτριοι] 'Quiet and inoffensive,' Or. 42 § 12 μετρίον καὶ ἀπράγμονος πολλίτου μὴ εὐθὺς ἐπὶ κεφαλὴν εἰς τὸ δικαστήριον βαδίζειν. Cf. Or. 36 § 53.

25. εἰ παθεῖν τί μοι συνέβη] a common euphemism for death. Or. 23 (Aristocr.) § 59 ἂν ἀρα συμβῇ τι παθεῖν ἐκείνῳ. A frequent formula at the beginning of a Greek will was: ἔσται μὲν εὖ, ἐὰν δέ τι συμβαίῃ, τὰδε διατίθεμαι (Diog. Laert. v 2 § 51). Cf. Cicero, Phil. I § 10 si quid mihi humanitus accideret, and Sheridan's Rivals, v 3 (just before a duel), 'But tell me now, Mr Acres, in case of an accident, is there any little will or commission I could execute for you?'

γοῦν] 'for instance,' or, 'at any rate,' one person was condemned for such an offence. Tr. worshipped at Brauron, the ancient deme near the western coast of Attica, where Orestes and Iphigenia are said to have landed with the statue of the Taurian goddess. Wordsworth's Athens and Attica, c. xxviii: 'The daughter of Agamemnon was brought here, as the legend related [Iph. T. 1461], from the gloomy regions of the Tauric Chersonesus, and placed as a priestess of Diana's temple in this cheerful valley, where she was said to have lived and died: and where her supposed tomb was shown in after ages.' The principal ceremony in the Brauronia, held every five years, was the rite performed by the young girls of Attica, dressed in saffron-coloured attire, who played as bears in honour of the goddess. *Ar. ἐξέβαλ'] not 'expelled' from its own body, but 'banished' from the country. A. Schaefer, Dem. u. s. Zeit, III 2, 114 n.

The charge in this case would be what is technically called βούλευσις, which is best defined as 'id crimen, quo quis, quacunque sit ratione, ipse tamen a necando manus abstinens homi-nem morti studeat dare' (Forchhammer, de Areopago, p. 30). Harpocration s. v. says that the term is used ὅταν ἐξ ἐπιβουλῆς τις τινι κατασκευάσῃ θάνατον, εἴαν τε ἀποθάνῃ ὁ ἐπιβουλευθεὶς εἴαν τε μὴ. He adds that, according to Isaeus and Aristotle, such charges came before the court ἐπὶ Παλλαδίῳ, Const. of Athens, 57 § 3 τῶν δ' ἀκουσίων καὶ βουλευσεως... οἱ ἐπὶ Παλλαδίῳ, but, according to Deinarchus, before the Areopagus,—as in the present instance. The apparent discrepancy as to the tribunal for hearing such cases may be reconciled by the fact that the court at the Palladium was reserved for charges of φόνος ἀκούσιος (Aristocr. § 72), whereas that of the Areopagus had cognisance of φόμος ἐκ προνοίας. See Sauppe, Or. Att. II 235; Meier and Schömann, pp. 384—6, note 532 Lipsius; also the discussion in Zink's Dissertatio pp. 3—10, Hermann's Staatsalt. ed. 6, pp. 360, 364; Rechtsalt. ed. 4, p. 52; Gilbert's *Gk. ἔως ἂν ἀπείπωσιν] 'till they are tired,' sc. of ἀσελγαίνοντες. Cf. § 27, ἐπειδὴ δ' οὖν ποτ' ἀπείπον. Reiske (Index Graec.) is clearly wrong in his rendering deliquerint animis sub verberibus: had the clause referred to the victim, the singular would have been used, to correspond to τῷ περιπίπτοντι.

§§ 26—29. At the arbitration my opponents, by wasting time and introducing irrelevant matters, protracted the proceedings beyond midnight, to the disgust of all the bystanders, and at last even of themselves. They then, with an evasive object, put in a challenge, offering to surrender certain slaves to be examined by torture as to the assault, and they will make much of this challenge. But had it been a bona fide offer, it would have been made not at the last moment, but long before.

26. ἡ δίαίτα] Civil actions at Athens, before being brought into court, were almost invariably referred to arbitration. The Arbitrators (δαιοτηταί) were either public and appointed by lot (κληρωτοί) or private and chosen (αἰρετοί) by the parties to the impending suit. In cases brought before a public arbitrator the parties might appeal to a higher Court; whereas the decision of a private arbitrator was final. See esp. Or. 21 (Mid.) § 94 τὸν τῶν δαιοτῶν νόμον, and Aristotle, Const. of Athens, 53 §§ 2, 3. The δίαίτα here described was of the former kind. (See further Dict. Antiq. s. v. δίαίτα and Excursus to Kennedy's Demosth. Leptines &c. pp. 395—403, or Hermann's Public Antiquities, § 145, 10 = Staatsalt. p. 592—4 Thumser &c. Cf. Wayte on Androt. § 27.)

ἐποίησαν—ὥραν] 'They prolonged the time beyond midnight.' For the plural νύκτες in the sense nocturna tempora cf. Plato Phileb. 50 D νῦν οὖν λέγε πότρεα ἀφίης με ἡ μέσας ποιήσεις νύκτας, Protag. 310 C and Symp. 217 D πόρρω τῶν νυκτῶν. Ar. Nub. 1 τὸ χρῆμα τῶν νυκτῶν δσον.

οὔτε—διδόναι] 'by refusing to read aloud the depositions or to put in copies of the same.' The depositions were indispensable, and the defendants' refusal would obviously protract the proceedings, and lead to lengthy debates between the Arbitrator and the parties to the suit.—τῶν παρόντων sc. μαρτύρων.—καθ' ἓνα = ἕκαστον, 'one by one,' singillatim. οὕτωςι] 'merely,' sic temere, Homer's αὐτως, or μὰψ οὕτως 'just bringing our witnesses up to the altar and putting them on their oath and nothing more,' without allowing them to proceed with their depositions.

λίθον] The mss have βωμὸν, which is retained by the Zürich editors, but altered into λίθον by others on the authority of Harpocration: λίθος Δημοσθένης ἐν τῷ κατὰ Κόνωνος 'τῶν τε παρόντων καθ' ἓνα ἡμῖν οὕτωςι καὶ πρὸς τὸν λίθον ἄγοντες καὶ ἐξορκούντες (sic),' εὐκασι δ' Ἀθηναῖοι πρὸς τινι λίθῳ τοὺς ὅρκους ποιῆσθαι ὡς Ἀριστοτέλης ἐν τῇ Ἀθηναίων πολιτείᾳ (7 § 1, 55 § 5) καὶ Φιλόχορος ἐν τῷ γ' ὑποσημαίνουσιν. So Hesychius, λίθος βῶλος, βωμὸς καὶ βάσις. τὸ ἐν τῇ Ἀθηναίων ἐκκλησίᾳ βῆμα. Plutarch, Solon 25 ὤμνουν ὅρκον ... ἕκαστος τῶν θεσμοθετῶν ἐν ἀγορᾷ πρὸς τῷ λίθῳ. Similarly what Theophrastus (ap. Zenob. proverb. iv 36) calls the ὕβρεως καὶ ἀναιδείας βωμούς on the Areopagus, Pausanias describes as λίθους (1 28 § 5).

in the temple of Hephaestus, as in Isocr. Trapez. § 15 ἐλόμενοι δὲ βασανιστὰς ἀπηγῆσαμεν εἰς τὸ Ἥφαιστειὸν (Dem. 33 § 18). So in Or. 36 § 16 we have seen the temple of Athene on the Acropolis mentioned as the scene of an arbitration. In any case an altar for the administration of oaths would be readily at hand, and it is unnecessary to suppose that in the present passage any special public altar is intended. Indeed, βωμός, with its synonym λίθος, does not always mean an altar, as it may also be used of a small platform or step of stone. Cf. Favorinus (quoted by Hager in Journ. of Philol. vi 21) βωμός· οὐ μόνον ἐφ' ᾧ ἔθνον ἀλλὰ καὶ κτίσμα τι ἀπλῶς καὶ ἀνάστημα, ἐφ' οὗ ἐστί βῆμα τι καὶ τεθῆναι. βωμοῖς· βαθμοῖς.

ἐξορκούντες] ἐξορκίζειν is used in Aeschin. Fals. Leg. § 85 ἐξορκίζον τοὺς συμμάχους, in the same sense as the more common ἐξορκούν (for which see Or. 45 § 58).

οὐδὲν πρὸς τὸ πρᾶγμα] sc. οὐσας, 'utterly irrelevant.'—τοῦτο, sc. Ctesias. They brought all sorts of irrelevant depositions, one of which was that Conon's son was illegitimate [and therefore Conon was not legally responsible for his actions; further that he, Ctesias, had undergone certain ill treatment which justified the outrage he committed on Ariston. P.]

τελευτῶντες—ἑαυτούς] sc. ἐπετίμων καὶ ἐμίσουν, 'at last they were indignant at and disgusted with themselves.' The speaker feeling that, by implying that his opponents had had the sense to desist, he has made too much of a concession to them, hurries over his admission, and in the next sentence cuts the matter short by the opening words ἐπειδὴ δ' οὖν, i.e. 'whether this was the real reason or no, at any rate when at last they did desist, &c.'

27. προκαλοῦνται—γράψαντες] 'with a view to gaining time, and preventing the cases for the documents from being sealed up, they put in a challenge, tendering certain slaves, whose names they wrote down, to be examined as to the assault.'

The πρόκλησις, or challenge, demanding or offering an inquiry into a special 'issue' before an Arbitrator,ⁱ very frequently related to the testimony of slaves presumably cognisant of the matter in dispute. In many cases the challenge would take the form of demanding that the opponent's slaves should be given up to torture (to elicit facts which that opponent was alleged to have concealed or misrepresented, Dict. Antiq. i p. 622 a). Harpocr. quoted on Or. 45 § 15. (See Or. 45 § 59—62, and Or. 59 § 124—5.)

In the present instance Conon offers to allow certain slaves to be examined. The plaintiff evidently refuses, and this refusal, he says, is sure to be made a strong point against him. He therefore insists that the πρόκλησις in question was a mere ruse to protract the proceedings before the Arbitrator, and that had it been a bona fide offer it would have been made at an earlier date, and with all the proper formalities (§ 27—29).

τοὺς ἐχίνους] All the legal documents (μαρτυρίαι, προκλήσεις &c.) produced during an arbitration or, indeed, any preliminary examination, e.g. an ἀνάκρισις, were enclosed in one or more caskets, or ἐχίνοι (possibly of a cylindrical shape), which were sealed up and carefully preserved, to be ready in the event of an appeal. 28. τὸν πρῶτον πατάξαντα] 'I was pointing out the defendant, to all who came to see me, as the man who struck the first blow.' In a case of assault, the question who struck the first blow would be, of course, important. Or. 47 § 40 βούλομαι τοὺς μάρτυρας παραχέσθαι οἱ εἰδὼν με πρότερον πληγέντα. ἢ δ' αἰκεία τοῦτ' ἔστω, ὅς τις ἀνδρῶν χερῶν ἀδίκων πρότερος. Cf. Or. 23 § 50, Isocr. Or. 20 § 1, Lysias, Or. 4 § 11.

ἔχων μάρτυρας πολλοὺς] To give full and legal attestation to the πρόκλησις. So also in Or. 45 § 61, and elsewhere, a πρόκλησις is attested by a μαρτυρία.

ἐξ Ἀρείου πάγου τινὰς] as special witnesses. § 25 εἰ παθεῖν τί μοι συνέβη, φόβου... ἂν ἦν ὑπόδικος. The speaker implies that, had death ensued, Conon would have been liable to a charge of φόβος ἐκ προνομίας. On the jurisdiction of the Areopagus in cases of homicide, see especially §§ 65—70 of the speech against Aristocrates, Or. 23.

Forei...ού (Dind.) cf. § 33 ad fin. προσεκαλεσάμην] 'I cited, summoned him,' served him with a πρόσκλησις, not to be confounded with προὔκαλεσάμην, 'I challenged him, put in a πρόκλησις.' Several mss actually have προσεκαλεσάμην,—a manifest blunder.—'If he did not know this serious responsibility, and if having (as he will now tell you) this plea on his side (i.e. the offer of the slave), he took no precautions against so serious a peril (i.e. the charge of murder), yet at least, when on my recovery I issued a summons against him, in our first meeting before the Arbitrator he would have shown himself willing to give up the slaves.'

§§ 30—33. He thereupon put in false evidence, alleging that certain witnesses, boon companions of his own, deposed that they found the defendant's son and myself fighting in the market-place and that the defendant did not strike me. On my own part, I produce the evidence of strangers who came up by accident, attesting that they saw me struck by the defendant. What motive could these strangers have had for giving 'false evidence' on my side?

30. ὧν ἔνεκ' ἐκκρούων ταῦτ' ἐποίη] As delay and evasion were the object (ὧν ἔνεκα) of the defendant's conduct (§ 27 ἐπὶ διακρούσει and § 29 διακρούσεως ἔνεκα), we may at first sight suspect (with Westermann) that ἐκκρούων is an interpolation; it may, however, be defended on the ground that it enables the speaker to reiterate emphatically the real motive of his opponent,—'his purpose, his evasive purpose, in so doing.' In this view, we may, if we please, punctuate the passage thus: ὧν ἔνεκα, ἐκκρούων,

ἀξιώσας] so. τὸ δίκαιον γενέσθαι, 'to have claimed to have this plea allowed him,' i.e. the plea founded on his appeal to the evidence of his slaves.

ἠλέγχεθ'] The construction is, οὗτος ἠλέγχετο ταῦτα πάντα πρὸς τῷ διαιτητῇ ἅπερ (accusative) νῦν παρ' ὑμῶν ἐλέγχεται. Thus the nominative to ἠλέγχετο is the same as that of ἐδείκνυτο in the next clause, and no change of construction is requisite.

31. ἐμβάλλεται] Or. 40 § 21 μαρτυρίαν οὐδεμίαν ἐμβεβλημένος, ib. §§ 28, 58; cf. 27 §§ 51, 54; 28 § 1; so. εἰς τὸν ἐχθρὸν (§ 27), Or. 49 § 65 ἐμβαλομένου ἐμοῦ ὄρκον εἰς τὸν ἐχθρὸν, and 45 § 6. Trans. 'puts in a false deposition endorsed with names which, I take it, you will recognise, when you hear them.'

ἐπιγράφεται] Or. 53 § 14 κλητῆρα ἐπιγράφεται. The phrase hardly means 'to give in one's list of witnesses' (L. and S.), but rather 'to have their names inscribed as witnesses.' ἐπιγράφεται, it will be noticed, is previous in order of time to ἐμβάλλεται. This ὅστερον πρότερον enables the speaker to lead up more easily to the mention of the names of the witnesses.

The following μαρτυρία is indisputably authentic, and therefore serves as a standard by which others purporting to be original depositions may be tested. See notes on Or. 35 (Lacr.) § 10 and Or. 45 § 8.

'Ίκαριεύς ... Ἀλαιεύς ... Πιεύς] The names of the corresponding demes are (1) 'Ίκαρία, belonging to the tribe Degeis, and placed by Leake p. 103 'in the southern part of Diacria, not far from the Marathonian district.' (Bursian, however, identifies the 'Ίκάριον ὄρος with the southern spur of Cithaeron towards Megara, Geogr. i 251.)

(2) Ἀλαί, a name common to two sea-coast demes, the first Ἀλαί Ἀλξωνίδες of the tribe Cecropis S.W. of Athens and N.W. of Cape Zoster; the second Ἀλαί Ἀραφηνίδες of the tribe Degeis on the east coast of Attica near Brauron.

(3) Πίθος, of the tribe Cecropis, placed by Bursian N.E. of Athens, near the southern spurs of Pentelicus (Geogr. i 345).—For Ἀρχεβιάδης see note on § 34.

μὴ πατάξαι Κόνωνα Ἀρίστωνα] The sense shows that Conon is the subject, Ariston the object. The order of the words is, in itself, inconclusive.

ὥς—λογιουμένους] The accusative absolute of the participle is here used with ὥς, as often with ὥσπερ (quasi vero): ‘imagining that you will at once give credence, instead of drawing the true inference.’

32. αὖ] is constructed with ἠθέλησαν, five lines distant.

Νικήρατος] possibly the Niceratos to whom Demosthenes pathetically refers in Or. 21 (Mid.) § 165 Νικήρατος ὁ τοῦ Νι-κίου ἀγαπητὸς παῖς, ὁ παντά-πασιν ἀσθενὴς τῷ σώματι. If so, he would be a great-grandson of the Nicias who commanded in the Sicilian expedition.

θοιμάτιον ἐκδύμενον] § 35. Lysias Or. 10 § 40 (with reference to the term λωποδότης) εἰ τις ἀπάγοι τινὰ φάσκων θοιμάτιον ἀποδεδύσθαι ἢ τὸν χιτωνίσκον ἐκδεδύσθαι, where θοιμάτιον (as here) and χιτωνίσκον are the object and not the subject.

τὰ ψευδῆ] Cf. Or. 45 § 2 ‘if they had not actually seen the assault, they would never have consented to give false evidence,’ i.e. evidence which, on that supposition, would have been false, τὰ ψευδῆ ἂν ὄντα εἰ μὴ ταῦθ' ἑώρων.

πρῶτον] adverb, to be taken with εἰσιέναι, contrasted with ὑφ' οὗ πρῶτον ἐπλήγην. 'I prosecute first the man who struck me first of all the assailants.' This seems better than to take it with ἀψάμενον, 'him who did not even touch me first.'

εἰσιέναι] eis τὸ δικαστήριον. Reiske's index shows that this verb is used in Dem. of either litigant or both, or again of the cause itself, or even with δίκην or γραφὴν as accusative after it. See note on Or. 45 § 7.

33. τί γὰρ ἂν? 'Why should I?' The mss have the interpolation, ἢ διὰ τί; probably a mere explanation of τί; as equivalent to διὰ τί; δικάζομαι ... μισῶ ... ἐπεξέρχομαι] 'Sue...abhor...prosecute (visit with vengeance),' 'he it is whom I sue and prosecute as my enemy.' The collocation of μισῶ, expressive of inward feeling, between δικάζομαι and ἐπεξέρχομαι, indicating outward acts, is curious. The latter word is probably immediately suggested by μισῶ, 'not only do I hate him in my heart, but I carry out that hatred to its practical issue by prosecuting him.'

εἰ δ' ἔσται κ.τ.λ.] 'If it comes to such a pass, if once certain persons are lost to all sense of shame and openly dare to give false evidence, and (consequently) truth has no advantage, it will be an atrocious state of things.' The simple construction would have been as follows: ἐὰν δὲ ἅπαξ ἀπανασχυντήσωσί τινες καὶ τὰ ψευδῇ αισχυντήσωσιν τινες καὶ τὰ ψευδῇ φανερῶς τολμήσωσιν μαρτυρεῖν, οὐδὲν δὲ τῆς ἀληθείας ὄφελος, φανερῶς τολμήσωσι μαρτυρεῖν, οὐδὲν ἔσται τῆς ἀληθείας ὄφελος· εἰ δὲ ἔσται τὸ πρᾶγμα τοιοῦτον, πάνδεινον ἔσται.

As it is, Demosthenes, by writing τοιοῦτον in the early part of the sentence, leads us to expect ὥστε, which however never comes; we have, instead, the clause ἐὰν κ.τ.λ., epexegetical of τοιοῦτον. Again οὐδὲν τῆς ἀληθείας ὄφελος is in sense the apodosis of ἐὰν...τὰ ψευδῇ τολμήσωσι μαρτυρεῖν, but in construction is made part of the protasis; πάνδεινον ἔσται πρᾶγμα being left to do duty as an apodosis, and πρᾶγμα necessarily repeated owing to the long interval that separates the apodosis from τὸ πρᾶγμα in the protasis.

ἀπαναισχυντήσωσι] used of unblushing effrontery. Cf. ἀπαυθαδίξεσθαι. Or. 29 § 20 τὸ μὲν πρῶτον ἀπηναισχύντει, τοῦ δὲ δαιτητοῦ κελεύοντος μαρτυρεῖν ἢ ἐξομνύειν, ἐμαρτύρησε πάνν μόλις.

34. ἀλλὰ νῆ Δία] used, as often, like at enim, to introduce emphatically an anticipated rejoinder on the part of the opponents. 'Oh but, good heavens! they are not such characters as I make them out.' The phrase may be seen in its fullest form in Or. 20 § 3 ἀλλὰ νῆ Δί' ἐκείνο ἂν ἴσως εἰποι πρὸς ταῦτα.

in the daytime, affect an austerity which is very inconsistent with their conduct when they meet together. They will unscrupulously contradict the evidence on our side; but you will remember that I rely on medical witnesses, whereas my opponents have no independent testimony, and, but for themselves, could get no evidence at all against me. People who break into houses, and assault persons in the streets, would surely have no scruple about putting down false evidence on a paltry piece of paper.

34. Ἀρχεβιάδην] This worthy, who has already been mentioned among the witnesses in §§ 7 and 31, and must not be confounded with the still less known Ἀρχεβιάδης ὁ Λαμπιτρεὺς (Or. 52 § 3), was evidently quite a 'character,' judging from Plutarch's description of him as 'a man of sour countenance who always wore a coarse cloak and had grown a prodigious beard.' Phocion x init. ἦν δέ τις Ἀρχεβιάδης ἐπικαλούμενος Λακωνιστῆς, πύγωνά τε καθεμένος ὑπερφυῆ μεγέθει καὶ τρίβωνα φορῶν αἰεὶ καὶ σκυθρωπάων· τοῦτον ἐν βουλῇ θορυβούμενος ὁ Φωκίων ἐπεκαλεῖτο τῷ λόγῳ μάρτυν ἄμα καὶ βοηθόν. ὡς δὲ ἀναστὰς ἐκείνος ἂ πρὸς χάριν ἦν τοῖς Ἀθηναίοις συνεβούλευεν, ἀψάμενος αὐτοῦ τῶν γενεῶν "ὦ Ἀρχεβιάδην" εἶπε "τί οὖν οὐκ ἀπεκείρω;" It will be observed that Plutarch's anecd-

τὸν ἐπιπόλιον] 'the grey-headed man yonder' (present in court). Aristot. de gen. anim. γ 5 § 3 ἐπιπολιούνται αἱ τρίχες 'the hair grows grizzled.' [ἐπιπόλιος is perhaps much the same as the Homeric μεσαιπόλιος, Il. xiii 361, whether the sense is 'grey on the top,' or 'half grey,' 'grizzled.' P.]

λακωνίζεν φασί] i.e. 'pretend to imitate the Laconians.' Plato, Protag. 342 β οἱ μὲν (sc. ἐν ταῖς πόλεσι λακωνίζοντες) ὥτ' αὐτὰς τε κατὰ γυννται (i.e. get their ears battered in boxing) μιμούμενοι αὐτοὺς, καὶ ἱμάκτας περιελίττονται καὶ φιλογυμναστοῦσι καὶ βραχείας ἀναβολὰς φοροῦσιν, ὥς δὴ τοῦτοις κρατοῦντας τῶν Ἑλλήνων τοὺς Λακεδαιμονίους. τρίβωνας] Sometimes mentioned as characteristic of Laconians. Plutarch, Nicias 19 τοὺς Σακελιώτας...σκώπτοντας εἰς τὸν τρίβωνα καὶ τὴν κόμην (of Gyliippus the Spartan general)...ἐν τῇ βακτηρίᾳ καὶ τῷ τρίβωνι τὸ σύμβολον καὶ τὸ ἀξίωμα τῆς Σπάρτης καθορῶντες... Athenaeus xii 50, p. 535 (quoting the historian Douris) Πανσανίας ὁ τῶν Σπαρτιατῶν βασιλεὺς, καταθέμενος τὸν πάτριον τρίβωνα, τὴν Περσικὴν ἐνεδύετο στολήν. [At the same time, the regular dress of the old Athenian dicast or ecclesiast was the τρίβων and the βακτηρία, both often mentioned in Aristoph., e.g. Vesp. 33. P.]

ἀπλᾶς ὑποδέδενται] 'wear single-soled shoes,' sc. ἐμβάδας. Harpocration ἀπλᾶς Δημ. κατὰ Κόνωνος. Καλλιστρατὸς φησὶ τὰ μονόπελμα τῶν ὑποδημάτων οὕτω καλεῖσθαι. Στράττις Λημνομέδρα 'ὑποδήματα σαντῶ πρίσθαι τῶν ἀπλῶν.' Bekker, Anecd. 205 ἀπλαῖ· ὑποδήματος εἶδος Λακωνικοῦ κ.τ.λ. They had only one thickness of sole and were apparently more like slippers than shoes. (Becker, Charicles, p. 449.) There was also a more elaborate kind of shoes known as Λακωνικαί (Ar. Vesp. 1158). For the general drift of the sentence cf. Isaeus Or. 5 § 11 οὐκ ἐπιδείξει καὶ ἐγκαλεῖ αὐτῷ ὅτι ἐμβάδας καὶ τριβώνια φορεῖ ὥσπερ ἀδικοῦμενός τι εἰ ἐμβάδας Κηφισόδοτος φορεῖ, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἀδικῶν ὅτι ἀφελόμενος αὐτὸν τὰ δυντα πένητα πεποίηκεν.

ἡφθαι] passive, referring to Ariston, like τυπτόμενον just before. ‘ἡμμαι is pf. mid. in Soph. Tr. 1009 (ἡπται) and Pl. Phaedr. 260 (ἡφθαι)’ (we may add Dem. Or. 51 § 5 ἡφθαι τῆς τμήρους τούτους); ‘pf. passive in Eur. Hel. 107, Ar. Pl. 801 and Thuc. iv 100.’ Veitch, Greek Verbs.

ἐπίλαβε τὸ ὕδωρ] Or. 45 § 8; 57 § 21; Lysias Or. 23 §§ 4, 8, 11, 13, 15; Isaeus Or. 2 § 34; 3 § 12. The κλεψύδρα (Becker's Charicles, p. 212 n.) was always stopped by the attendant in charge of it (ὁ ἐφ' ὕδωρ) during the recitation of documents. The flow of the water was stopped by placing the hand on the top of the αὐλίσκος, or short neck, of the κλεψύδρα, Aristotle, Const. of Athens, col. 33—4 ἐπιλαμβάνει τὸν αὐλίσκον, ἐπειδὴν δὲν.....νόμον ἢ μαρτυρίαν...ὅπὸ τοῦ γραμμ[ατέως ἀναγιγ[ώσκεισθαι]. It was only the duration of the speech proper that was reckoned in the allowance of time measured by the κλεψύδρα. Or. 36 ends with the words ἐξέρα τὸ ὕδωρ 'pour out the water,' implying that the orator had found it unnecessary to avail himself of the full allowance of time. The Orators frequently used ὕδωρ in the sense of 'time allotted' for a speech, e.g. ἐν τῷ ἐμῷ ὕδατι' ἐν μικρῷ μέρει τοῦ παντός ὕδατος. So Or. 41 fin. πρὸς ὀλίγον ὕδωρ ἀναγκαζόμενος λέγειν, infra § 44; 40 § 38; 44 § 45; 53 § 3; 59 § 20; Deinarchus Or. 1 § 114; 2 § 6. Aeschin.

When Goethe visited Venice, in Oct. 1786, and went to see a trial in the Ducal Palace, he found a custom in force singularly similar to that implied in the text. Whenever the advocate spoke, the time that elapsed was measured with an hour-glass, which was laid on its side while the depositions were read: 'so lange nämlich der Schreiber liest, so lange läuft die Zeit nicht' etc. (Italiänische Reise, p. 68 Düntzer).

§§ 38—41. I must warn you that Conon will try to impose upon you by swearing by the lives of his own sons and by other strange imprecations. His recklessness about oaths is proved by what I have heard of the profanity of his youthful days; and surely Conon, who would think nothing of perjury, is not to be credited in comparison with myself, who, so far from swearing by the lives of my children, would not swear at all, except under compulsion, and even then, only in a lawful manner. Such an oath I was willing to take for the truth's sake; and, in self-defence against the perjury of my opponent, I challenged him to accept my offer to take the oath, and I now solemnly swear that Conon whom I now prosecute really assaulted and brutally maltreated me.

38. παραστησάμενον τοὺς παῖδας] The practice of exciting the compassion of the jury by bringing the children into court is often referred to, e.g. Or. 21 § 99 παῖδια γὰρ παραστήσεται καὶ κλαῖσει καὶ τοῖτοις αὐτὸν ἐξαιτήσεται, and Hyperides, Euxenipp. ad fin. ἐγὼ μὲν οὖν σοὶ Εὐξένιππε βεβοήθηκα ὅσα εἶχον. λοιπὸν δ' ἐστὶ δεῖσθαι τῶν δικαστῶν καὶ τοὺς φίλους παρακαλεῖν καὶ τὰ παῖδια ἀναβιβάζεσθαι (see especially Aristophanes' ridicule of the custom in Vespæ 568—74 and 276—8). But in the present case a still more sensational effect is to be produced by Conon's laying his hands upon his children's heads and praying that the direst curses may come down upon them, if his statements are false.

κατὰ τούτων ὁμείσθαι] 'to swear by them,—by their lives.' κατὰ implies the basis on which the oath rests [or, perhaps, hostile action directed against the object sworn by. We find a curious parallel in a charge made as follows against Demosthenes himself by Deinarchus, Or. 1 § 71 ποῦ τοῦτ' ἐστὶ δίκαιον... τοὺς μὲν νόμους προλέγειν... παιδοποιεῖσθαι κατὰ τοὺς νόμους... σὲ δὲ τοὺς οὐ γεγενημένους νιεῖς σαιτῷ προσποιεῖσθαι παρὰ τοὺς νόμους τῶν ἐν ταῖς κρίσεσιν ἕνεκα γιγνομένων ὁρκῶν;

ἀνυπόστατα] not exactly 'intolerable' but 'irresistible,' 'impossible to withstand.' The most upright of men and those who are least likely to tell a falsehood themselves (the jury for instance) are most likely to be deceived by such asseverations (ὑπὸ τῶν τοιούτων sc. τολμημάτων).

be the right reading; others have κατεσθίειν, which makes good sense and is commonly ac-neither can be considered probable. Baiter leaves out the govern 'Εκαταῖα as well as ὄρνεις. Westermann suggests κλέπτειν but follows Baier. κατακαλεῖν may perhaps be accounted for by supposing that 'Εκαταῖα or καταῖα was erroneously written twice by an early copyist; a subsequent copyist might alter this into the nearest verb he could think of, κατακαλεῖν; this would be seen to be wrong by a still later writer, who would substitute the intelligible word κατεσθλεῖν.

τοὺς ὄρνεις τοὺς ἐκ τῶν χοίρων] The mss have τὰς ὄρνεις (or ὄρνις) τὰς ἐκ τῶν χωρῶν (or χορῶν) αἱς. But birds are out of place in an expiatory sacrifice prior to a public assembly, and the use of young pigs for this purpose is distinctly attested by ancient authorities (e.g. Schol. on Ar. Ach. 44). We must therefore accept the certain emendations given in the text, and originally proposed by Hemsterhuis (in his note on Lucian above referred to).

Harpocr. (and Photius) καθάρσιον· Αλοχλῆνης κατὰ Τιμάρχου (§ 23, speaking of the ἐκκλησία, ἐπειδὴν τὸ καθάρσιον περινεχθῆ), ἔθος ἦν Ἀθήνησι καθαίρειν τὴν ἐκκλησίαν καὶ τὰ θέατρα καὶ ὄλως τὰς τοῦ δήμου συνόδους μικροῖς πάνυ χοιριδίοις ἅπερ ὠνόμαζον καθάρσια· τοῦτο δ' ἐποίουν οἱ λεγόμενοι περιστάρχοι, ὅπερ ὠνομάσθησαν οὕτως ἥτοι ἀπὸ τοῦ περιστεύειν ἢ ἀπὸ τῆς ἐστίας. 40. οὐ δὴ... οὐδὲ πολλοῦ δεῖ] Here, as usual in this phrase, οὐδὲ reiterates the preceding negation (οὐ δὴ), but does not negative πολλοῦ δεῖ although closely pronounced with it. (Cf. Fals. Leg. § 33 οὐ γὰρ... τὰ πράγματα ἔστι φαῦλα... οὐδὲ πολλοῦ δεῖ, with Shilleto's note.) We have an apparent exception to this rule in Or. 20 Lept. § 20 φανήσεται γὰρ οὐδὲ πολλοῦ δεῖ τῆς γενησομένης ἀξιοαλοχλῆνης, where there is no preceding negative expressed. The exception may however be explained on the supposition that φανήσεται is ironical and therefore implies a negative: οὐ γὰρ φανήσεται τῆς γενησομένης ἀξιοαλοχλῆνης, οὐδὲ πολλοῦ δεῖ.

οὐ δὴ κ.τ.λ.] A very elegant and idiomatic passage: 'Conon then, as a character such as I have described, is not to be trusted on oath; far from it, indeed. No! the man who would not take even an oath that he intends to observe, and would not for a moment think of doing so on the lives of his children,...but would rather suffer anything than that,—and who, even when constrained, will take none but a customary oath,—I say, such a man is more to be trusted than one who swears by his sons and offers to undergo the fiery ordeal.’ P.]

ὁμηδ'—μελλήσας] The mss have ὦν μὴ νομίζετε (or νομίζεται) after κατὰ δὲ δὴ παίδων. There are two objections to this: (i) the plaintiff describes himself as one who is ‘reluctant to swear even to the truth’ (μηδ' εὐορκον μηδὲν ἂν ὁμόσας), whereas in § 41 he publicly swears to having been assaulted by the defendant; (ii) an oath by the lives of one's children is described as ‘contrary to usage’ (ὦν μὴ νομίζετε), whereas this very oath is elsewhere attributed to the mother of Demosthenes. Or. 29 §§ 26, 33, 54, 56 ἡ μήτηρ κατ' ἐμοῦ καὶ τῆς ἀδελφῆς...πίστω ἡτέλλησεν ἐπιθεῖναι...ἦν μηδὲς ὑμῶν νομίζετω καθ' ἡμῶν ποτ' ἂν ὁμνύναι ταῦτ' ἂν ἐθέλειν, εἰ μὴ σαφῶς ᾔδει

It was with a view to removing these objections that Dobree placed ὦν μὴ νομίζεται after μηδὲν ἂν ὁμόσας.

If an easier alteration is preferred, we may retain the order as it stands in the mss, simply inserting μηδὲν after ὦν μὴ νομίζετε, and accounting for its loss by its similarity to the subsequent μηδ' ἂν. The mss vary between μηδ' ἂν and μηδὲν, and this proposal combines the two alternative readings. The sentence would then run thus: ὁμηδ' εὐορκον μηδὲν ἂν ὁμόσας, κατὰ δὲ δὴ παίδων, ὦν μὴ νομίζετε μηδὲν μηδ' ἂν μελλήσας. Thus ὦν μὴ νομίζετε depends on μηδὲν and does not refer to παίδων, the sense of the second clause being that Ariston would never dream of taking any such oath, by his children's lives, as would be contrary to general usage. Below, he describes himself as ὁμνύων ὡς νόμιμον.

καὶ ὅτι οὖν παθὼν πρότερον] 'Would submit to anything sooner than that,' i.e. rather than swear by an oath contrary to the country's use, or by the lives of his children.

The whole sentence is intended to be descriptive of the character of a man who has a solemn regard for the obligations of an oath; hence the use of μή. A person of such a character, says the plaintiff, is more trustworthy than one who is ready to take any oath you please. The characters contrasted are of course those of the plaintiff and defendant respectively, but this is only implied until we reach the next sentence, ἐγὼ...ὁ δικαιότερόν σου πιστευθεὶς ἂν, when the contrast is brought home to the case at issue.

καὶ διὰ τοῦ πυρός] It is doubtful whether we can explain this of any ordeal by fire like that referred to in Soph. Antig. 264 (ἤμεν δ' ἔτοιμοι καὶ μύθους αἰρεῖν χερσῶν, καὶ πῦρ διέρπειν καὶ θεοὺς ὀρκωμοτεῖν), and possibly implied in Ar. Lysistr. 133 ἀλλ' ἀλλ' ὅ τι βούλει, καὶ με χρὴ, διὰ τοῦ πυρός ἐθέλω βαδίζειν, which however may be only a strong metaphor expressive of readiness to endure any amount of torture. Sometimes διὰ πυρός is used of 'braving the extremest perils,' 'going through fire and water,' as in Xen. Symp. iv 16 ἐγὼ γ' οὖν μετὰ Κλεινίου καὶ διὰ πυρός λείην, and Oec. xxi 7 ἀκολουθητέον...καὶ διὰ πυρός καὶ διὰ παντὸς κινδύνου (L and S s. v. πῦρ).

In the present passage διὰ τοῦ πυρός possibly contains an allusion to some strange form of self-devotion, one of the ἀραι δεινὰ καὶ χαλεπὰ obscurely hinted at in § 38. G. H. Schaefer simply says: 'vertam, vel dum ara ardet,' i.e. 'one who swears by his children even while the flame is burning on the altar,' and C. R. Kennedy renders the words: 'and before the burning altar.' (Cf. Or. 43 § 14 λαβόντες τὴν ψῆφον καομένων τῶν ἱερῶν.)

This is hardly satisfactory, and it is not improbable that the text is corrupt and that we should read καὶ διὰ τοῦ πυρός λόντος, where the participle would easily have been lost by homoeoteleuton with ὁμνύοντος.

πιστευθεὶς ἂν] See on § 1 ad fin. For the passive, formed just as if the active were directly transitive, and took the accusative, cf. § 5 παροινουμένους and § 2 παραινέσθαι.

ἠθέλησ' ὁμόσαι ταυτί] The general drift of this oath must have been given by the πρόκλησις which was read to the jury; it is also indicated in the asseverations of § 41.

It is clear that this Challenge was refused by the defendant. The plaintiff would therefore be able to point to this refusal as a fact in his own favour, just as the defendant would in the case of the πρόκλησις tendered by him and rejected by the plaintiff (§ 27).—In the next line καὶ emphasizes ὅτιοῦν.

κατεπιорκησόμενος] the future middle which, if retained, must be taken as passive in sense, 'inasmuch as I am determined not to lose the case by your perjury.' [Or, 'as one who had no idea of having the case

What applies above to private orations of great public importance, applies mutatis mutandis to the present speech, which was probably listened to by a considerable body of citizens, besides the forty δικασταὶ before whom this case was apparently tried (see Introduction p. lxi).

ἐξώλης] Or. 49 § 66; Fals. Leg. § 172 ἐξώλης ἀπολοίμην καὶ πρώλης el..., and in § 70 (after quoting the solemn form of imprecation used before the meetings of the βουλή and ἐκκλησία) the orator adds: εἴ-χεσθ' ἐξώλη ποιεῖν αὐτὸν καὶ γένος καὶ οἰκίας.

Ariston is here taking an oath almost as strong as that which he finds fault with in Conon; but he would probably plead that he was only swearing 'in the customary manner,' ὡς νόμιμον (§ 40).

διαρραγῇ] sc. λέγων ὡς ἐπιorkῶ, 'not even if Conon burst with saying that I forswear myself'—or (as we should put it)—'say so till he bursts.' De Cor. § 21 ὁ σὸς κοινωνὸς, οὐχ ὁ ἐμός, οὐδ' ἂν σὺ διαρραγῇς ψευδόμενος.

EXCURSUS (A).

On the defective verb τύπτω (§§ 4, 25, 32, 35, &c.).

The verb τύπτω forms a familiar paradigm in almost all the elementary Greek Grammars in ordinary use, where, as every schoolboy knows, it is conjugated at full length with its three perfect tenses, its five futures, and its six aorists; and it must be admitted that, for the purposes of a paradigm, the verb in question is in several respects admirably adapted. Had the selection fallen on a verb ending in -ω with a vowel for the last letter of its stem, e.g. λύ-ω, or τιμά-ω, our model verb would have had one aorist only in each voice, ἔλυσα, ἐλυσάμην, ἐλύθην; ἐτίμησα, ἐτιμησάμην, ἐτιμήθην. Had a verbum purum ending in -μι been taken, e.g. φη-μί, δίδω-μι, ἴσθη-μι, the beginner would have had to face a very complex conjugation at the very outset of his task. τύπτω is unencumbered with the special irregularities of verbs ending in -μι, and has the advantage of two theoretically possible aorists in each voice; indeed, as Veitch has pointed out, it is 'one of the very few verbs that have the second aorist active and passive in actual use' (though the former is very rare, while in Attic prose neither is ever found). Again, as compared with some other verba impura, with a consonant for their characteristic letter, it has this advantage; that the stem-vowel remains unchanged throughout, and is thus identical in (for instance) the aorist and present participle alike (τυπ-είς and τυπ-των), whereas in λείπω, φαίνω, τήκω as compared with ἔλιπ-ον, ἐφάν-ην, ἐτάκ-ην, the stem-vowels which appear in the aorist have suffered modification in the present; also the consonantal relations between the different tenses are simpler than in the case of some other verbs; thus, while β in $\epsilon\text{-}\beta\lambda\acute{\alpha}\beta\text{-}\eta\nu$ becomes π in $\beta\lambda\acute{\alpha}\pi\text{-}\tau\text{-}\omega$, no such alteration is necessary in passing from the $\text{-}\tau\nu\pi\text{-}$ of the second aorist to the strengthened form $\tau\nu\pi\tau\text{-}$ of the present.

The verb is not without an interest of its own in the history of grammar; and though it may be rash to conjecture whether it owed its first selection to the grim humour of some plagosus Orbilius of old times, intent on bringing each tense's meaning home to his pupils' memories by the help of his ferule, it may be interesting to note that this particular paradigm is found in the early Greek Grammars which appeared in Italy at the revival of learning, as for instance in the Erotemata of Chrysoloras, a distinguished scholar, who (in the dedication of a copy in my possession, printed at Venice at the Aldine press in 1517) is described as *Manuel Chrysoloras, qui primus Iuniorum reportavit in Italia literas græcas. The paradigm may also be traced still further back to the Canons of Theodosius, an Alexandrine grammarian of the age of Constantine the Great, who expounds all the parts, regardless of usage, and at considerable length (viz. on pp. 1008—1044 of Θεοδοσίου γραμματικῷ εἰσαγωγικοὶ κανόνες περὶ κλίσεως ῥημάτων in Bekker's Anecdota Graeca, vol. III). The Grammar of Theodosius is in its turn founded on that of a more celebrated Greek scholar, Dionysius the Thracian, who taught at Rome in B.C. 80. The τέχνη γραμματικὴ of the latter is a short work, occupying only pp. 629—643 in Bekker's Anecdota Graeca, vol. II; it was a standard text-book for many centuries and is the original basis of all subsequent grammars. I quote a few words from chap. xv, which bear on our present subject: διαθέσεις δὲ εἰσι τρεῖς, ἐνέργεια, πάθος, μεσότης· ἐνέργεια μὲν οἷον τύπτω, πάθος δὲ οἷον τύπτομαι, μεσότης δὲ ἢ ποτὲ μὲν ἐνέργειαν, ποτὲ δὲ πάθος παριστώσα, οἷον πέποιθα, διέφθορα, ἐποιησάμην, ἐγραψάμην*. Shortly after, he proceeds: ἀριθμοὶ δὲ τρεῖς, ἐνικός, δυϊκὸς καὶ πληθυντικός· ἐνικός μὲν οἷον τύπτω, δυϊκὸς δὲ οἷον τύπτετον, πληθυντικός δὲ οἷον τύπτομεν· πρόσωπα δὲ τρία, πρῶτον, δεύτερον, τρίτον· πρῶτον μὲν οἷον τύπτω, δεύτερον οἷον τύπτεις, τρίτον οἷον τύπτει.

* On Chrysoloras, see Hody, de viris illustribus cap. ii, and Voigt's Humanismus i² 225, 234; and cf. Hallam's Literature of Europe i 99 ed. 1854, where the Erotemata is described as 'the first, and long the only, channel to a knowledge of Greek, save oral instruction,' and Mullinger's History of the University of Cambridge, i pp. 391—396, where it is called 'the Greek Grammar of the first century of the Renaissance.' 'It served Reuchlin for a model at Orleans, was used by Linacre at Oxford and Erasmus at Cambridge, and long continued to hold its ground against formidable rivals,' p. 395. The date of his arrival in Italy was about 1396.—The Aldine edition above referred to is of course a reprint. It was first printed in 1484. Hallam i p. 180 ascribes to about the year 1480 a small quarto tract of great rarity, entitled coniugationes verborum Graecae, Daventria noviter extremo labore collectae et impressae, containing nothing but $\tau\acute{o}\pi\tau\omega$ in all its voices and tenses, with Latin explanations.

But, however well this verb may be adapted as a typical form for the beginner, and however interesting it may be as a tradition of the earlier grammarians, it cannot be too clearly understood that very few of the tenses are really used by the best Greek authors. The tenses given in the paradigm are all formed regularly on the principles of analogy alone, regardless of the opposite principles of anomaly which prevail in the usage of the Greek writers themselves. In Attic Prose none of the tenses given in the grammars are found except the present and imperfect, active and passive, τύπτω and ἔτυπτον, τύπτομαι and ἐτυπτόμην. The future active is not τύψω but τυπτήσω, and the aorists in use are borrowed from other verbs, and are really ἐπάταξα and ἐπλήγην. ἔτυψα is never found in Attic Prose, and the reference to Lysias, fragment 10, 2, given in Veitch's Greek Verbs, and repeated, apparently without verification, in Liddell and Scott's Lexicon, supplies us with no real exception. The passage, when examined, proves to be part of an exposition of a possibly genuine speech of Lysias, written by the anonymous author of the προλεγόμενα τῶν στάσεων (Rhetores Graeci VII p. 15 Walz, cf. Spengel's Artium Scriptores p. 137). The words used by this late writer are: ἐγκύμονά τις ἔτυψε κατὰ γαστρὸς καὶ κρίνεται φόνου, where Lysias himself would undoubtedly have written ἐπάταξεν, as is proved by a passage in Or. 13 § 71, ὁ Θρασύβουλος τύπτει τὸν Φρύνιχον καὶ καταβάλλει πατάξας. The following passages will further illustrate the prose usage of this defective verb, Lysias, Or. 4 § 15, πότερον ἐπλήγην ἢ ἐπάταξα; id. Or. 1 §§ 25—27, where πατάξας κατάβαλλω is followed by the corresponding passive forms πληγὴς κατέπεσεν, Dem. Or. 4 § 40, ὁ πληγὴς κἂν ἐτέρωσε πατάξῃς, Thuc. VIII 92, ὁ Φρύνιχος πληγὴς followed by ὁ πατάξας διέφυγεν. Again in Plato's Laws, p. 879 D—E, we have τύπτοντα and τύπτειν followed by πατάξαι, and soon after, τύπτει τῇ μάστιγι followed by ὅσας ἂν αὐτὸς πατάξῃ: so in p. 880 B, εἰάν τις τύπτῃ τὸν πρεσβύτερον...τῇ τοῦ πληγέντος ἡλικίᾳ, and in p. 882 the last two forms occur twice over. Cf. Aristot. Eth. V 5 § 4, ὅταν ὁ μὲν πληγῇ ὁ δὲ πατάξῃ, Rhet. I 15 § 29, ὁμοῖα καὶ εἰ ἰσχυρὸς ἀσθενὴ πατάξαι ἢ πληγῆναι προκαλέσεται, Eth. V 5 § 4, εἰ ἀρχὴν ἔχων ἐπάταξεν, οὐ δεῖ ἀντι-πληγῆναι, καὶ εἰ ἀρχοντα ἐπάταξεν, οὐ πληγῆναι μόνον δεῖ ἀλλὰ καὶ κολασθῆναι. Rhet.

Elench.* p. 168 a 6, ἂν τις τύπτῃ τοῦτον καὶ τοῦτον, ἄνθρωπον ἀλλ' οὐκ ἀνθρώπους τυπήσει, and Meteorologica, p. 368 a 18, τύπτων... τύπτον... τύπτεται, p. 371 b 10, ἥ μέλλει πατάξεν κινεῖται πρὶν πληγήναι, while three lines below we find δ' ἐὰν πατάξῃ.—Among other parts similarly borrowed we have πέπληγα, πέπληγμαι, πεπλήξομαι and πληγήσομαι.—So in Latin ferio, percussi, etc.

But one of the best studies on this point of usage is the Speech of Demosthenes κατὰ Κόνωνος, where we find the following forms; in § 18 τύπτειν, in § 17 τύπτων, in § 4 ἔτυπτον, in §§ 32 and 35 τυπτόμενον, with the verbal τυπτητός in § 44. Again in § 31 we have πατάξει (not τύψαι or πληξαι), and in § 33 ἐπλήγην (not ἐπατάχθην, or ἐτύπην, much less ἐτύφθην). Further in § 25 πατάξαντι stands side by side with τύπτειν; and lastly we have the phrases πηγὰς ἐνέτειναν (§ 5) and εἰληφέναι καὶ δεδωκέναι πηγὰς (§ 14), which assist in making up for the defective tenses. It is reserved for the late writer who composed the Argument to use the unclassical form τετυπτήσθαι.

For the usage of this verb in Attic Verse, see Veitch's excellent book on Greek Verbs, where it will be noticed that almost the only part used besides those found in Prose is τυπείς; the student should also read the interesting criticisms of Cobet in pp. 330—343 of his Variae lectiones, and the corresponding passage in Rutherford's New Phrynichus, p. 257 ff.

The following is a conspectus of the parts in use in Attic Greek, classified under the two meanings of the verb:—

(a) I strike or wound, L. ferio, vulnero. (b) I thrash, L. caedo, verbero.

EXCURSUS (B).

On the quantity of ἔμπνος (Or. 54 § 12).

In Soph. Phil. 1378, the phrase ἔμπνος βάσις is used with reference to the festering foot of Philoctetes, but the position of the words, at the end of an iambic line, leaves the quantity undetermined. This may however be ascertained (i) by the accent of the word from which it is derived, viz. πύον, which according to the express statement of the grammarian Arcadius should never be written πῶον; (ii) by the fact that Empedocles (336, πύον ἐπλετο λευκόν) makes the first syllable of πύον short. We may compare the Latin pūter where the corresponding syllable is short, although in pūteo and pūtidus (as in πύθω), it is long. We may further notice that the adjective and its derivatives occur (as might be expected) not unfrequently in Hippocrates and the medical writers; and that one of these, Galen (lib. xiii p. 876), quotes in full an Elegiac poem in which Andromachus the elder (fl. 50 A.D.), in describing the virtues of his potent antidote, or θηριακή δι' ἐχιδνῶν, has the following couplet, which determines the quantity of the word:

 πινομένη πολλοὺς μέχρις ἐπ' ἡελίους.

Hence we conclude that the lexicons of Liddell and Scott (ed. 6*) and of Pape are unwarranted in marking the penultimate as long;—an oversight which does not occur in the fourth edition of the former lexicon, and is doubtless due to a confusion between the quantities of τὸ πῦον, the Latin pūs, and ὁ πῦός, the Lat. colostra (or beestings).

EXCURSUS (C).

On the meaning of αὐτολήκυθος (Or. 54 § 14).

The exact meaning of this word is difficult to determine, and the Grammarians content themselves with giving us a wide choice of conflicting explanations. Harpocration, for instance, has the following article.

Αὐτολήκυθοι: Δημοσθένης κατὰ Κόνωνος, (1) ἦτοι ἀντὶ τοῦ εὐζώνους τινὰς καὶ ἐτοίμους πᾶν ὅτιοῦν ποιεῖν καὶ ὑπομένειν, (2) ἢ ἀντὶ τοῦ πένητας καὶ μηδὲν ἄλλο κεκτημένους ἢ ληκύθους, (3) ἢ αὐτουργούς, (4) ἢ ἀντὶ τοῦ εἰς πληγὰς ἐτοίμους καὶ οἷον τύπτοντας καὶ μαστιγοῦντας καὶ ὑβρίζοντας, (5) ἢ λέγοι ἂν τοὺς ἐκ προχείρου διδόντας ἀργύριον....

He further states that Menander used the word in two of his comedies, and attempts to support the last of the above interpretations by showing from Diphilus, that money was occasionally carried about in the λήκυθος: and the last but one by appealing to Menander for the fact that the thong or strap (ιμάς), by which the λήκυθος was suspended about the person, might be detached from the flask and used as a whip. None of these five explanations is convincing, and the last two are almost certainly wrong. An indication of the true meaning may however be gathered from the second. Any respectable Athenian in going to the public baths would be naturally attended by his slave carrying the master's λήκυθος or oil-flask, &c. Compare, for the Roman custom, Varro R. R. i 55 § 4 (olea) dominum in balnea sequitur. The fraternity of young men, alluded to in the text, may have gone on the principle of discarding the attendance of their slaves and carrying their own λήκυθοι, either to be free from the slight restraint which the company of their servants might put upon their practical jokes and wild escapades, or by way of assuming a lower grade of respectability than their birth would warrant, and availing themselves of that disguise either as a mere freak of youthful pleasantry or as a cloak for acts of outrage and disorder. If this view is tenable, the general sense of the title may be kept up by some such rendering as 'gentleman beggars,' 'amateur tramps.'

This explanation is in part confirmed by one of the guesses recorded in Bekker's Anecdota Graeca 465, 17 where αὐτολήκυθος is explained ὁ πένης ἀπὸ τοῦ ἑαυτῷ τὰς ληκύθους εἰς τὰ βαλανεία εἰσφέρειν. Again, Hesychius has αὐτολήκυθοι· οἱ πένητες, οἱ μόνην λήκυθον ἔχοντες· ἢ δι' ἑαυτῶν βαστάζοντες τὴν λήκυθον, οὐ δι' οἰκετῶν. Pollux, x 62, refers to the passage in Demosthenes, and quotes a parallel from the comic poet Antiphanes, Meineke

Com. Graec. fragm. III 7, καὶ αὐτοληκύθους δέ τινας Δημοσθένης ἐν τῷ κατὰ Κόνωνος ὀνομάζει οὓς σαφέστερον ἂν τις ἐν τῷ Ἀντιφάνους Ἀθάμαντι κεκληῖσθαι λέγοι·

ἀξυνακόλουθος ξηρὸς αὐτολήκυθος.

As another nickname attaching to one of these Clubs we have Τριβαλλοὶ in § 39; and in Athenaeus a coterie of Athenian wits is mentioned in the time of Philip of Macedon and therefore nearly coincident in date with the Clubs in the text; these wits or γελωτοποιοί went by the name of 'the sixty' (Athen. xiv 614). Cf. also Lysias, fragm. 53, κατὰ Κινησίον: οὐ μετὰ τούτου ποτὲ Ἀπολλοφάνης καὶ Μυσταλίδης καὶ Λυσίθεος συνεισιτιῶντο, μίαν ἡμέραν ταξάμενοι τῶν ἀποφράδων, ἀντὶ νομηνιαστῶν κακοδαιμονιστὰς σφίσιν αὐτοῖς τοῦνομα θέμενοι;

EXCURSUS (D).

On the Τριβαλλοὶ of Or. 54 § 39.

The Triballi were a wild Thracian people occupying the region north of the range of Haemus and south of the Danube, now known as Servia. Their character is often described in unfavourable terms: thus Isocrates (de pace § 50) speaks of their δυσγένεια as opposed to the εὐγένεια of Athens, and (Panath. § 227) denounces them as leagued against all their neighbours: ἅπαντές φασιν ὁμονοεῖν μὲν (τοὺς Τριβαλλοὺς) ὡς οὐδένας ἄλλους ἀνθρώπους, ἀπολλύναι δ' οὐ μόνον τοὺς ὁμόρους καὶ τοὺς πλησίον οἰκοῦντας ἀλλὰ καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους ὅσων ἂν ἐφικέσθαι δυνηθῶσιν. Lastly the comic poet Alexis (who flourished in B.C. 356, a date but slightly anterior to the present speech), attacking, apparently, some rude and uncivilised custom, describes it as too barbarous even for the Triballi, οὐδ' ἐν Τριβαλλοῖς ταῦτά γ' ἐστὶν ἔθνος | οὐ φασι τὸν θύοντα τοῖς κεκλημένοις | δείξαντ' ἰδεῖν τὸ δειπνον, εἰς τὴν αὐριον | πωλεῖν ἀδείπνοις ἄπερ ἔθγκ' αὐτοῖς ἰδεῖν (ap. Athen. xv p. 671). Cf. Ar. Aves 1530.

According to the speaker, Conon and his two companions were, as mere striplings (μειράκια), known by a name borrowed from these lawless Triballi. Now if the speech was (as is very probable) delivered in B.C. 341 (see p. lxii) when Conon was rather more than 50 years of age (§ 22), he would be a μειράκιον, or about 15 years of age, 35 years previous, viz. B.C. 376. By a coincidence, which has apparently remained unnoticed, this brings us to the very year in which the wild Triballi crossed the Haemus with a strong force, ravaged the southern coast of Thrace near Abdera and were forced to retreat by the Athenian commander Chabrias (Diodor. xv 36). The name of the barbarous tribe would therefore be on the lips of all Athens during the youth of Conon and his friends, and would readily find currency as a slang term of the day.

We may compare with the Τριβαλλοί, the disorderly Clubs to which Conon's son belonged, the ἰθύφαλλοι and αὐτολήκυθοι of § 14; and we may suggest in passing that the special form of the appellation, apart from its general applicability, probably turned on a play of words (e.g. τρίβειν τοὺς ἄλλους or others more or less obvious). Cf. Photius s.v. (quoting this passage) οἱ ἐν τοῖς βαλανείοις ἀναγώγως διατριβόμενοι· οἱ δὲ τοὺς εἰκαίους καὶ τοὺς βίους κατατρίβοντες. Hesychius (inter alia) οἱ ἐπὶ τὰ δειπνα ἑαυτοὺς καλοῦντες. The Scholía on Aeschines i § 52 (τούσδε τοὺς ἀγρίους ἄνδρας) couple together Τριβαλλοί (cf. Plin. N. H. vii 2) and Κένταυροι as infamous appellatives, and

 Τριβαλλοποπανόθρεπτα μειρακύλλια.

As an exact parallel to the Triballi in the text and the other clubs already mentioned, we have in English literature the 'nocturnal fraternity of the Mohock-club,—a name borrowed from a sort of cannibals in India' (i.e. North America). The practical jokes of that 'worthy society of brutes,' and 'well-disposed savages,' will be familiar to the readers of the Spectator (Nos. 324, 332 and 347; anno 1712). Cf. also Gay's Trivia III 325—328:

Who has not heard the Scourer's midnight fame?
 Who has not trembled at the Mohock's name?
 Was there a watchman took his hourly rounds,

§§ 1, 2. There is really no greater nuisance, gentlemen, than a greedy neighbour, as I have found to my cost in the case of the plaintiff Callicles. He has set his heart upon my property, and has therefore by every legal means, direct or indirect, made me the victim of a vexatious persecution.

Though I am no speaker myself, yet, if the court will give me their attention, the facts themselves will prove the baseness of the present action.

1. οὐκ ἦν ἄρ'—τυχεῖν] For οὐκ ἦν ἄρα, 'there is not really after all,' cf. Soph. O. C. 1697 πόθος καὶ κακῶν ἄρ' ἦν τις, and for this use of ἦν, especially with ἄρα, to express a fact which is and always has been the same, see the examples given in Liddell and Scott, s.v. εἰμί, F.

For the general sense, cf. Hesiod's Works and Days 345 πῆμα κακὸς γέλτων, and esp. Aristot. Rhet. II 21 § 15 εἰ τις γέλτοσι τύχοι κεχρημένος... φαύλοις, ἀποδέξαιτ' ἂν τοῦ εἰπόντος ὅτι οὐδὲν γειτονίας χαλεπώτερον.

'The plaintive reflexion, οὐκ ἦν—τυχεῖν, harmonizes with the naïve and expostulatory tone of the speech, and at the same time gives with refreshing novelty of form the common disclaimer of litigiousness.' Kirk's Demosthenic Style in the Private Orations, p. 24.

συκοφαντῶν] 'by his vexatious litigation, his petty persecution.' The word is always difficult to render, and we have generally to be guided by the context for the exact equivalent in English.

infinitive, most commonly takes an accusative, e.g. § 34 τὸν ἀνεψιών κατεσκεύασε, Or. 54 § 14.

2. σκευωρίας] 'intrigue, jobbery.' Or. 36 § 33 πλάσμα καὶ σκευώρημα.

δίκας ἐρήμους—κατεδιητήσατο] 'got two awards (in arbitration) decided against me by default (for non-appearance).' Or. 21 (Mid.) §§ 84, 85 (Στράτων ὁ δαιτητής) ὡς οὐτ' ἐγὼ συνεχώρουν οὐθ' οὗτος (Midias) ἀπάντα, τῆς δ' ὥρας ἐγίγνετο ὀψέ, κατεδιητήσεν. ἤδη δ' ἐσπέρας οὐσης καὶ σκότους ἔρχεται Μειδίας... καὶ καταλαμβάνει τὸν Στράωνα ἀπὸντ' ἤδη, τὴν ἔρημον δεδωκότα. τὸ μὲν οὖν πρῶτον οἶός τ' ἦν πείθειν αὐτὸν, ἦν καταδεδιητήκει, ταύτην ἀποδεδιημένην ἀποφείρειν.

ἐρημος in Attic has usually two terminations only: hence ἐρήμους δίκας, which was perhaps preferred to ἐρήμας δίκας on grounds of euphony. In § 6 however we find ἐρήμην κατεδιητήσασθε, possibly to avoid the ambiguity arising from the ellipse of δίκην, and in § 31 we have ἐρήμην μου καταδεδιηται τοιαύτην ἐτέραν δίκην.

τὴν μὲν χιλίων] The same suit is described in § 31 (quoted in last note) as similar to the suit in which this speech is spoken. The damages in the latter are also fixed at 1000 drachmae, § 25.

Καλλικράτην] On the part taken in these lawsuits by Callicrates, the brother of the plaintiff Callicles, see A. Schaefer, Dem. und seine Zeit III 2, p. 254 note.

§§ 3—7. (My opponents bring an action for damages on the ground that the building of a wall enclosing my property has stopped a water-course, and thus diverted the drainage of the surrounding hills on to the property of the plaintiff on the opposite side of the road.)

In answer to all their arguments, I have simply to plead that my father built that wall fifteen years before his death, without any objection, formal or informal, on the part of the plaintiff's family, who are now attempting to take advantage of my youth and inexperience.

γὰρ] See note on Or. 53 § 4. —ὁ πατήρ, sc. Teisias § 5.—μικροῦ δεῖν πρὶν, 'almost before' (i.e. 'a very short time after') I was born; not 'within a little before,' 'just before.'

Καλλιππίδου τοῦ τούτων πατρὸς] The two sons Καλλικλῆς and Καλλικράτης bear names similar to their father's, Καλλιππίδης, all three being compounds of κάλλος. 'Thus we have Ναυσίφιλος Ναυσικίου, and Καλλιστράτος Καλλικράτους. So also brothers' names sometimes varied but slightly, as Diodotus and Diogeiton' (Becker's Charicles p. 220 Eng. ed.). Cf. part i p. 136.

ἀνδρὸς ἥδη] Having attained to man's estate and being resident at Athens, Callicles might have brought an action long ago, if he felt himself aggrieved. P.]

4. ἐπιβιόντος] Here, and elsewhere (Or. 41 §§ 18, 19; Plat. Rep. 615 c, Aeschin. 1 § 5) the mss give the incorrect form -βιούντος, instead of the true form of the aorist participle, -βιώντος. The corresponding indicative occurs in § 32 ἐπεβίω, and Thuc. ii 65 (of Pericles) ἐπεβίω δύο ἔτη καὶ μῆνας ἕξ καὶ ἐπειδὴ ἀπέθανεν κ.τ.λ. The first person ἐπεβίω is naturally rare, as the aorist of this verb is mainly applicable to those who are no longer living; but Thuc. v 26 has ἐπεβίω διὰ παντὸς (τοῦ πολέμου). In Attic Greek ἐβίω, like βιώσμαι, βεβίωκα and βεβιωμένος, is used to supplement the defects of ζῆν, which is itself hardly used except in the present and imperfect active. ζῆσω is very rare. (See Cobet, variae lect. p. 610.)

καίτοι—ὕδατα πολλάκις ἐγένετο] 'and yet of course it often rained then, just as it does now,'—a touch of quiet humour characteristic of this speech. (ὕδωρ γενέσθαι literally refers to rain, though floods are implied as a necessary consequence. Ar. Vesp. 265 δέχεται...ὕδωρ γενέσθαι κάπνισσεν βόρειον αὐτοῖς.)

εἴπερ ἡδίκηει] (As he would have done) if my father was wronging any one... (But he did not prevent him; and not only so,) but &c. P.]

ἀπηγόρευσε] 'forbade.' In Classical Greek, ἀγορεύω and its compounds are seldom found except in the present and imperfect tenses; the remaining tenses and the verbal derivatives being generally borrowed from ἐρῶ, εἶπον, εἴρηκα, εἴρημαι, ἐρρήθην, ῥηθήσομαι, with ῥῆσις, ῥητός, ῥητέον. Thus ἀναγορεύω (to proclaim) has for its imperfect ἀνηγόρευον, while the correct forms for the other parts are, ἀνερῶ, ἀνείρηκα, ἀνείπον, ἀνερρήθην and ἀνάρρησις &c., instead of ἀναγορεύσω... ἀναγόρευσις &c. The strict rule, however, as to this verb and its compounds, has its exceptions, in the case of προσαγορεύω (e.g. προσαγορευθῆ 40 § 1), and partially also in ἀπαγορεύω. Thus instead of the more usual ἀπεῖπεν, we here find ἀπηγόρευσε, which also occurs in Dem. Or. 40 § 44 ἀπηγόρευσε αὐτῷ μὴ διαιτᾶν and Arist. Oecon. π 24: Plat. Theaet. p. 200 ἀπαγορεύσης. In Ar. Pax 107 we have καταγορεύση. (See Cobet's variae lectiones p. 35—39 and novae lectiones p. 778; Mnemosyne n.s. π p. 127; also Veitch, Greek Verbs p. 10, ed. 1871; Shilleto on Fals. Leg. p. 397, and Rutherford's New Phrynichus, p. 326.) διεμαρτύρατο] 'formally protested.' Or. 33 § 20 διαμαρτυρούμενον τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἐναντίον μαρτύρων, de Cor. § 28 μὴ σιγήσαι...ἀλλὰ βοᾶν καὶ διαμαρτύρεσθαι (ib. 143); Or. 42 § 28. It must not be confounded with διεμαρτύρησε, 'put in a διαμαρτυρία' (see Meier and Schömann, p. 842 Lips.).

5. ἐξῆν] As usual, without ἄν. See note on ἐχρῆν Or. 45 § 17, followed, as here, by ἵνα with the indicative.

ὑμῖν] 'You and yours,' i.e. your father, your brother and (when at home, and not at Athens § 3) yourself. ὑμεῖς never stands for σύ, and it has been shown elsewhere that the passages quoted from Isocrates to prove the contrary will not bear examination (Isocr. ad Dem. § 2). So also, in Eur. Bacch. 252 ἀναίνομαι πάτερ | τὸ ἀποικοδομουμένην τὴν χαράδραν, ἐλθοῦσιν εὐθὺς ἀγανακτεῖν καὶ λέγειν πρὸς τὸν πατέρα, “Τεισία, τί ταῦτα ποιεῖς; ἀποικοδομεῖς τὴν χαράδραν; εἴτ’ ἐμπεσεῖται τὸ ὕδωρ εἰς τὸ χωρίον τὸ ἡμέτερον”· ἢ εἰ μὲν ἐβούλετο παύσασθαι, μηδὲν ὁ ἡμῖν ἦν δυσγῆρας ὑμῶν εἰσορῶν νοῦν οὐκ ἔχον, the plural ὑμῶν refers to Cadmus and Teiresias, not to the former only. Again in Homer, Odys. xii 81, we have ἡπερ ἂν ὑμεῖς νῆα παρὰ γλαφυρὴν ἰθύνετε, φαίδιμ’ Ὀδυσσεῦ, where ὑμεῖς refers to Odysseus and his comrades.

In Latin however the rule is perhaps less strictly kept, and vester appears to be used for tuus in Catullus 71, 3 aemulus iste tuus qui vestrum exercet amorem, probably the only instance of this exceptional use of plural for singular. The rule is only apparently broken in Virg. Aen. ix 525 vos, o Calliope, precor, aspirate canenti. Here vos refers to all the Muses, though Calliope alone is mentioned. (Cf. Aen. i 140 vestras, Eure, domos.) So too Cicero pro Deiot. § 29 vos vestra secunda fortuna, Castor, non potestis sine propinquorum calamitate esse contenti? (The plural vos is at once explained by felix ista domus in the previous sentence.)

τί ταῦτα ποιεῖς;] ‘What are you about?’ lit. ‘why are you doing this?’ ‘Are you cutting off the water-course?’

ἀποικοδομεῖς] ἀντὶ τοῦ ἀποφράττεις ἀπολαβὴν τινα (?) οἰκοδομήματι· Δημοσθένους ἐν τῷ πρὸς Καλλικλέα. The above explanation from Harpocration, with the awkward τινά, does not entirely suit this passage, though he specially refers to this speech. But in Thuc. i 134, we read of Pausanias, ἐνδον ὄντα τηρήσαντες αὐτὸν καὶ ἀπολαβόντες εἰσω ἀπωκοδόμησαν, and it seems likely that the lexicographer, or his transcribers, either had that passage itself in view, or carelessly incorporated into an explanation of Demosthenes the note of some previous expositor of Thucydides.

ἢ α...ἦν] Cf. Or. 36 § 47; Goodwin's Moods and Tenses § 44, 3 (§ 333, ed. 1889). As an exact parallel to the whole of this sentence, we have Or. 28 § 5 ἐχρῆν (like ἐξῆν, supra)...

The latter makes quite as good sense as the former; if we lose the antithesis between ὁ μάρτυς and τοὺς ῥαδίως μαρτυροῦντας, we gain the contrast between the father who would certainly have held his own, and the son whose youth and inexperience are held fair game by the plaintiff's party (τηλικούτου—καταπεφρονήκατε). ῥαδίως] 'only too readily,'

If we retain the doubtful words at the beginning of § 7, the argument in favour of τούτους is yet stronger, and τούτοις is then still less defensible. ('melior vulgata lectio, τούτους, μάργυρας scilicet,' Seager, Classical Journal, 1825, no. 61 p. 63.)

8. οὐθ'...τε] Or. 54 § 26, Madv. Gk. Synt. § 208.

ἡμέτερον ἴδιον] 'our own private property,' stronger than ἡμέτερον. So in § 13.—The grammarian Priscian, who curiously regards ἴδιος as an exact equivalent to the Latin suus, has the following remark: quod mirum est, hoc ipsum[id est τὸ ἴδιον] etiam primae et secundae adiungitur personae apud illos ut Ἰσαῖος ἐν τῷ πρὸς Εὐκλείδην: οὐκ ἂν τὰ ἴδια τὰ ἑαυτοῦ (fragm. 60). Demosthenes ἐν τῷ πρὸς Πολυκλέα: οὐ περὶ τῶν ἐμῶν ἰδίων μᾶλλον τιμωρήσεσθε Πολυκλέα ἢ οὐχ ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν αὐτῶν καὶ ἐν τῷ αὐτῷ οὐ περὶ πλείονος ἐποιησάμην τὰ ἑαυτοῦ ἴδια ἢ τὰ ὑμέτερα (Dem. Or. 50 §§ 66, 63). ἐν δὲ τῷ πρὸς Καλλικλέα περὶ χωρίου βλάβης: τὸ μὲν γὰρ χωρίον—ἡμέτερον ἴδιον εἶναι. Philo-nichus ποαστρίαις: ὥσπερ ἐμοῦ αὐτῆς ἴδιον, pro quo ius dicimus 'meum proprium,' et 'tuum proprium.' dicitur tamen etiam 'suum proprium illius,' ut non putetur abundare 'suum,' sed indubitabilem discretionem significare. Priscian, Instit. p. 1089—90.

τοῖς εἰδόσι...τοῖς ἴσοις] § 35 ἐτοίμοι ἡμεῖς ἐπιτρέπειν τοῖς εἰδόσιν, ἴσοις καὶ κοινοῖς. Or. 40 § 39 ἐπιτρέπειν...δαιτητῇ ἴσφ. On 'private arbitrators' see note on Or. 54 § 26 ἡ δαίτα.

In the present instance, the consent of the speaker's opponents was essential, and he insists (for all they urge to the contrary) that it was to their refusal that the failure of his attempt to secure an amicable settlement must be ascribed.

προσέχετε—τὸν νοῦν] 'I implore the jury, in the name of all that's sacred, to give me their best attention.' The earnestness of this appeal (πρὸς Διὸς καὶ τῶν θεῶν) is explained by the fact that unless the jury clearly understood the topographical details which here follow, the remainder of the speech would be almost unintelligible, and what applies to the original hearers holds equally good for the modern reader. The defendant has just informed the court that an actual inspection of the premises would have been decisive in his favour. He therefore naturally endeavours to compensate for that disadvantage by giving his audience a distinct description of the relative situation of the properties of the contending parties. [In modern courts a map or plan made by a surveyor would be produced. P.]

§§ 10, 11. The estate of my opponents is separated from my own by a public road, and both are surrounded by a tract of mountainous country. Thus, the drainage from the hills flows partly into our properties, partly on to the road, and in the latter case, it is either carried down the road itself, or, if anything stops its course, it inundates the properties. On one occasion, the water made an inroad into what was subsequently my father's property, and, owing to neglect, made further inroad. Accordingly my father, on coming into possession, built this wall to protect his lands from the encroachments of his neighbours as well as from the inroad of the water.

τοῖς χωρίοις] This can hardly be taken with περιέχοντος κύκλῳ, which would require an accusative, nor again with καταρρέον, as we should then expect τὸ τοῖς χωρίοις καταρρέον ὕδωρ, which indeed is actually printed in Reiske's Index Græcitatibus (with the explanation 'id est els τὰ χωρία'). Reiske's erroneous quotation may account for this passage being cited in Liddell and Scott as an instance of καταρρεῖν 'c. dat. to rush down to a place' (corrected in ed. 7, 1883).

on account of the repetition of τὰ χωρία in the same sentence), or, better still, to understand it as a kind of dativus incommodi. In the latter case we might render as follows: 'between their property and mine there is a road; a hilly district encircles both; and unfortunately for the properties the water that flows down runs (it so happens) partly into the road, partly into the properties.'

[I should regard χωρίους as the dative in relation to position; 'as these farms have mountains enclosing them on every side.' P.]

καὶ δὴ καὶ] 'and in particular.' After making a general reference to τὸ καταρρέον ὕδωρ, the speaker narrows his description to the water which runs down the road. In the next section, again, καὶ δὴ καὶ limits the subject still further to the water which on a special occasion made inroad into his own property.

ἥ ἂν εὐδοῇ] 'wherever it has a free course.' Arist. gen. anim. I 18 ρεῖ σπον ἂν εὐδοῇσῃ τοῦ σώματος, and (as a passive in

ἥ ἂν ἐνστῇ τι] 'wherever anything stands in the way,' 'any obstacle intervenes.' Plat. Phaedo, 77 B ἔτι ἐνέστηκεν (in-stat, obstat) τὸ τῶν πολλῶν (of an objection in argument, ἐνστάσις).

τηνικαῦτα κ.τ.λ.] 'why! there-upon it must of course overflow the properties.' τηνικαῦτα, though almost always used of time, occasionally (as here after ἥ, which indicates place) bears a more general meaning, 'in that case,' 'under these circumstances.'

11. ἀμεληθὲν] It seems best to regard this as an accusative neuter absolute ('neglect having ensued'), and not to take it with τὸ ὕδωρ, much less with αὐτὸ, i.e. τὸ χωρίον. So in Plat. Phaedr. 265 D ὀρισθὲν 'it having been defined.' Or. 50 (Polycl.) § 12 προσταχθέν. (Kühner § 487, 3, and Goodwin's Moods and Tenses § 110. 2 = § 851, ed. 1889.)

In translating, we can best bring out the sense by reserving ἀμεληθὲν to a later point in the English sentence, and ἀλλ' ἀνθρώπου δυσχεραίνοντος ὅλως τοῖς τόποις καὶ μᾶλλον ἀστικοῦ, δις καὶ τρεῖς ἐμβαλὼν τὸ ὕδωρ τά τε χωρὶ ἐλυμήνατο καὶ μᾶλλον ὠδοποιεῖ. διὸ δὴ ταῦθ' ὁ πατὴρ ὁρῶν, ὡς ἐγὼ τῶν εἰδότην ἀκούω, καὶ τῶν γειτόνων ἐπινεμόντων ἅμα καὶ βαδιζόντων rendering the clause οὕτω... ἔχοντος as though it contained the principal verb. Thus: 'now my father was not yet in possession of the property, but a man who disliked the neighbourhood and preferred town life; accordingly neglect ensued, and the water overflowed several times, damaged the land, and was making further inroad.'—For ὠδοποιεῖ, cf. supra § 10, εὐδογῇ.

[By μᾶλλον ὠδοποιεῖ, the speaker wishes to show how the rain had made a way for itself almost amounting to a χαράδρα, though he denies the existence of any recognised χαράδρα by the road-side in § 16. P.]

τῶν γειτόνων—χωρίου] 'as the neighbours also (ἅμα) encroached and trespassed on the property.' ἐπινέμειν and ἐπινόμια are specially used of turning cattle on to a neighbour's land for pasture. Hence the metaphorical use of the word in Aesch. Ag. 485 πιθανὸς ἄγαν ὁ θῆλυς ὄρος ἐπινέμεται ταχύπορος. Among other words compounded with ἐπὶ and used of encroachments on the debateable borderland of two countries, or on the boundaries of adjacent properties, we have ἐπεργάζεσθαι and ἐπεργασία.

In Plato's Laws (pp. 843—4) there is a long and interesting passage, in which the annoyances caused by neighbours are dwelt upon, and suggestions made for legal remedies. We transcribe those portions only which illustrate the clause before us, and indeed the speech in general. p. 843 B βλάβαι πολλαὶ καὶ μικραὶ γειτόνων γιγνόμεναι, διὰ τὸ θαμίζειν ἔχθρας ὅγκον μέγαν ἐντίκτουςαι, χαλεπήν καὶ σφόδρα πικρὰν γειτονίαν ἀπεργάζονται. διὸ χρὴ πάντως εὐλαβεῖσθαι γείτονα γείτονα μηδὲν ποιεῖν διάφορον, τῶν τε ἄλλων περὶ καὶ δὴ καὶ ἐπεργασίας ξυμπάσης σφόδρα διευλαβούμενον... ὅς δ' ἂν ἐπεργάζεται τὰ τοῦ γείτονος ὑπερβαίνων τοὺς ὄρους, τὸ μὲν βλάβος ἀποτινέτω, τῆς δὲ ἀναιδείας ἅμα καὶ ἀνελευθερίας ἔνεκα ἰατρευόμενος διπλάσιον τοῦ βλάβους ἄλλο ἐκτισάτω τῷ βλαφθέντι... καὶ ἐάν τις βοσκήματα ἐπινέμῃ, τὰς βλάβας (ἀγρονόμοι) ὁρῶντες κρινόντων καὶ τιμώντων.

See esp. Donaldson's New Cratylus § 174, where this class of words is discussed. He apparently understands ἐπινέμειν in this passage to refer to a 'common trespass'; but this is sufficiently expressed by βαδιζόντων διὰ τοῦ χωρίου, and it is therefore better to give ἐπινεμόντων that special application to the 'encroachment of cattle' which it constantly bears.

αἵμασιαν] Never used in the sense of a 'hedge,' but always of a 'wall of dry stones.' In Odys. xviii 359 and xxiv 224—230 αἵμασις λέγων is explained in a scholium, οἰκοδομῶν ἐκ συλλεκτῶν λίθων, and Hesychius paraphrases the word τὸ ἐκ πολλῶν λίθων λογάδων ἀθροισμα. Thus in Theocr. i 45, a boy watching a vineyard is described as sitting ἐφ' αἵμασιαισί, and in v 93 we have roses growing in beds beside the garden-wall, ῥόδα τῶν ἀνδρῶν παρ' αἵμασιαισί πεφύκει. Cf. Plat. legg. 881 α περιβόλους αἵμασιώδεις τινάς, τευχῶν ἐρύματα.

In Bekker's Anecdota Graeca p. 356, we have the definition, τὸ ἐκ χαλίκων ὑποδομημένον τεῖχος, where the next few words, κυρίως δὲ τοῖς ἡκανθωμένοις λέγεται φραγμοῖς, show that such walls were sometimes topped with thorns (Odys. xiv 10 αὐλὴν ..δείματο...ρυτοῖσιν λάεσσιν καὶ ἐθρίγκωσεν ἀχέρδω, cf. xxiv 230), just as in England rough stone walls are frequently finished off with furze and other prickly shrubs. The Greek peasants still give the name αἵμασις to the walls built to support the artificial terraces of earth on the hillsides of the Morea (Ross, Archaeologische Aufsätze, II 500).

§§ 12—15. The plaintiff contends I have damaged his estate by obstructing the water-course. In reply, I shall prove that what he calls a water-course is no such thing, but really part of our own ground, for it has fruit-trees growing in it, which were planted before my father built the enclosure, and it contains a burial-place, made before we acquired the property.

All this is in evidence, gentlemen, as also the fact that the wall was built while the plaintiff's father was still alive, and without any protest on the part of my opponents or the rest of my neighbours.

βλάπτειν μ' αὐτόν] The order of words, (1) the infinitive, (2) the subject, (3) the object, is exactly parallel to that in Or. 54 § 31 μὴ πατάξαι Κόνων' Ἀριστωνα.

δημοσίων ᾠκοδομοῦμεν] In this conditional sentence, we have one apodosis ἡδικοῦμεν ἂν, corresponding to a double protasis. The second protasis εἰ...ᾠκοδομοῦμεν reiterates the first with a slight change of idea. The supposition stated at the beginning of the sentence is thus re-stated with some slight redundancy at the end, and reaches the hearer in two parts, which enter his mind separately and there unite. So in Plat. Phaedo 67 ε εἰ φοβοῦντο καὶ ἀγανακτοῖεν, οὐ πολλὰ ἂν λόγια εἴη,...εἰ μὴ ἄσμενοι ἐκέισε τοῖεν. The idiom may be illustrated by the effect upon the brain of the double images of external objects entering the eyes separately and subsequently uniting. Numerous varieties of construction, of which the present is a single instance, are grouped under the general heading of

τίς...θάπτειν;] The telling question, 'who would think of burying his ancestors in a water-course?' (a question seriously put, unless perhaps we ought to take it as one of the touches of humour characteristic of this speech), is of course not meant to apply to all the tombs subsequently mentioned (§ 14). Some of them were there even before the land came into the speaker's possession.

14. καὶ γὰρ...καί] 'for not only...but.' A frequent idiom, though one but little observed. P.]

15. ἀρ'] We should expect ἀρ' οὐχ, which, like nonne, distinctly implies an affirmative answer. But ἀρα is not unfrequently used alone, to denote a simple interrogation, the context showing whether a negative or, as here, an affirmative reply is expected. Xen. Cyr. iv 6 § 4 ἀρα βέβληκα δις ἐφεξῆς; (L and S).

μνήματα...τινὰ] Not μνήματα παλαιὰ as before. The description is made as general as possible to show that the piece of ground in question had all the essential characteristics of private property.—τᾶλλ' ἅπερ] The speaker does not specify what is included in this et cetera, but the depositions probably went into further detail.

§§ 16—18. The plaintiff speaks of the stoppage of a water-course. Now, firstly, I don't suppose that in the whole of Attica there is such a thing as a water-course by the side of a public road. The water would naturally flow down the road and a water-course would be quite unnecessary. Next, no one surely would think of allowing water passing down the highway to flow into his own land; on the contrary, he would of course dam it off, if it ever made in-road.

Now the plaintiff wants me to let the water flow into my own land, and to turn it off into the road again after it has passed his property. Why then, the owner next below my neighbour opposite will complain. In short, if I take the water from off the road, I cannot let it out again either into the road or into my neighbours' properties. And no other course is open to me; for I presume the plaintiff won't compel me to drink it up.

οἶμαι — ἐποίησέ τις;] The speaker, after asking whether any of his audience has ever seen or even heard of a water-course running by the side of a public way, takes upon himself to declare that he does not believe there is anything of the kind in the whole of Attica. The startling character of this assertion, which could hardly have been untrue, is only equalled by the delightful frankness with which he assigns the reason. 'What could induce any one,' he asks, 'to make a channel through his private grounds for water, which, if let alone, would be sure to flow down along the public road?' The passage is singularly suggestive on the state of the mountain roads of Attica. The public road, so called, would in numbers of cases be little better than the path of a mountain-torrent, which might be used in dry weather for purposes of transit, but in very wet seasons would revert to the possession of the waters. In the days of Demosthenes many of the mountain roads were, we presume, not much better than those of modern Attica, as described with perfect accuracy in Edmond About's lively book on Greek brigandage, Le Roi des Montagnes:

"I crossed at a leap the Eleusinian Cephissus . . . One hundred paces further on, the road was lost in a wide and deep ravine, hollowed by the rains of two or three thousand winters. I supposed with some show of justice that the ravine must be the road, for I had noticed in my previous excursions that the Greeks dispense with making a road wherever the water has been kind enough to take that duty on itself. In this country, where man but slightly thwarts the laws of nature, the torrents are royal roads, the rivers turnpike-roads, the rivulets cross-country roads. Storms do the office of highway engineers, and the rain is an inspector who keeps up without any control the means of communication, great and small" (p. 45 = p. 42 Eng. transl. 1862).

[We must remember that road-making, as we have it, is a modern art, and that the want of roads is still the cause of backward civilisation and commerce in many countries. The hollow or sunken lanes, common in many parts of England, are caused by the excavating power of water running along tracks. The Romans raised their roads (viam muniere) apparently to avoid this. As an illustrative passage, we may quote Iliad xxiii 420 ῥωχμὸς ἔην γαλῆς, ἣ χειμέριον ἄλῃν ὄδῳ ἐξέρρηξεν ὁδοῖο, βάθυνε δὲ χώρον ἅπαντα. ἀποφράττειν καὶ παροικοδομεῖν] 'dam and wall it off.' The former implies an abrupt cutting off of the water by a transverse dam athwart the stream; the latter probably expresses a wall built parallel to the stream to narrow its course.

his farm also, lest it should come in from the road. It is clear that the defendant's farm, on one side of the road (§ 10), extended considerably beyond that of the plaintiff Callicles on the other. For he says that, if bound to carry it beyond one farm, he was bound to carry it beyond a second or a third, before he allowed it to re-enter the public road. P.]

The context is decisive and the margin of the Paris ms has ἐγκαλέσει, pointing to the same conclusion, though the note seems due to a copyist who did not recognise in ἐγκαλεῖ the regular Attic future. In Or. 23 (Aristocr.) § 123, we have ἐγκαλέσουσιν; so also in Or. 19 § 133. The simple verb καλῶ hardly ever (Cobet says, never) has any other future than καλῶ (var. lect. 28, 29).

ἀτιμήτους φεύγω δίκας] 'am sued for a fixed penalty,' 'am put on my trial in law-suits where the damages are already assessed by law.' The plural refers to the fact that the speaker has been sued by Callicrates as well as by Callicles (§ 2).

δίκη τιμητὸς means 'a suit to be assessed,' i.e. 'a suit in which the penalty or damages have not been determined by law.' δίκη ἀτίμητος means the opposite; 'a suit not to be assessed,' i.e. a suit in which the penalty has already been fixed by law.

ἐφ' ᾧ τίμημα ὠρισμένον ἐκ τῶν νόμων οὐ κεῖται, ἀλλὰ τοὺς δικαστὰς ἔδει τιμᾶσθαι ὃ τι χρή παθεῖν ἢ ἀποτίσαι· ὃ δὲ ἀτίμητος τούναντίον ᾧ πρόσεστιν ἐκ τῶν νόμων ὠρισμένον τίμημα, ὡς μηδὲν δεῖν τοὺς δικαστὰς διατιμῆσαι. Αἰσχίνης κατὰ Κτησιφῶντος (§ 210), Δημοσθένης κατὰ Μειδίου (§ 90). Cf. Or. 37 § 40.

Again Pollux (viii 63) has: ἀτίμητος δὲ δίκη, ἣν οὐκ ἔστιν ὑποτιμῆσασθαι ἀλλὰ τοσούτου τετιμῆται ὅσου ἐπιγέγραπται.

The above explanation is wrongly reversed by Suidas (quoted in Telfy's Corpus iuris Attici 747 note), by the Lexica Segueriana (on p. 202 and 469 of Bekker's Anecdota Graeca), and even in a scholium on § 25 infra, χιλίων δραχμῶν δίκην ἀτίμητον φεύγω, a passage which is decisive in favour of Harpocration's distinction.

οὐ γὰρ ἐκπιεῖν—αὐτὸ προσαναγκάσει.] This passage is quoted by Aristides (II 470 in Spengel's Rhet. Graeci), δταν εἰς ἀσπον ἀπάγῃς τὸν λόγον, βαρύντητα ἐργασαι, ὡς ἐν τῷ πρὸς Καλλικλέα, οὐ γὰρ δὴ ἐκπιεῖν με αὐτὸ Καλλικλῆς ἀναγκάσει. The rhetorician recognises the force and effectiveness of the sentence, but fails to draw attention to its humour. It is also quoted by Aelian, Ep. 6 p. 18 Herocher, οὐ γὰρ δήπου κελεύεις ἡμᾶς ἐκπιεῖν αὐτό.

§ 19. Now had there been a water-course below my property, to take off the drainage, I might have been doing wrong in refusing to let the water into my land; but as it is, the water-course alleged is neither passed down to me by any neighbour immediately above me, nor is it passed down by myself to any one else below.

19. μὴ ὅτι—ἀλλὰ μὴ...ἀγαπήσαιμ' ἄν.] 'I must be content, I do not say, with obtaining a verdict, but with escaping conviction.' The sense is: 'victimised as I have been, instead of gaining legal satisfaction from my opponents, I must think myself fortunate if I am not convicted to pay them an additional penalty.'

εἰ μὲν γὰρ—παραλαμβάνουσιν ὡσαύτως.] In Plato's Laws provisions are suggested to prevent damage being incurred in times of heavy rain, either owing to neglect on the part of neighbours in providing an outlet for streams that pass down to them from the higher ground immediately adjacent, or again owing to careless transmission of the streams on the part of the neighbours higher up the hill:—

ἡδίκουν...μὴ δεχόμενος] Thus in the fens near Cambridge, an obligation lies on each tenant to clear out the ditch or dyke bounding his land on one side, and so to give free passage to the water from his neighbour's land. P.] Cf. the ius aquae ducendae which was one of the servitutes (or limiting obligations), under which property was held in Roman law.

ὁμολογούμεναι χαράδραι] 'recognised, acknowledged, undisputed water-courses.' A curious expression. The nearest approach to it that I can find is (Andoc.) Or. 4 § 17 οὐδὲν ἦττον τῶν ὁμολογουμένων δούλων.

drains,' 'gutters,' like ὕδρορροά Ar. Ach. 922. The word has lost all trace of its primary meaning 'a winter torrent.'

§ 20. The fact is, that simply owing to the plaintiff's own carelessness, he has suffered from a flood, as others have before him; and the strangest inconsistency of all is, that the plaintiff, while he himself brings to the spot large stones to dam off the water when it makes inroad, has actually brought against me a suit for damages, just because my father built a wall round his property with the very same object.

οὐδὲ πολλαπλάσια] So in § 35 the defendant speaks of his μικρὰ οὐσία.

§ 21. If all my neighbours were to treat me as the plaintiff has done, I should soon be a ruined man. But while the rest, who have had great losses, are content to bear their misfortune, my present opponents alone, who have lost nothing to speak of, are bringing against me a groundless action for damage entirely due to their own neglect.

21. πεπονθότες...βεβλαμμένων] cf. § 11 ὁρῶν...ἐπινεμόντων n.

τετολμήκασιν] τολμᾶν and its tenses are regularly used in Greek prose, while τλῆναι is almost entirely confined to Greek verse (note on Isoocr. Paneg. § 96 ἐτλησαν).—τοῦτο πράττειν=δικάζεσθαι.—πᾶσι sc. τοῖς ἄλλοις.

εἰ καὶ] Notwithstanding—even if—they have had some trifling losses. εἰ καὶ, without disputing the condition (here εἰ πεπόνθασιν), represents it as of little consequence. καὶ εἰ or καὶ ἐπὶ introducing a condition which is utterly improbable. Kühner § 378.

their own fault alone (by not damming off the water as I did), though they vexatiously threw the blame upon me.' The participle here is quite as emphatic as a principal verb.

ἐκεῖνοι—αἰτίαν ἔχουσιν] 'whereas the rest of my neighbours, not to mention any other point, at any rate are open to no such imputation as this.' With μηδὲν ἄλλο I understand διαφέρουσι, and I refer αἰτίαν ἔχουσι to αὐτοὶ δι' αὐτοὺς βεβλαμμένοι συκοφαντοῦσι. The imputation is συκοφαντία, bringing a vexatious charge when they are themselves to blame for want of precaution. Cf. next § τούτους μὲν μηδὲν ἐγκαλεῖν... τοιούτῳ δὲ συκοφαντεῖν.

['while the rest, however negligent they may have been, are at all events chargeable with nothing of this kind,' Kennedy. This seems to give the sense; but the precise ellipse with εἰ καὶ μηδὲν ἄλλο is obscure. P.]

αἰτίαν ἔχειν (except in Pl. Phaedo 101 c, where it means 'have you, i.e. do you know, any cause?') is nearly equivalent to δοῦσαν ἔχειν, 'to have the reputation (i.e. either the credit or the imputation) of...' It occurs in the better sense, 'to have the credit of,' in Isocr. de pace § 138 τούτων τῶν ἀγαθῶν τὴν αἰτίαν ἔχομεν. The worse sense, 'to be open to an imputation' (as here), is far more common (e.g. Lysias Or. 22 § 18, 10 § 28, 13 § 62). Both meanings are combined in Thuc. i 83 § 3 τῶν ἀποβαινόντων τὸ πλεον ἐπ' ἀμφοτέρα αἰτίας ἔχομεν (note on Isocr. Paneg. § 109). αἰτίαν ἔχειν is 'the usual passive of αἰτιάσθαι' (Wayte on Timocr. § 187).

§ 22. The plaintiff has himself done wrong by advancing his wall and thus narrowing the road, and by shooting his rubbish on to the road and thus raising its level.

22. δεινὸν... τούτους μὲν μηδὲν ἐγκαλεῖν... τοιούτῳ δὲ συκοφαντεῖν] The clause containing μὲν is coordinate with that containing δέ, but in English must be subordinate to it. 'Is it not atrocious, that, while my neighbours make no complaint..., the plaintiff brings a vexatious action against me?' The influence of δεινὸν affects the second clause in its contrast with the first. Dem. Lept. § 9 πῶς γὰρ τὴν τύχην στέργειν] στέργειν, in the sense of contented submission, usually has the dative with or without ἐν, e.g. Isocr. de pace § 6 στέργειν τοῖς παρούσι. The acc. however occurs again in § 30 infra, also in Hdt. ix 117 ἑσπερέαν τὰ παρεόντα, Eur. Phoen. 1685 τὰμ' ἐγὼ στέρξω κακά, Soph. Ant. 292, and Isocr. ad Dem. § 29 στέργε μὲν τὰ παρόντα ζητεῖ δὲ τὰ βέλτιστα.

ὅν] ὃν εἰσεσθε σαφέστερον... ὅτι αὐτὸς ἐξημάρτηκε. The subject of the subordinate here becomes the accusative of the principal sentence, and all the words down to συμβέβηκεν inclusive form an object-sentence to the principal verb εἰσεσθε. Lysias, Or. 20 § 34 οὐδ' οὕτω ἵστε εἶτε ἀγαθοὶ εἶτε κακοὶ... γενήσονται (Madvig, Gr. Synt. § 191. Kühner § 600 p. 1083).

χλῆδον] 'rubbish'; the word is only found in § 27 and in a fragment of Aeschylus quoted below. Harpocrations. v. χλῆδος: Δημοσθένης ἐν τῷ πρὸς Καλλικλέα περὶ χωρίου βλάβης· ἔπειτα δὲ τὸν χλῆδον ἐκβαλῶν ἐξ ὧν ὑψηλοτέραν καὶ στενωτέραν τὴν αὐτὴν ὁδὸν πεποιῆσθαι συμβέβηκεν. πάντῃ πλῆθος χλῆδος λέγεται καὶ ἐστὶν ὅλον σωρὸς τις, μάλιστα δὲ τῶν ἀποκαθαρμάτων τε καὶ ἀποψημάτων, καὶ ἡ τῶν ποταμῶν πρόσχωσις, καὶ πολὺ μᾶλλον τῶν χειμάρρων ὃ καὶ χεράδος καλεῖται (Iliad xxi 319). νῦν δὲ εἰκεν ὁ ῥήτωρ λέγειν ὅτι χοῦν καὶ φρυγανώδη τινα ἐκ τοῦ χωρίου σωρὸν ὁ Καλλικλῆς εἰς τὴν ὁδὸν ἐμβέβηκεν, ὥς καὶ αὐτὸς ἐξῆς ὑποσημαίνει. κέχρηται δὲ τῷ ὀνόματι πολλοί. 26. οἷ τ' ἄλλοι—ἐμοί] Cf. § 21 πολλῶν πολλὰ...βεβλαμμένων—πάντες—εἰώθατε. See § 17 init.

οὔτε βεβλαμμένων ἅ φασιν] βεβλαμμένων, not neuter, but masc. 'they have not incurred the damage they allege.' § 21 πολλῶν πολλὰ καὶ μεγάλα βεβλαμμένων.

27. χλῆδον] See note on § 22. ὄρκον ἐδίδουν] 'offered an oath' in the sense of 'proposed to administer an oath.' On ὄρκον διδόναι καὶ λαμβάνειν, see esp. Arist. Rhet. i 15 §§ 27—33.

If the plaintiff may enclose his land, we may enclose ours. If my father wronged you, by enclosing, you are just as much wronging me, for if you dam off the water, it will be swept back on my property and will throw down my wall. But I am not going to complain; I shall simply do my best to protect my land. The plaintiff shows his prudence in protecting his own property; but in prosecuting me, he only shows his villany and his infatuation.

τὰς βλάβας κομίζεσθαι] 'to

 monly with a genitive: but cf.

30. ἀποικοδομηθέντος] Genitive neuter absolute. We cannot understand either τοῦ ὕδατος or τοῦ χωρίου. Malim ἀποικοδομηθέν, says Dobree.—στέρξω, see § 22.

§§ 31, 32. The plaintiff's assurance in bringing false charges against me is only of a piece with his producing a forged document on a former occasion, when he prompted his cousin to claim my land. Apart from this, simply to spite me (§ 34), he has brought the same charge against my servant, Callarus, as against myself, though the servant could not have enclosed the land on his own responsibility.

Their interested motive is proved by the fact that, if I let them have my property, by purchase or exchange, then Callarus is at once held to be doing them no wrong; if I refuse, they make themselves out to be grievously wronged by him, and try to get an award or a compromise which will secure them my estate.

§§ 33, 34. Now if conspiracy and paltry persecution are to win the day, my words are merely wasted. But if you detest such conduct and intend to give a just verdict on the ground that neither my father nor my servant has done any damage or wrong to the plaintiff, then I have already said enough.

§ 35. Lastly, I entreat the jury not to sacrifice me to my opponents, when I have done them no wrong. It is not so much the penalty that I care for, hard though that is for a poor man to pay; but they want to turn me out of the parish by their petty persecution. To prove we were in the right, we were ready to submit to a fair arbitration, and to swear the customary oath; for we felt that that would be the strongest argument with you, gentlemen, who are yourselves upon your solemn oath.

τὸν νόμιμον ὄρκον] The defendant appears to have offered to take an oath in the ἀντωμοσία at the ἀνάκρισις, or preliminary examination. Such an oath might be taken by either of the parties, with a view to decide the cause, or some particular point in dispute. But it was only taken by the consent of the adversary, upon a challenge given and accepted (C. R. Kennedy in Dict. Antiq.). Cf. Or. 54 § 40 ἠθέλησα ὁμόσαι ταυτί. Aristot. Rhet. i 15 §§ 27—33.
